So, what you are saying is that many antennas, with poor ground characteristics, utilize the shield of the coax as the "ground radial"?

Ok, I'll buy that, but you do realize that this setup will make the antenna SWR extrememly difficult to tune, as the placement of the coax now becomes somewhat critical. Not to mention the problem of the coax shield becoming "hot" and causing all sorts of RF feedback problems.

I understand that marine antennas use a tuned stub, and a fixed length of coax, as part of the impedence matching network. The application, in this case, is obvious. But there is no reason to do this on an antenna designed to be used on a metallic vehicle.

The ground plane has me still confused. How does anything ground to paint?
I know the magnet will not stick to plastic. I was hoping to 'clamp' it on.
I can not use a window,trunk or mirror mount. I am not ready to drill holes yet. I am just a beginner looking to aviod scratching the heck out of a new vehicle. Thanks for your help.

Jim;
True, a 1/4 wave whip isn't 50 ohms, closer to 34 ohms. Mount 2 of them 1/4 wave apart, feed them in phase. The mutual impedance for them drops to around 23 ohms. Feed them with a 1/4 wave of 50 coax, which will raise the impdedance to around 100 ohms. You can then feed the in parallel. As you stated there lots of ways to do it, but 50 ohm coax would work in this case.
I think you see quite a few co-phased antennas being fed with 75 ohm coax based on the assumption that they are 50 ohm antennas.

Thanks Jim

The antenna doesn't 'ground' to paint. It 'grounds' to the metal underneath the paint through capacitive coupling. The magnet acts as one plate of a capacitor, the metal under the paint as the other plate of a capacitor.
That
'capacitor' is what 'connects' the antenna to ground.

val old buddy.......i am glad you are here........let's get down to it shall we? first off pal.........i want to ask you why your country is selling dual use technology to the iraqis........knowing full well their intentions.......i mean what purpose is there for vx gas, nerve gas, weapons's grade anthrax.......etc. etc..........and why do you continue to sell the iraqis nuclear technology stuff??? and for what its worth.....if one american soldier dies because of some crap that france sold the iraqis, i think we should lay one right in your lap froggie.....and that is what i think.....so much for liberty.....punk.....

Get rid of the "rubber duck" antenna. They are horribly inefficient for the CB frequencies. A better alternative would be a center loaded telescopic whip (Radio Shack used to sell them), that you could fit to the connector in place of the rubber duck. Yes, it's bit more awkward than the 'duck, but it will work a lot better.

An even better alternative, would be to connect to either a mobile (If you're in a car) or base (In a house) antenna, and watch that handheld really come to life.

The metal in the base of the magnet mount antenna, the paint, and the metal in the roof form a capacitor at RF. This capacitively couples the "ground" side of the antenna to the metal in the vehicle.

> I know the magnet will not stick to plastic. I was hoping to 'clamp' it on.

If you clamp an antenna to plastic, you will still need to run a ground wire to something metal.

If the roof is metal (which I'm pretty sure it is), just stick a magnet mount antenna (Wilson 1000 is a good starting antenna) as close to the center of the roof as you can, run the coax in, set the SWR, and call it good.

Hope that helps.

Jim,
I always assume that something brought in to be repaired has two problems. The first is the cause and effect of the original failure. The second problem (more often worse than the first) is what the person who had the cover off before it was brought in screwed up.
I always assume every adjustment has probably been tweek'd, the filter caps have no bleeder resistors (wont tell you why I assume that, but you can guess... took my hair 7 months to straighten out), the fuse is the wrong size (most often replaced with 20 amp).
I assume the mic cable has poor/no shielding, the coax connectors are not made/soldered very well, the control pots are crunchy, the final tube bias adjustment is off, the rig needs the dust blown out, the rust stains were caused by animal pee, the cig smell comes from the owners 2 pack a day habit, the antenna system has a problem, the linear is not...
Your results will probably vary...

Feedback? Hot? Now you're getting it.

There can be reasons. You just said it yourself (feedback,hot) This can occur in a less than perfect installation. Seeing how perfect does not exist in the real world then why not consider imperfection into your design?

As I have said many times before.....Isn't 18 feet a length contained within the parameters of any length will do? If so then why not use it?

Or is it as someone else said.....Any length will do as long as it's not 18 feet?

If both antennas were a same type, of which the coax length doesn't matter, the received signals at X distance should be similar.

If you cut the length of coax used with the A.S. or Motorola "broadbands" type, the preformance would be modified. That length change might result in bandwidth reduction or a change in radiation angle or other combinations thereof.

You sure that's not "Enquiring..?"

Probably no noticeable difference. The only time the coax length might make a noticeable difference in the transmitted signal strength is when some sort of antenna current flows on the coax shield. This may occur to one degree or another if the coax termination doesn't completely decoupled itself into the antenna, or if the routing of the coax induces current. If this happens and your radio has SWR protection circuitry then the power output of your radio may be reduced by the protection circuitry. If the power is reduced then the signal will be too.

What case wouldn't that be true? So I could need 18' of coax for tnom, what do you mean probably? the mobiles he said were identical sans coax length.

Skipp;
By A.S. you meant Antenna Specialist? Here is What they have to say about cutting the coax:

Yes, the coaxial cable can be cut without degrading performance.
Excess cable can be stored in any manner as long as the coiled cable does not exceed the minimum bend radius. Bend Radius = 10 x R.
Example: RG-58/U diameter = 0.2". Therefore, Coiling/Bending diameter

Probably is a term used to express a degree of chance.

The degree of chance is determined by evaluating the most likely variables in a given equation.. The most likely variables add up to no anticipated problems. When you have no anticipated problems when using the most likely variables it will become apparent that you should probably use the word probably, probably.

You can use it but it is certainly not "the only length" to use, as some of you guys are making it put to be. Why not use 15 feet?

> Or is it as someone else said.....Any length will do as long as it's not 18 feet?

Who said that?

Moped, the only kill file that works is called discipline, most of the people of this group have shown they must respond to comments, whether they say the person is killfiled or not. .
You can either read a post and not reply to it, or read a post and reply to it. The name on the post shouldn't matter it is the content. I don't use a kill file, I have the option to reply to a post or not.

yes I have noticed, he wants to learn off of web pages from companies who ar peddling a product. Why has he not gone to Antron 99's web page and asked them about thier antenna claims... I guess he will get around to it.

Well steve i wouldnt expect any different from you he doesn't like aaron, sparky, dwight or myself so he should get along fine with you guys.Oh and he is the one who started calling me george, I told him long ago he had been had, but he wants to think he has some psychic ablilty to know who people are so i think he is either a drunk from the sounds of him. As far as him being schizoid his ip addres has bene tied to jicon, and a few others. yet he hasnt posted here in a year ... Yeah Ok and my name is george bush

I provided websites. You provided nothing. You only provide: "Go read the ARRL book". If you have this damn book, quote it, for Pete's sake.

Only a twit like yourself would say websites offer nothing. Most get their info from where it all began, BOOKS. Websites don't use a separate law of physics or theories. It's all the same.

Websites can claim whatever they wish, what laws of physics ids firestick writing these days?
How about those shackespere marine antennas you were trying to push that web site on us, what does that have to do with mobile cb's ? kinda like calling them shoelaces huh.

Ninnie, what were you saying about Wilsons claims before?

First off, it's not Ninnie.. it's Vinnie.. Although he's not been very accepting of the factual information that's been presented to him, and although he argues with everything everyone tells him, he still deserves at least that modicum of respect. No need to change names or be insulting.

and as for /dev/null, it's a "device" file on most, if not all, UNIX systems, which operates essentially as a bitbucket, trashcan, the void, etc. In other words... it's "null"

It's the same as placing someone on /ignore in IRC.

Is the Silverado the same design as the Chevy pick up trucks? If it is I have a mount that mounts under the hood near the AM/FM antenna you can put a CB antenna on.

CB depends on price and size. E mail me direct @ truth@planetc.com and I'll give you some ideas.

Yep, it finally happened. CB HATER & basher N8Wimpy isn't the great commie that he purported to be on THIS NG.

Son of legendary Cleveland local NBC anchorman, Doug Adair, he wanted to be a BIG commie following in da da's footsteps. So He said "Too Lee Do" was the place to be, so he loaded up poor da da, and moved to Too Lee Doo Dee !

But, it seems that he sinned against communism, Hambo style.
Hey--isn't that worse than a regular CB sinner against communism?
He won't ever be "DA MAN" !
Dave!!

Well, Mopar, if they are fed in phase (same length of coax from each to whatever feed), they will tend to transmit front and back (with some, but less, signal to the sides).

If you feed them in phase, same length of coax to each, the max radiation will be perpendicular to the antennas. Or front to back if mounted for example on a trucks mirrors. It won't be all that directional though.

Well Dave, one thing I mentioned later (after shutting my mouth and engaging the brain) is that a vertical over perfect ground (well, that 1/4 wave whip on an 18 wheeler is pretty darn close) will run in the low 30 ohm range. This does present an interesting problem which can be solved by using an impedance matching section of coax. The reality of things is that the typical ground plane at a base station will run around 50 ohms. It is not a perfect ground. Put a whip on a large hunk of metal (that 18 wheeler, for instance) or over salt water, and the impedance drops to the low 30 ohm range. At this point, the single whip will be running some noticeable SWR. Matching sections of coax can be used to bring this up to a more reasonable range. My error in thinking was to ignore the likelihood that many 1/4 wave whips will not exhibit 50 ohms resistive ;)

I used to help code on Phoenix.. if you don't know what that is, and I suspect with your unfamiliarity with UNIX systems you don't, it was one of the original protection/warscripts out there. Ported to several different clients, including BitchX (which is just an enhanced ripoff of the original "irc" client).

You might get better suggestions on rec.radio.amateur.antenna.

There's probably a few good suggestions out there, but without more information, it'd be difficult to make a suggestion.

Yes, but you can't have gain from an antenna in desired direction without sacrificing signal strength in another direction. And in the case of mounting them on a vehicle, you probably would benefit having more signal front to back.

Your vehicle isn't more than 8' long? I thought you were a keyclown, look at those suburbans the antennas go inline. The way the signal goes depending on phasing , phase it 135deg out, you have end fire(out the fron), phase it 90 deg out I believe it is, a figure 8 radiation pattern.

Ice, you may well be able to fashion a corner reflector using aluminum foil in a cardboard box! This will only work (obviously) if you are using this in a fixed location as it will be very directional. It will cost almost nothing (how much does a cardboard box and a few feet of aluminum foil cost?) and develop considerable gain. e-mail me direct if you want the dimensions at aa2qa@frontiernet.net

Not if done correctly, you can achieve theoreticaly 4.5 db gain with the proper phasing of 1/4 wave verticals. Let me get out that trusty ARRL Antenna Book, in case Ninnie wants, me to get technical.

isn't it amazing how these scumbags come here, go to school.....somehow stay in this country and then use our freedoms to further their own radical causes, which in many cases go against our best interest..???? take for instance this professor guy .....he quotes a man from america's past to try and change minds .....fine.....i say do as he says.....give the mofo death per his instructions....as he has many israelis i am sure...all the while hiding under the first ammendment.....listen,...the founding fathers never would have put up with this stuff.....constitution or no constitution.....they understood the concept of freedom and how it will only work when those that are free are sane and level headed.....also they understood that a government will work only when those that govern are honest and have the interest of the people first.....it is time to clean house on the arabs and send them back where they came from.....i think none of them are trustworthy.....it is a cultural thing.....a judeo christian society cannot peacefully coexist with the followers of mohammed.....it just will not happen.....you allow these types of people to continue to come here and flourish and you will see in this land something along the lines of kosevo and serbia.....the big cheeser is back quiet.....hey frenchy what do you have to say to that good buddy.....????

Yes, 8' or more is needed to really get any benefit. Center of the Drive sideways down the road ;) Of course, if you mount the things front and back, you also have an option not to feed them in phase. That will change directional pattern. Then again, one may be tuned lower and possibly used as a reflector - but then I've never messed with that stuff ...

That Maxon is a great little radio, just get a better antenna. I think it has a BNC connector, so it should be an easy task. The center loaded Radio Shack one(previously mentioned), if you can find one, would be the logical first choice.

Smokey, He insulted you first and I can guarantee will do it again, as you notice he has tried to deflect what he said to you and include me now, just a friendly warning.

Front mike, front speaker, weather, may fit a DIN opening fairly well.

And the same can be said for what Twisted has posted as well. It also means that just because the Rain Report mentioned "violations" does not imply there were violations in the final analysis. It wouldn't be the first time that the FCC had to rescind some action it took because it misunderstood the facts, or decided not to take any action at all.

What's your problem? After all this time that Twisted tries to put down my computer skills, and it comes down to the simple fact that he can't simply E-mail several people and ask a few simple questions? Same goes for you. Your arm broke or what? I could post everything I have and all that would happen is Twisted, or you, or somebody else would claim it was a "lie" and wouldn't believe it anyway. I already posted a summary of what the basic facts are, and predictably nobody believes it. So you're on your own. Either believe what I posted or dig up the same material for yourself.

The licensed operator of the repeater is just plain lucky.

> They're called open repeaters, as a rule.

Open repeaters are available for general use by any licensed Ham. A closed repeater is restricted in use by one or more authorized licensed Hams by the repeater owner / licensee. In both cases a control operator must be in control of the machine, period. Read Part 97 rules regarding repeater operations before you make any more mistakes.

> So I guess
> everyone has to close their repeaters to keep Doggie off.

Nobody has to close a repeater to keep any body off a machine. As shown clearly, by the was Billie Marshall (N8ORF) example, an individual Ham can be bared from using a repeater. If the don't stay off then the FCC is on their case.

Surprisingly most of the regular users of repeaters are General Class or higher. Also many of the machines are club operated. Also don't forget there are 10m repeaters, 6m repeaters, 1-1/4m repeaters, 70cm repeaters, 33cm repeaters, 23cm repeaters, ATV repeaters, and crossband repeaters. And in a few areas there are also linear translators as well for SSB.

A Tech Class licensee can easily work 10m too, legally, by using a crossband machine. An example here is the WD8DPA machines, in Ann Arbor Michigan, on 444.975 MHz + offset linked to the machine on 29.640 MHz.

And then there is satellite work that can be done as well. I've worked AO-40 a few times on SSB, 435 MHz uplink and 2.4 GHz downlink, and when the weather warms up I plan on doing more. I've also worked the FM bird UO-14 a few times mobile.

There are other things like fast scan TV, high speed networking, moon bounce etc, just to name a few more things that can be done. Its really funny to monitor HF and hear some of the old timers talk about how boring it is on HF. Their whole life was spent on HF and they never bothered to explore what can be done above 30 MHz because they got brain washed in to thinking that HF is all there was.

You like to poke fun at Tech's, but all you really do is demonstrate your ignorance of what can be done with a Tech license. Since all you mention is 2m it sure seems you don't have much of a clue about what Ham Radio has to offer with a Tech Class license.

It is very possible for them to be 50 ohms. Most of the short whips, less than a 1/4 wave in length, use either a loading coil somewhere or the whip is linearly loaded with a continuous spiral of wire, i.e. helix. The extra resistance due to skin effect of the loading coil adds directly in series with the 32 to 36 ohm resistance of your typical 1/4 wave ground plane. If the manufacture does it right they end up with a feed point of near 50 ohms.

If the antenna is not completely decoupled from the coax, i.e. some current flows on the outside of the coax, then the coax is part of the radiating section of the antenna. Any change in the coax position or length will affect the pattern. Ideally only current should flow on the center conductor and on the inside of the coax shield. One clue that you have a problem is when you move the coax around and the SWR changes all over the place. If the antenna is decoupled from the coax then changing the coax length or position will not affect the SWR reading.

Dah..... Hey Vinnie some truckers are Hams. Sideband is an example.
I've also talked to a few myself.

> What frequencies are trucking channels on ham?

I hear them on 2m. Particulay the ones that make regualr runs. They have the repeaters programed in to their mobile rigs and talk with the locals as they drive though the area. One point however. They maybe truckers, but you can't conduct any form of business on the Ham bands.
So all you hear is general chatter.

Above the Ham 2m band are a number of business band VHF frequencies and above the Ham 70cm band a number of business band UHF frequencies.
These are the so-called color-dot-frequencies. On those you can hear the truckers checking in with their dispachers etc.

http://www.k5kj.net/dot_freqs.htm
http://www.bouwkamp.net/miscanner/freqfreq.htm#dot

>And why would they use FRS, which has vitually no range?

So they can get directions from another trucker without putting up with some other idiot CBer trying to jam them on 19, or another channel.

Funny you should mention that. Coming back from Ohio I heard a couple of truckers talking about Pennsylvania. Out there if you get caught giving a "bear report" they bust the truckers. And I guess they have taken the radios too. The other trucker asked how do the cops know if the radio is used to avoid a speed trap. The answer was simple. When a "bear report" is made on the air and the police radar measures a reduction in the truck's speed, zap, they're busted. That seems to be all the proof they need. The law out there is worded so that using the radios to alert others is deemed as interfering with the performance of a police officer's duty, thus illegal. They also mention several other states doing the same thing. But it appears that Pennsylvania is getting real picky about the practice.

This is more of my goal. I can ground to one of the roof rack mounting screws.
Where on the antenna do I need to connect the other end? Perhaps I can mount a flat grounded metal peice to the plastic basket.I have looked at as many mounting options as I could see. 'Firestix' has a ton of mounts, none that I wish to use.

Maybe I will finally do this, just to keep it simple!
I already have the cheapo antenna and cheapo cb. The cb is a Maxon MCB30. It has a three wire connection. One black=ground, one red= +to on/off accessory and one orange, to battery + to hold 'last channel'.
Can I simply ignore the orange and attach the other two to a cig plug? Thanks again, Thomas.

Lee, I know what it has to offer guys on 2meters asking me for my handle, first personal, swr's , 73's and all kinds of other garbage that makes me want to vomit.
You are correct there is alot to do with a tech license, but acting like a cber is not one I care to do. Funny there is a guy who used to harrass people on 11 meters daily, he now holds a ham license. To me he is still an ashsole except with a tech license now.

Most likely a lack of sales. Companies don't stop making products that are selling well unless sales drop off or product becomes

Then I guess I don't understand what you're implying that would favor 18 foot lengths of coax over the proper electrical half wave, of 12 feet taking the velocty factor into consideration.

With the proper decoupling at the feedpoint, coaxial radiation should not be an issue. And once again, keeping the feedline in multiples of a half wave (in coax not air) helps to achieve that.

A better answer would be to design the antenna properly. You can achieve close to 50 ohms at the feedpoint. With a 50 ohm impedence and a low SWR, there is no need to consider feedline length at all, as standing waves are low to non-existant.

There is nothing wrong with the number 18, over any other number. Sure, go ahead, use 18 feet. But I believe the whole point of this discussion was how that number came to be so common, and how it was likely erroneously picked as being a half wave length at 27 Mhz, but somehow someone forgot about the coaxial velocity factor.

I'd be curious if antennas for other frequency bands, are supplied with 18' of coax, or some other number closer to the half wavelength on their respective frequencies.

Of course not. He's no more going to sue me, than he is likely to wake

Not at all. You seem to think that somehow the burden of proof is on a defendant to prove that he didn't libel someone, when the facts on this are abundantly clear that this is not the case, and that the burden of proof falls squarely on the shoulders of the plaintiff to prove; 1, that the alleged libelous statement is false, and 2, that he has suffered quantifiable damage as a result of the statement. If there is no damage, then there is no case.

In another thread, which you conveniently ignored, I posted the legal definitions and the criteria by which these cases are based.

But I gave you the option of putting your money where your mouth is. If you're so sure that, once again, you are right and the legal profession is wrong, then go ahead and make my day.

> The case examples you asked for did not concern cases

Name them. Nothing was proven other than Lloyd posting a few links to cases that have been registered (but not necessarily won). The fact is, it's still on the plaintiff to prove libel. That has been shown to be true as well.

Remember, you can sue anyone for anything. Winning the suit is an entirely different matter.

Another way to look at it. Out of the millions of people on the internet, and the thousands of web sites, chat rooms, newsgroups, forums, etc, and the resultant flame wars that have erupted as many people of diametrically opposed personalities inevitably clash, how many cases of libel have come out of it? And out of those, how many have actually won? The percentages are very low. Certainly lower than the criteria that you tried to set forth, on this newsgroup, against those of us who correctly observe that you habitually break the federal FCC rules on a daily basis, with respect to operating a CB radio against the rules set forth in part 95.

> Wrong.It was your bluff that has been called. Remember..I > unequivocally stated that N3CVJ IS a bonafide liar. It's NOT libel

It is not true and I can easily prove it, should I desire. But you are not worth my trouble. Your feeble claims about 8 year old posts and you not being adept enough to find out about a case of disturbing the peace through CB radio transmisions, is not proof that I lied. Rather it speaks of your inability to follow up on, and research things. You and your WebTV. Not everything is on the internet, and not all information is available to just anybody. And sorry to say, but your whole demeanor, and persona, is extremely unprofessional, and does not lend any credibility that you are, in fact, anyone who would be trusted with such information. In other words, YOU are the liar.

Speaking of lies, are you now going to claim to be a lawyer? No spinning, a simple Yes or No answer please.

He doesn't even have the resources to buy a real computer. I doubt whether he has the resources to defend against a civil case. And that's the real irony of the whole thing. He's not worth suing because he doesn't have enought assets to make it worthwhile.

They've been trying that since the 70's when it was a real issue for the police. But, it seems, that it's unenforcable. You would have to catch the guy transmitting the "smokey report". It's not illegal to listen, so you can't bust someone for listening to a smokey report.

They do the same thing to people who flash lights at oncoming traffic to warn of a speed trap. It's a little more obvious when the police see someone flashing headlights, and alot easier to cite than determining which trucker sent the smokey report on the CB.

Connect the orange and red together and use that in the cig plug. Of course, I'd suggest running to the battery (for the unswitched line), to the fuse block (for the switched line), and someplace close by the radio for the ground. Keep the ground as short as possible.

If you have multiple vehicles you'd like to run the radio in, get extra power cords (if it's detachable), or if it's not, set up a power plug in each vehicle under the dash. Then it'd just be a matter of unplugging it from your (three prong) power connection, moving the antenna, and setting it all up in the other vehicle.

Leland:

A linear load is not a spiral of wire. A spiral of wire is an inductive load. A Linear Load, by definition, is straight wire. Don't you read your QST's? Hi Hi.

There's another type of loading that you should have also taken into account, and that's capacitive. All part of some of the matching networks that are available out there.

For example, the K-40 antennas use a cap to load the antenna to close to 50 ohms. The Wilson 1000 uses a tapped coil (some call this a shunt-feed system) to provide a 50 ohm load. The "new" Astatic LL series uses a linear load, which is not a coil or a cap, but wire or conductor that "folds back" on itself at least twice. One up connected to one down connected to another up connected to the whip.

A short whip, less than 1/4 wave, loaded with a coil and not using any matching circuit at the base has a lower radiation resistance than a full 1/4 wave antenna would have.

Not if one were to have a handy tape recording of you doing what you brag about on here.
I can't understand why you play this dangerous game of walking the thin wire. You've stated many times, that you shoot skip on the freeband, now you backpeddle and say that what you say you do, and what you really do, aren't neccesarily the same thing. So once again, you are faced with the reality that you are lying somewhere. You either shoot skip or you don't. You're either a federal lawbreaker or you aren't. But which ever one you truly are, means that you've lied about the other.
That's simple logic.

>.according to Hall

I do find your facination with what I say, to be interesting. I do believe you admire me more than you let on. That would certainly explain your fixation. Maybe something I say will rub off, and you might rejoin the rest of society someday.

> I welcome it..LOL! He proved he was lying,,I don't have to do a thing

The thing is, that YOU are the only person with that exact message. The ONLY one. If you were to do a google search for that message, you will find it, in the exact form that I sent it in over 8 years ago, with the Villavnova headers intact. But what you will not find, are any messages with my current ISP (Worldlynx networks) headers intermixed with old headers from Villanova, because they don't exist. I tried telling you what happened, but as usual, you either refuse to accept it, or truly don't understand it. The more you bring it up, the more you demonstrate that you truly know little about internet routing protocols. I can provide the original message in it's original form, proving that what you have is "doctored". So who's lying now?

> >but a

Not really, as naming a group, and assigning the term "criminal" to it, cannot be used as grounds for libel, since no one person was libeled. The term is also conditional. As in "you are a federal criminal, if you deliberately ignore FCC rules". If the conditions to make the statement true, exist, then there can be no libel, as the statement is therefore true.

You keep trying, but you keep falling short of the mark. So much for your "profession"...

Plagerizing another of my expressions eh? You do that with unsettling 4638. Getting the pieces together...

I just got a Uniden Grant (The old style) with all of the mods already done FOR FREE!!! A friend gave it to me, saying it belonged to her ex-husband, who used to be a trucker. I'm going to use it for the base I'm setting up. I've got another friend who's going to sell me a 5/8 base antenna with ground plane and a 10' mast for $40 to add to the 10' mast another buddy already gave me. All I have left to get is a 15amp power supply and some coax to get it all put together.

Anyone know of a good inexpensive power supply (or have a good working one for sale)? Also, what's the best kind of coax to get?

TIA,
Dan

George has used the word "assclown" over and over, among many, many other homo references. George gives the impression he is a homosexual..all his posts are laden with references of men's sexuality and not a thing about radio or cb. I feel, and so does Dave Hall (according to his theory concerning his match-book and much-wished-for non-education in psychology) that George is homosexual.
George, please keep your homo preferences and references to your self,,this is not an apropriate group.

Twsit calling you an assclown has nothing about homosexuality in it, perhaps you have been hanging around Landshark. So calling you a assmunch. dickface, dickhead, dick knocker, sidewalk sissy, etc have no homosexual refrences to them at all Not 1 bit. It is again your twisted mind that is trying to insinuate those as such, and without much luck. isn't that right assclown

This might work, but may not work as well as having the mag mount stuck directly to the vehicle body. However, I had a ham friend who had a van with a fiberglass roof, and he attached a flat metal plate to the luggage rack to which he stuck a mag mount 2 meter antenna. I can't remember if the metal plate was grounded to the van body or if it were a little over 19" X 19" to make it resonant on 2 meters. It seemed to work fine.

Dave not at all many mobile uhf/vhf antennas, cell antennas come with coax lengths of 15' +, it just happens to be a length that allows placement in a vehicle just about anywhere.

"Frasso? What is frasso? What makes one of the keyclown persuasion assume this word is a person or an identity from reading the simple posting of the word frasso?
Why the frass-tastic interest in this word? Why did mopar respond angrily with a anti-dogie link when he didn't even know what he was responding to, or maybe he did know?

Why the sudden avoidance from Twitsy and the panicky running away from the frasso word. Does everyone know or need to be remind that Twistsy is the ONLY one ever asked to leave this NG? Yes he was asked, and he refused. And the jockstrap he got in the mail right after that. Watch him try to cover it up and spew smoke around the issue. He got it, he knows he got it, and he's got to live with it, and that's the name of that tune. And that rediculous post of his abnout saucer men and putting the jock on the wall like a trophy. Caught red handed. Also there is some dispute that he was caught trying to sell fake autograped pics on usenet. And then he used to start huge flame wars in the ham radio policy room because he imagined leland was plotting agianst him. And then he was in there crying about respect for the freeband

it is?
He argues for one thing and then in the same only a fake name. See when you obsess about Dave Hall people about libel and act like a generalized fool,

Lelnad asks us to believe what HE says and NOT Riley..LOL..N3CVJ asks us to believe what HE says and not what MSN spamcop and villanova says. For your reading pleasure..N3CVJ, concerning his lie about a cb bust, attempted:

"This happened about 5 years ago, in suburban philadelphia. The person accused, did not have the money to afford a lawyer, which is why, I'm sure, that he lost. But the fact of the matter is that it does not take a prosecution along illegal radio operation's grounds, to take people to court over interference. Disturbing the peace, public indecency (In the case of "foul" language) are some of the more creative ways to get at the source of your interference."

That is possible. My point was if the loading coil is designed the right way the feed point impedance can be made close to 50 ohms. That would require a matching coil with high losses, i.e. low "Q". If a high "Q" coil was used, i.e. low resistance, then yes you could end up with the case you pointed out.

I said "linearly loaded"

Just about every antenna book I've seen refers to the coil as a "loading coil". But I'm not going to start splitting hairs over simple terminology.

Yes I read it and QEX, CQ, CQ VHF, and several others too.

Yes I've seen the capactive loading assemblies on the top of some types of HF antennas.

there.

The literature is full of them to be sure.

Sounds more like what is done to tune out the inductive reactance on a 5/8 wave antenna.

I've built a portable 12m/10m antenna like that using magnet wire wound on a short section of PVC pipe. Then I have an adjustable 72 inch Radio Shack whip antenna screwed in to the top.

Sounds like they cribed the idea from Comet antennas. They call their system "SLC".

I wouldn't doubt it. The problem is just how many truckers are going to go to that trouble? If the guy got the ticket in PA, and he lives in CA for example, and does most of his hauling on the west coast I would suspect it would be cheaper to pay the fine and chalk it up to experience.

way more "unscrupulous", in their manners, and would not "scare off" that easily.
Especially when you consider that hams have to "play by the book" in order to remain legal, while the freebanders can run as much power and equipment as they can afford to purchase.

As reported in the 10-X periodicals, the Hams are quite good at policing their frequencies. The freebanders would be DF'd and reported on short order.
>And who would they report them to? The FCC has already shown time and time again that they have better things to do than worry about out-of-band CBers.
I was involved in the DFing of a local 2 meter repeater jammer a few years back.
We found him in short order, even though he was using a HT. He was reported to the FCC, and they sat on their laurels. Not until the SAME GUY was found causing malicious interference to the local police and fire frequencies, did the FCC finally get off of their collective butts and do something. After it was all said and done, the guy got what amounted to a wrist slapping. The point is, don't expect the feds to help rid the airwaves of Freebanders.
And any ham that tries to "take the law into his own hands" will most likely end up full of lead......
Unless the FCC starts an active enforcement policy (Something they have failed to do to date), there is no way to force the freebanders to move.
The enforcement in the HAM bands is active because of the Amateur Pride, something the CBers lack ... ;-> Yea right (See above), in which alternate reality?

I'm sure you'll probably be surprised at the stance that I was taking back then. I guess I'm guilty of playing devil's advocate. I'll argue either side, on the basic merits of each position, when the opposition adopts a poor attitude. Back then there were a fairly large group of hams that berated CBers simply because they were Cbers. I felt a need to defend them then.
Today, I feel that illegals are flaunting their illegality with a little too much zeal, which is why I've swung to the other side somewhat.

Hmm..... Is this a trick question? Are you licensed for 10 meters? You do realize that by attempting to communicate with you on the freeband, it would make me guilty of the very thing I've been debating against, and would definitely brand me as a hypocrite. That aside, I rarely have much time for radio stuff. And certainly not during the day, when the skip is strongest. I do work for a living you know......

They DID take action, Lelnad....they issued a warning letter that is standard procedure with most violations by hammies. Once again, for one licensed in communciations, you really don't know the law OR the the procedures.

I Hate no one, Lelnad. Hate is for lids not unlike yourself. You merely are unable to employ proper communicative techniques, despite having half a license. You need to learn to separate your personal problems, feelings, and issues from the topics concerning radio,,,try to stop focusing on all that you will never be, attain, or have..it depresses you to the point of insults and self-indemnity.

Some of the Hams I know are ex-CBers, ex-Freebanders to be exact, and NONE of them acts other than respectfully on the air. The reason they dumped CB is because of all the other idiots on the band. They couldn't put up with it any more.

Not to sure about where you can get one now. They are hard to find, and I think they don't make them anymore. Not sure of that though. I just got one 4 months ago. Best darn radio I have ever owned. And I have owned 2510's, most Galaxy's and 2600's. For the size and money, this radio just rocks.

Thump - thump and on and on you go. The more you complain about Doug the more you start sounding like him with YOUR obsession for rules and regulations. Before you know it people won't be able to tell the difference between the two of you. That would be a most fitting end of

George has used the word "assclown" over and over, among many, many other homo references. George gives the impression he is a homosexual..all his posts are laden with references of men's sexuality
and not a thing about radio or cb. I feel, and so does Dave Hall

It ain't a "judeo christian" one but a Christian one--period. Da Ayrabs ain't da problem, it's the false anti-Christ religions of the Jews AND Mooslum Arabs that IS the problem. Dey will all have to listen to Jesus Christ, the carpenter of Nazareth, to hear how they violated HIS laws with their "traditions of the elders" and moon worshipping cults! Terrorists on both sides, gonna get THE Terror OF the Lord on them instead!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Dear fellow Amateurs;
Now i've seen it all, the Radio Clubb of JHS 22 that is run by Joe Fairclough, WB2JKJ is now auctioning off the Freebies that he was given by Yaesu to give away as free handouts & as promotional freebies.
If you don't believe it, go to his ebay site at>> http://cgi6.ebay.com/ws/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewSellersOtherItems&include=0&userid=joeee1621@aol.com&sort=3&rows=25&since=-1&rd=1
And see for yourselves :-(
I suspect that even with the $20K worth of donations that he has sold on Ebay in the past 7 weeks is NOT enough?
How about everyone e-mailing him & telling him how you feel, especially since he actually contributes Nothing to the ham community except for Hot Air!

I think what you really want is an UNUN Which matches an unbalanced load to an unbanced load. I built an amp several years ago using two 4:1 UNUNs in series giving a total stepup of 16:1. A Grid resistor of 800 ohms was used with the amp. This low value resistor made the amp very stable, not requiring any nuetralization. Not bad for a grid driven tetrode amp. The same has been done with a 50 ohm grid resistor which requires no matching device or input tunnng. If you have enough drive power to give you the drive voltage you need then there is nothing wrong with using the 50. U will have to get rid of the excess drive power somewhere. Also you could use other baluns to step it on up to a few thousand ohms and still not require neutralization of the amp. The final selection of impedance ratio and grid resistor will depend on the amount of drive power you have and your selection of tubes for the amp. I've done it with grid drive sweep tubes, 6146's 807's, 4cx250's. I hope this is the info you are looking for.

What can you expect from a frasso? I look to Twistty to define this. He so wahck you cant tell if he is coming or going half the time. And then there is the frasso habit of denial. Twitsy wriote the article in SPORADIC WAVES that talks about freebanding being so cool and then when confronted with it he says oh, just because I write about it doesnt mean I support it. And by the way the article has been yanked from the web. It no longer is on that site and we know why or maybe its a frasso mystery?

Oh yeah his inside scoop about N8 and the TOLEDO REPEATER saying that there was music and carriers thrown on a tape. Where in the rasso world does this come from? So far that has never been mentioned anywhere but in the frasso mind of our lovely dog beater and pirate radio jamook Twitstiehead.

Dont forget his saying he has conversations with RILEY about this and that. How does a cartoon character have conversations with a goverment employee? Does he frasso-talk about illegal use of 27.555 and say that there are guys impersomating leland and dave hall and dwight on there? Maybe there is a frasso connection here.

Frasso, frasso and more frasso. Illegal frasso. Head case frasso. Lies about libel then lies about lies, it's going down the rabbit hole with an anonymous acolyte who cant figure out what good is morse code. If you are obsessed about Dave Hall all day like Twitsie it doesnt leave much time for anything else like reality checks etc.

The idea of using cophased antennas on a car or truck is not to achieve gain. Usually the radiation pattern of an antenna mounted a car is really screwed up due to the strange shapeof the ground plane(car). The real purpose of the dual antennas is to make the pattern more even or more omnidirectional so you dont lose signals every time you turn a corner. Be prepared to try both 50 and 70 ohm coaxfor the splitter and use whichever works best. Depending on the actual impedance of the antennas one may work as well as the other.

the magnet mount won't scratch your roof if its clean and the magnet is clean. get the Wilson 1000. its a great antenna. we might be a bit confused on what you are asking. don't try and fab something otherwise you will be sorely disappointed in the performance or lack there of in your CB. the technology has been around for a few years. don't go trying to change it.

Jimmy,
I'll agree with you on the first statement, using cophased antennas won't give you much gain, but not on the rest. The radiation pattern from symmetrically located antennas is fairly uniform in shape, and also for a single antenna located in the 'center' of the vehicle. Both are fairly regular. As for the 'real purpose of dual antennas making the pattern more omnidirectional', that's just not true. If the antennas are mounted symmetrically, and at the correct distance apart, the resulting radiation pattern is anything but omnidirectional, it will have some directionality in two directions. If the distance between the two antennas isn't 'correct' for a directional radiation pattern, it's basically the same as only using one antenna centrally located. No big difference in radiation pattern.
As you said, the input impedance of the antennas used for phasing determine the value of the impedance of the phasing lines. If the input impedance of both antennas is something around 100 ohms, 50 ohm phasing lines will work okay. If the imput impedance of both antennas are some thing around 50 ohms, then you'd need to use 75 ohm phasing lines. And, if they have an input of around 25 ohms, you'd need something around 93 ohms for the phasing lines (you don't see much of that around anymore).
The only 'good' reason I've been able to figure out for using dual or cophased antennas on a mobile are for 'style'. The only other characteristic being that they are directional, and I've never figured out why anyone would want a directional antenna on a mobile, they would be pointed in the wrong direction at least half the time...

What differenc does it make what fake name someone uses, if it's fake?

You hide behind a fake name. THAT is the truth. Sign of a true coward, and one of the priciple signs of APD.

The difference between you and George is that George may change his fake name, but everyone knows it's him by his IP address, and he doesn't deny it. You hide behind a fake name, where no one knows who you really are. That gives you the ability to be a complete and total idiot, without the accountability that goes with having your true identity known.

That's a load of horse hockey. The FCC never mandated the use of fake names on CB. You can use whatever means you see fit to identify yourself, but the FCC has never mandated anything. In later years I just used my first name. People who have nothing to hide, don't need to hide behind fake names.

I also find it ironic, in a somewhat hypocritical manner, that you would choose to cite the FCC here, when you show so little respect for other FCC rules.

> The fact that you have a problem with the service as it is

It seems that you have a distorted view of what the service is. I have no problem with the service. I do have a problem solely with some of the miscreants who utilize it, against the spirit of the service, and with the typical accompanied disregard for other people.

> and that your anger crosses over to those who utilize such service illustrates the

You keep insisting that I'm somehow "angry". I can assure you, that nothing could be further from the truth. But I do enjoy your hopeless attempts at defending those who are responsible for the decimation of a once useful service.

> Not as famous as me..you guys made me world wide without the cb.

So, you now change your earlier opinion, that this newsgroup is read by only a fraction of the CBers on the radio? Once, it was fairly much agreed upon by most of us, that this newsgroup represents only a small minority of operators, (And this fact was used as a reason why guys like Aaron shouldn't waste their time "preaching" FCC rules here). So are you now stating that this is no longer true? That your infamy as the rec.radio.cb punch clown, has catipulted you to the outlaw hall of shame?

If that's the case, then the 18' number was chosen, not for any specific electrical property, but as a length that is designed to accomodate the convenient placement of the antenna, on any normal passenger vehicle. Ergonomics.

That is a matter for speculation. The CB "craze" peaked in the early 80's, and has been on a slow decline since. The amount of CB radios sold to casual fad-followers, has diminished considerably. Those people are now firmly glued to the internet and to their cell-phones.

But there is a remaining group of core radio hobbyists, who still utilize CB. The fact that the channels are so choked with noise and hetrodynes, when the skip is rolling, proves that the band is far from "dead".

There may be areas of the country where the band is almost dead (My area seems to be one of them now), but other, mostly metro, areas are still thriving.

Congrats on your up and coming station. I hope it works out well for you. Hopefully those "mods", that were done to the radio, were done by somebody who knows something. Otherwise you might become your neighbor's worst enemy.

You don't need a 15 amp supply to run a grant. You can get by with a 5 or 6 amp supply, they're a heck of a lot cheaper, and easier to find.

I find it equally amusing that Twisty keeps attempting to speak for me, in a vain attempt at inciting us to fight amongst ourselves. The problem with such shallow and sophomoric attempts, is that they are easily seen for what they really are, and which once again illuminate the anti-social mentality of that, whom we are dealing with here.

What you say, in theory, is plausable. But the police have realized, after several years of dealing with this, that's it's better to go with the flow, and use this "system" to their advantage, rather than fighting it.

The whole point of speed traps is not to "bust" a handful of people, but rather, the presense of the speed traps, has the effect of making the other motorists slow down.

There was a news report some years back, where they interviewed a state trooper, about "smokey reports", and he basically stated that the police do not find them disruptive. In fact, they welcome them, since, as news of the "trap" gets passed around, people slow down miles sooner. They even place unmanned cars in plain sight just so the some Cber will "report" it, and cause the traffic to slow down. The police have even been known to give false "smokey reports", just to slow people down.

Of course, if you're in a one horse southern town, where the main police budgetary income comes from citations, then yea, they might be a bit miffed if they find out that there is a system that is "robbing" them of their "income". But generally speaking, the police are more concerned with safety, and getting people to drive slower, and speed traps are there to make an example of a few, so that many will slow down now here is the original message link:

http://groups.google.com/groups?selm=26APR199518422644%40cats.ucis.vill.edu&output=gplain

And the header from that link:

Again, note the date on the header.

You will also notice that there is no sign of my current ISP (Worldlynx networks) mentioned anywhere there. That's because (Duh!) the message is 8 years old, from a time before I employed worldlynx as my ISP.

You have either maliciously, or through ignorance, sent a copy of the the enclosed headers, from the message that I sent you, which was 8 years old, to your "robo-spam-cop", and it processed them as if they were one and the same. I tend to believe that you did this maliciously since there were some steps taken to remove the original dates from the enclosed headers to make it look current. But the message is there on Google for everyone to see, along with the date of the original posting.

So once again, you fail in you attempt to malign me.

So by your (ahem!) logic, I should therefore assume that anyone who has ever exchanged a USENET post with another, however long ago, is now somehow "associated" with them?

Now I'm really scared. When they finally lock you up in that rubber room, they might try to "associate" me with you........

Unfortunately it will still scratch no matter how

It's just one of those things you have to deal with if you want to use a magnet mount.

The individual you are talking about denies that his name is George (Busch WA3MOJ). The only thing that he claims is that his IP address stays the same. By your own definition then, George is also a coward. Are you trying to defend George?

That is my feeling, but I have also installed some 2.4 ghz antennas on vehicles that were for a specific use, the coax was a certain length to keep the signal to noise ratio down as of course there would be a certain amount of loss at that freq.

Yes indeed our area has seen considerable decrease in activity, especially for the winter when everyone is snowed in you would expect more radio activity.

A small piece of Saran Wrap under the magnet will eliminate scratches and have no adverse affect(it may act as a small capacitor). Sometimes, condensation forms under the magnet, good Idea to lift it and wipe it down from time to time.

Hi all-

Trying to improve receive performance/NF of a radio, is the 2SC2999 still considered the best device to replace a 2SC1674? Is there anything else that would be even quieter?

If it is still recommended, any suggestions where I can get some?

Amp seller, saucer boy, drug dealer. These three form

As we can see Twitsy wrote the subject line that accuses a real person Mr. Scott of thinking of child molestation. Now if this isn't LIBEL well goodness gracious me. Any lawyer could make this case stick.
But lets check the law....

>LIBEL - Published material meeting three conditions:

Accusing someone of thinking of child molestation is defamatory

Twitsy specified a real person, Mr. Scott.

LIBEL by Twistyhead is confirmed. Twistoflex the

I'm currently using the unit with my RS MURS radio and don't notice any interference. Just hooked up my CB to it... With no antenna connected to my regular power supply, the radio was quiet. With it connected the RS Switching, I could hear some noise. Raised the S-meter needle from 0 to about a .5. If I touched the supply, it added a little more noise to radio, and raised the needle to about a 1. Based on that, I think that the radio was picking up noise through the antenna jack, and not the power cable. The NB noise filter seemed to have no effect of the noise, and the radio was located within 1-foot of the supply...

Make your own judgment based on the above. My opinion, it works fine for me and didn't cost a fortune... If anything, down the road I'll add a filter cap or two and this should clear up most if not all of the noise that just might be present..

George is called George and denies his identity. Once again, I have never denied my identity. I am a very proud person and have nothing to hide. You ASKING for my identity is a totally different subject than one "denying" their identity and not relelvant to the subject of George denying who he is,,much in the way you deny spamcop and MSN headers. To feel they are somehow one in the same stems from your deficit in effective communication.

Which spotlights your lack of self-control and inability to not respond, no wonder you have a problem with cbers not being identified and having call signs anymore...you have too many personal problems to enjoy such a service..LOL! You need to worry about WHY you feel the need to play net instead of attempting to disregard the 1st amendment and trying to gain identity upon one for nothing but malice or indemnification,which is a crime in itself, in case you didn't know.(OF COURSE you didn't know)..if Yes DAvey junior,,unfortunately for you, many care. Elmers care, the ARRL cares, and many, many other factions you callously disregard CARE, as you are representative of the ARRL and amateur radio,,,a disgraceful representative, nevertheless,,,but a representative, nonetheless. So Davey, when you claim "no one cares'..you have never been more wrong...well, yes you have,,but you; are sadly and ignorantly mistaken that "no one cares". When an amateur such as yourself is shown to be a lying id for personal gain, smear tactics, and can't even be counted on to be honest with himself, many, many care Davey,,as it 's about long-fought integrity for amateurs that those such as yourself and N8 and Lelnad willfully and casually disregard and in turn so, damage the cause. Yes, Davey,, the CAUSE of amateur radio and all the good will ambassadorship that is to accompany such. Again, you took a vow, and it wasn't to appoint yourself judge and jury to decide WHO benefits from such helpful good will, Selectively applying the hammies creed is something you do wonderfully and hypocritically well, when at all.

You can get those round stick-on pads that stick to the bottom of the magmount. They will keep it from scratching so much, but I don't think there's anything that will totally keep them from scratching. The good part is that it's up on top of the roof so won't be very noticable.

Another thing with mag mounts is to periodically take them off and wipe any moisture off, especially during wet weather, otherwise it may turn the paint white. Plus, be sure to wax that area often with car wax.

I understand that it's going to get costly...I'm prepared for that to happen. It's just the INITIAL costs that I'm trying to keep down (I have a JEEP fetish, as well!!!). I found a Samlex SEC-1212 for $80 at my doorstep. Anyone have any thoughts on this model? I should be getting a Cobra 148 GTL in the mail in the next couple of days. I think I'm going to get it peaked and tweaked and put it in my Jeep to replace the useless Uniden Pro 510XL that's in there now. The Jeep is running barefoot with that radio and a Francis 102" fiberglass whip right now and I can pick up Japan almost every night and Australia on a good night. The Cobra should make a big difference, right?

No, you look, at the message from this link:

http://groups.google.com/groups?selm=26APR199518422644%40cats.ucis.vill.edu&output=gplain

You look at the message from the google link, and tell me again that there is any header information from Worldlynx.

You can snip and edit anything you wish, but it doesn't change the facts, nor anyone's mind who read it previously. And the fact is, that there are no villanova headers in my current ISP account, and there are no Worldlynx headers in that 8 year old message which was sent while I was using Villanova.

Of course not, since you lied about it. It doesn't matter. Google holds the truth, and nothing you can say, spin, obfuscate, or otherwise distort, can change that.

You are a novice example of a hacker wannabe, whos sophomoric attempts at combining headers from two different ISP's, is easily disproven by a simple check of the archives.

check it out dave.....clinton....a man that never should have been elected president and if you remember, was considered even by democrats to be a joke in 1991.....was president for 8 years and can you or anyone else defend his presidency or name one damn thing this idiot did that was of some merit.....???? i cannot.....yet he is a very liberal type person.....and now he runs around trying to get his name called, if you will, here and there.....and he is always criticizing the president about this and that....ok clinton....if you know so much , why did you make such a big mess of everything, while you were president.....liberals have a problem, they never are themselves.....because if they are ever themselves, then people see them as they are, despite the obvious attention deficit disorder of the average american voter, ...people see them as they are, and for what they are.....the word communist comes to mind....., which is what clinton is if you ask me.....if he isn't , he is close.....and let us not forget, lady clinton, a person who never lived in new york is elected as a senator for new york, go figure...so the clinton wing of the party is still in power and command the shots....these are the people to watch and study, but one must always remember what happened during the years 1992-2000 and don't forget...please don't forget.....

And that is the problem. You NEVER make a direct statement. Everything you claim is subject to interpretation, speculation, and whatever spin suits your particular mood.

That way, when you are backed into a corner, you can attempt to weasel out of it by claiming that what you WROTE is not really what you MEANT. A simple trick, employed by slippery, deceptive, and dishonest people, most notably, lawyers and politicians.

This is yet another testament to your true nature. One of obscurity, deception and dishonesty. You seem to have many things to hide. One can only wonder at the true depth of your anti-social behavior.

No, George uses various screen names. It's the people here who ASSUME it's George.
If I were to suddenly claim that your name was "Bob Frasso" (A name someone seems to think belongs to you), would you deny it? How would we know if it's true or not. How do you REALLY know the person you call George REALLY is?

The fact that you hide behind a fake name makes that unlikely.

It is, if it's not the correct name for the person you're accusing.

As you have been fond of reminding us in the past, this is USENET, not CB.

No, I use my first name, or sometimes "Sandbagger", since I do listen a lot. That is to make up for all the years of ratchet jawing that I used to do in my youth.

> N3cvj, why do you go to such great lengths to lie? I have never denied

But you aren't honest enough and forthcoming enough to use your real name. That means that you are free to act irresponsibly with little chance of consequences. That's is the price we pay for allowing anonymity. People think they are free to insult other people, carry on with behavior not conducive to a civilized adult. And they are free to be deceptive and pretend to be something that they are not.

The 1st amedment was never designed to allow people to hide behind an anonymous and therefore untracable name, for the expressed purpose of promoting behavior that would not be tolerated and most likely even attempted, if your identity were known.

So you infer from that, that the FCC now "mandates" anonymity? You sure make leap of faith judgements.....

> contrary to all professionals and ISP and computer experts.

Who will remain nameless of course.

> say.."Protect your identity"...now we see why........from internet thugs

Making sure you behave yourself is hardly "underhanded".

Nobody said anything about giving out all personal information, like SS numbers. But it's been a given fact, that people tend to behave themselves in a much more civilized manner, when their identity is known. You just want the right to act the part of fraudulent personality, and spin unverifiable lies, and exaggerations, without anyone having the ability to verify it. That's the keystone trait of a person suffering from APD.

> >You can use whatever means you see fit to >identify yourself, but the

No, as usual, I'm correcting another of your many misconceptions.

On many, less controversial newsgroups, people use their real names. It's no coincidence, that these same newsgroups have less of a problem with people who can't control their manners, and who's lives are so riddled with impropriety, that they feel to overwhelming need to hide their identity.

I suppose the same can be said for the CB band. Anonymity enables the dregs of society to selfishly disrupt the otherwise peaceful existance of civilized conversations, with little fear of repercussions.

If you don't see the hypocricy in that statement, you are even worse than first thought. How can one claim to "respect" the rules, but at the same time "disregard only 2"? Gee, at what point, in your mind, does one no longer "respect" the rules? After ignoring 4? 5? 20?

What I feel about it, is irrelevant. The FCC has outlined the rules (Which, of course, you chose to ignore).

> Number two..you feel all cbers are wrong in not identifying themselves with real > names and it makes them cowards.

No, I've said nothing of the sort. Not everyone who chooses a "handle" is a coward. Not everyone who remains anonymous, stirs up trouble. But if you are going to be an agitator, and stick your abrasive attitute in public, while hiding behind an anonymous name, you are, in essense, saying to the world, that you are too much of a coward to back up your feelings with your true identity, and your credibility is automatically suspect.

> makes making sport of you worthwhile

Funny, I find the "sport" of making you sputter, spin, backpeddle, obfuscate, and set off on crusades of defamation, to be even more telling. It's fun to make a sociopath perform according to their profile.

Yep, I am a real disgrace to ham radio. Imagine, a ham who stands up for the rule of law, what a concept! Yea, that makes me a real bad egg.....

You have failed at every attempt to prove that I lie. I doubt if anyone believes you. I'd also be curious as to what you consider "personal gain". Exactly what do you think I get from these little "sessions"?

You mean like the tactics you employ when you attempt to malign the

Let me put this into perspective for the boys and girls out there who might be reading this.. You believe that I am hurting the cause of ham radio, by promoting legal operation, and respect for other people? Hmmmm. What can I say here? But I digress, I almost forgot who I was dealing with.....

Which does not apply to willful lawbreakers, who disregard the rules of the radio service (Whether ham or otherwise).

Nothing hypocritical about it. I am an advocate of good engineering practice as well as respect for others. Others, who deserve respect, by being productive members of society. To the miscreants and dregs of the world, they earn my contempt. Which is as it should be. Those who make excuses for, and are apologists for people with bad marrers, are just as guilty, for allowing it to proliferate.

I once had fairly good luck, gluing a small piece of thin cloth to the magnet around the edges. That is probably the only thing that will buffer the sharp edges of the magnet, and reduce the likelihood of a scratch.

LandShark,
You're right, it is a pretty good page about antennas.
Unfortunately, it has two mistakes that I could see. One isn't all that important, about bottom, center, top loading and helically wound antennas. The 'continuously loaded', or helically wound antenna is the least efficient of the four.
If a fairly small coil lowers efficiency, then an antenna made up of all coil has to be even more inefficient. Which it is.
The second mistake, concerning phasing antennas is a more serious mistake (I would think) because there isn't much 'truth' in what is said. Maybe it would be better to say that the answer is incomplete. First, the average vehicle body provides a fairly adequate groundplane. Certainly not as 'good' as the ground system for a broadcast radio station, but 'good enough' for the average mobile. A mobile's 'groundplane' consists of more than the vehicle's metal body. It also partially 'contains' the 'dirt' that the mobile is sitting over because of capacitive coupling (just like the magnet/body of a mag-mount antenna).
Even vehicles that are considerably 'shorter' than the wave length of the frequency in use. The vehicle's body is one half of a capacitor, 'dirt-ground' is the other half.
The radiation pattern of a mobile antenna is seldom exactly omnidirectional, it is almost always 'skewed' in some direction because of the varying amounts of metal in particular directions, but not as exaggeratedly as depicted (which is a very old picture, by the way). If a single antenna is mounted symmetrically, meaning somewhere close to the 'center' of the vehicle, the radiation pattern is also fairly symmetrical (even). Mounting an antenna on one corner of the vehicle is the 'worst case' situation, and the pattern is 'skewed' more than if it's mounted in the center of the vehicle. A single antenna tends to 'favor' the direction of where the most metal is, in general. The difference in patten coverage will seldom be noticeable (you would still 'measure' it with a yardstick, not a micrometer).
Dual, or phased antennas, IF mounted the correct distance apart, provide a directional radiation pattern, not an omnidirectional one.
That's a characteristic, and about the only reason for using dual antennas (if you don't count 'style'). As the distance between dual antennas narrows, the radiation pattern does become less directional and more omnidirectional. The 'correct' distance apart is based on 1/4 wave lengths at the frequency in use, and can be almost any multiple of a 1/4 wave length (any more than a 1/2 wave length isn't too practical even for a fixed antenna system, so isn't used much).

Even so, the radiation pattern is more elliptical than circular (more a football shape than a basket ball).
This is all information that has been around almost forever. It isn't anything new at all, and I certainly didn't think it up by my self! As for most of the information on 'Signal Engineering's site, it's presented very well. It just isn't exactly the most accurate, though...

This doesn't really work. After time dust particles still get under the saran wrap and cause the same scratch problem. The best way to eliminate scratches is to coat the area with a liberal thickness of Johnson wax. Then set the magnet down a use your finger to make a wax seal around the edge of the magnet. Let dry.

Two problems with this method. It does not lend itself to easy installation/removall, and the magnet protects the paint from the sun which will create a wittiness mark after a time.

As noted above it can be lifted and wiped down from time to time, if some how dust particles were able to get under the magnet.
Or did you miss that part of the post.

This doesn't really work, after time dust particles still get under the magnet regardless if there is wax there or not.

It's fun to see to what ridiculous lengths Twsited with go to in support of his half baked ideas. All he needs it a bit of a push to keep him flopping around like a fish out of water for days on end. Besides all the time he wastes looking for back posts of mine in the archives in the vain hope he find something to embarrass me with, or responding to evey post I make, keeps him inside and away from molesting the neighborhood kids.

Why are you angry at Lelnad and bringing HIS garbage forward and lying about it and trying to attribute HIS poor taste in insults to me? To only enter my reply to Lelnad's insult concerning molesting children was a deliberate attempt at malice, ..and you claim no anger...heheheh! You boys have no self-control, no self-respect, and no friends. You're here only to agitate, as was shown with your attempted lie.
Such anger, such malice,,you boys are washed up..try and stick to the subjects at hand and try not to focus on the poster so much....you'll end up looking as desperate as KC8LDO, N8WWM, and N3CVJ, all who share an affinity for off topic subjects and an unhealthy interest in the personal lives of cbers whom they can not keep up with and whom they feel inferor to.

I heard the same thing! I know one guy who owned one who dumped it ASAP! It is a nice looking radio (can you spell Kenwood?), but the guts are horrible!

The lack of a 6th digit on the freq counter is also a minus!

I would stay away....FAR away!

If it was a good radio, it would have stayed in production longer than a year!

WELL??? Why am I still running around loose, after 4 different antikeyclowns threatened to come to Los Angeles to arrest/sue/execute me for advocating the legalization of cussing & nudity on the airwaves??? Because Uncle Sam doesn't like little retreads for Reagan doing such things without a badge or a lawyer license (AND because they're full of feces)! If their precious LAWS told them to jump off a cliff, they'd do it in a blink!

Ironic, isn't it... the would-be spankers were the ones who ended up getting spanked in the end (pun intended). Perry Mason they ain't.

On ebay, minimum $200. If it is like you say, it will be much more.

Do you mean channel 6? Compared to 6, one KW is small!!!

Hell, I've peaked 1 KW in my mobile with 4 pills on sideband.
I keep a smaller one next to me now. Gets out just as far.

download, Sympathy For The Devil by The Rolling Stones .... play it in the background and lets Rock and Rollllllllllll.....

GUESS MY NAME
(sung to Sympathy For The Devil by The Rolling Stones)

Please allow me to introduce myself
I'm a man of style and grace
I've been around for a long, long year
Laid many a keyclown's soul to waste

And I was 'round when Mark Fuller
Sealed Dennis O's employment fate
Made damn sure that Eitner
Washed his hands and ran away

Pleased to meet you
Hope you guess my name
But what's puzzling you
Is the nature of my game

I hung around rec.radio.cb
When I saw it was a time for a change
Flamed out Toll Free and Prime Minister
While Twistedhed screamed in pain
I sawed off Dave-or-Debbies plank Held an AKC rank
When the flooding raged
And ampclown empires sank

Pleased to meet you
Hope you guess my name, oh yeah
What's puzzling you
Is the nature of my game, oh yeah

I watched with glee
While the Landshark queen
Denied for ten decades
All the shemales he made
I shouted out
"Who killed rec.radio.cb?"
Cuz after all
It was you, not me

Let me please introduce myself
I'm a man of style and grace

I've laid many traps for the keyclown boys
And stopped many auctions on eBay

Pleased to meet you
Hope you guessed my name, oh yeah
But what's puzzling you
Is the nature of my game, oh yeah, get down, baby

Pleased to meet you
Hope you guessed my name, oh yeah
But what's confusing you
Is just the nature of my game

Just as every keyclown is a federal criminal
And the AKC are the saints
I'm heads you're tails
Just call me your master
'Cause you're in need of some restraints

So if you meet me
Have some courtesy
Even though Mopedholic has no taste
And PhilC has no case
I laid their souls to waste, um yeah
Pleased to meet you
Hope you guessed my name, um yeah
But what's bamboozling you
Is the nature of my game, um baby, get down Woo, who
Oh yeah, get on down
Oh yeah
Oh yeah!
Tell me jizzlips, what's my name
Tell me slapnutz, guess my name
Tell me assclown, what's my name
I tell you one time, you're to blame Ooo, who Ooo, who Ooo, who
Ooo, who, who
Ooo, who, who
Ooo, who, who Ooo, who, who
Oh, yeah
What's my name
Tell me, slapnutz, what's my name
Tell me, keyclowns, what's my name
Ooo, who, who
Ooo, who, who
Ooo, who, who
Ooo, who, who

Ooo, who, who

My dad called and asked why they never break into the commercials with these "breaking news stories"? They always cut into the TV program. His beef is when the newscaster interrupts Bob Barker with the news, "It's snowing," when he can look out his window and see the flakes flying. Why can't they wait 15 to 20 minutes longer to tell us the obvious?

OK. Nevermind. Go back to shoveling and salting...

10-4. Ain't NO doubt ! The BEST band there is, because it IS the people's band! Still yet some on here still don't even own a CB !
What would you call such people? Frenchies? (LeLand) ! Hey LeLand--what do you think of the HATE that is brewing in da USA against yo Frenchie people? !

And then there is wanna bee rednecks like N8. He wanna beez a commie but da commies don't want him, 'cause he is as Illegal as a SICK bird!

Just think what CB was like 45 years ago, and what it was in '77, and now, and 45 years from now! Does that give all you x-druggies a RUSH ? ! 4-10 !

Just remember all the LAUGHS you use to have listening to things on da CB, and now things are serious. People of ALL ages on one channel or 2, gabbing it up! Wasn't it GREAT ? ! Let's DO IT again!!!

Fine, I'm BP now, whatever, you are really going insane. You're seeing me in all the posts against you, yet, I only post once maybe 3 times a day, the morning before going to work, when I get home.

Christ I see he's even got so much time to write songs about people, Talk about enamored about people on newsgroups. Really sad if you think about it, he must have some sort of mental imbalance.

Why not just use some silicone and silicone the antenna down then? like wax will create a seal? Thats exactly what i want some dried crusty wax around the base of my antenna. LOL yeah sure .

I don't think George is appropriate for any group closer than 10 kiloparsecs from Earth.

I can see why straights would want to think George is gay. I can also see why gays would want to think that George is straight. Why don't we compromise and call him an alien (as in little-green-men aliens)?

Hello Survival Bill:

I would go with the copper, its cheap in the hardware stores, 12 or 14 gauge.

Stranded is perfered, or solid if its on hand. Suggest you mount it vertical as high as ya can while being safe. I've used RG58, RG8X, or even the TV Cable coax RG6.

Not in original boxes, but these look unused. Clean, shiny bases, no discoloration in the envelope. I can't test them, but I'll guaranty them not to be DOA.
Have a look at them at:

AES gets $132.00 each for these. I'll take $100/obo for all 4.

Flashing headlights to warn of anything is protected speech under our Constitution, it has been proven in court. But then again, with the Bush/Ascroft Cartel- their constitution is different than ours- anything goes.....It depends on how much "justice" you can afford. Giving a cop the bird is legal speech also, albeit maybe not the smartest thing to do. In the cops mind you "verbally" assaulted him, but hey, maybe you just want them to know they are "number one"!
BTW, it has been proven that long time traffic radar operators, and cell phone users, have a higher incidence of brain and other types of cancer than those that are not using such items. The cell phone industry is paying a LOT of money- bribes to Congress that is- to keep that evidence out of the public domain. Using a cell phone is just like sticking your head in a microwave oven. Even though the RF level is considerbly lower, the accumalated RF dosage is just as harmful, it just takes a while longer to cook your brain than the microwave oven method does.

Actually, when I read the message I replied to, probably a bit too

It's obvious that you have no confidence in doing a neat job with the

You replied in French to a message written in English. If you cannot see how this could be seen as rude, then you have much to learn about life. If you can understand a language well enough to understand and reply to the message, then you can reply in the same language.

Maybe your English is not perfect but it's better than my French, and a poor grasp of the English language never stops Georgina from posting messages.
As I don't speak French, I find Pidgin  better that Frog.

If you hear two people talking on a frequency, using FM... would you try to break in using SSB?

Generally speaking, a switching power supply does its "magic" by rapidly switching (hence the name) line voltage on and off, at a rate dependant on load. This switching, causes RF to be generated, and the squarewave nature of the switching, generates tons of harmonics, which can be heard as a "hash" noise in many receivers. Since this "noise" is radiated into the air, in many cases, line filters will do little to help. The best course of action is to tightly shield the supply and make sure it is grounded. Later designed power supplies are a bit better, but IMHO, I'd opt for a good old fashioned linear regulated power supply. They are much less hassle.

I am certainly no fan of Clinton or his "govern by the poll results"
method of rule.

GWB may not know all the answers, and he may not be the smartest of our presidents, but he has deep rooted convictions and a strong set of moral principles. Principles which he is sticking with, despite protests and other backlash from the left fringe.

I admire that much more than someone who changes their "opinion", based on the numbers in any given popularity poll.

They shouldn't agree. Tnom is right, it's about the electrical length of the shield. When the antenna end of the shield is grounded (as it should be) then having a half-wavelength of SHIELD (18 feet, or any multiple thereof) ensures that the radio will also be at RF ground, REGARDLESS of the transmission line characteristics of the coax, and
REGARDLESS of SWR. That is the ONLY reason for having 18 feet of coax.

After all the argument about this topic, it boggles the mind that nobody has bothered to sit down and read a stinking book!

That 8 year old post, is what I sent you in the email, which you "claim"
went through Villavona. Well, you're partially right, it did go through Villanova, 8 years ago. I never disputed that. So yes, it would be verified as originating there from that time period in 1995. But it did not originate there in Novemeber 2002, when I sent it to you via E-Mail from my current ISP.

Maybe I could, but unlike you, I have better things to do, then play without crying to the teacher......

I wouldn't know, since there is no evidence that they were ever contacted, or given the opportunity to verify the date at which this message transmitted.

But that is all unnecessary, since Google has it there for all to see.

You cannot differentiate between deliberate deception, and simple humility. Yes, I have a "fair" grasp at networking, but I'm not a genius. I know people, who are far better than I am. But I have built several computers, have run BBSes, so I am somewhat "savvy". And I do know how simple routing protocols work.

You may be too young to remember this, but at once time, disrespecting a police officer was a citable offense. And it was long before
"Bush/Ashcroft" came on the scene and have been attempting to correct
the wrongs created by the last generation of liberals, who think respect and personal responsibility, are optional.

One of the wonderful things about this country, is that everyone has the right to express themselves. But with that right comes the responsibility to know when some subjects are just not in good taste, or not appreciated by other people.

Flaunting your "rights", while at the same time disrespecting other people and their rights, is a sign of immaturity, and lack of moral character.

You want nudity and gutter language? Go rent a movie. No one will stop you. But you have no right to insist that the rest of the population be subjected to this type of barbarism. Believe it or not, there are still some decent moral people, and they have rights too.

For short lengths copper is better, because it is more conductive. The difference is not large.
Radio shack sells a suitable antenna wire in rolls.
You want fairly thick wire, because copper is relatively soft, and will stretch over time.

> does it matter if you use braded or solid wire for dipole?

Not as far as it being an antenna.. Mechanically, stranded wire is better, it takes flexing easier.

Bullshit. You don;'t like what you're hearing seeing or reading, remove YOURSELF, not the one you feel is offensive. But that kind of sheopled rhetoric is just what we come to expect from a sheople who proudly claims he will blindly follow and stand behind his government whether they are "right OR wrong".

Their rights do not extend to the "right" of silencing, censoring, or infringing on anothers persuit of happiness, whatever that may be. You are coRnfused again, perplexed over "rights" and "laws" and illustrated

Doesn't really matter, but copper-clad steel antenna wire is best. It gives the strength of steel with the conductivity of copper.

It doesn't really matter, but stranded wire will be able to flex in the wind better.

You were never taught how to "fight" (for lack f your vocabulary and a better term) read: debate) effectively,,the folly is, you think and feel you are somewhat effective when you lose each and every debate ever presented to you through insult. Your beliefs and interpretations and

Bush has lied and lied and lied and so has Powell....they were caught images they claimed showed massive buildups on the Iraqi border (they showed no such things) that were used as a means of deploying more troops. Check your history..Powell employed the same strategy in 91 with phony satellite interpretations and the lovely St. Petersburg Times was catapulted into the world spotlight by obtaining their own images at a place there.......... they recently employed the same sorry ass attempt

I am. Why can't someone be both?

>......it is hard to be both

I never thought so. From my perspective, the radios may be different, and sometimes the subjects are different, but I conduct myself the same way. It's all about putting your voice over the air, and having people to talk to.

>i think you are tilting at windmills if you want to change anything.

You may be right. But if everyone gave up trying, then we'd have no one to blame, but ourselves, for the sorry state that we find ourselves in.

> forget about it and enjoy........if someone stomps a electronic muddhole in > your radio transmissions , change channels.

A simple concept, but ineffective when all the channels are clogged with the same crud, when the skip is running. Time will provide us with some relief, once cycle 23 is history. Then, hopefully, we can enjoy CB again.

>so you can talk on your 4 watt pep radio to all your little buddies.

That's all it normally takes, when the conditions are not clogged with interference.

> of course.....i do not understand why some people never seem to be able to let > go of cb
once they have become hams.

That depends on the reason why someone becomes a ham in the first place. If someone is truly looking to "escape" the lawlessness of CB, and does not have any ties, or history, to leave behind, then they generally can make a clean break and never look back. I, on the other hand, had a TON of fun on CB, for many years. Ham radio, for me, was meant to augment, not replace, CB. Although, it's getting tougher and tougher to find decent local people to "fun around with", without running across the undesirable element.

>...to me, i was always told that ham was > a step up and most hams once they become hams do not come

Those are hams that are either ashamed of, or deny their roots on CB.

Others have no problem switch hitting.

It doesn't mean that they do either.

I am aware that there are certain leftist propaganda regurgitators, who would like to give the impression that GWB's policies are less than honest. But these folks have their own (not so) hidden agendas that fuel their motives.

> Bush has lied and lied and lied and so has Powell.

And Richard C. Hoagland claims that NASA is covering up the truth about the "face on Mars". Photos can be doctored, and anyone can make any claim that they wish, but it does not automatically disprove an earlier claim. Again, you have to consider the motivation and agendas of the Bush detractors, when assesing their credibility, WRT any "evidence"
that they may present.

I am unaware of any such story. It obviously wasn''t newsworthy (AKA credible) enough to make it to the big time news.

....Now,,Powell
> admitted he lied about this, (only AFTER he learned what the Times had

Sometimes you have to do what you have to do to preserve the American way of life. I am surprised at the few very vocal detractors, who enjoy all of the benefits of our freedom, and general prosperity, attempting to undermine the very mechanism that keeps those freedoms alive and well. Those of us, who were alive in the 1930's, and remember when Hitler "wasn't such a bad guy", can only gasp in shock at the striking parallels between then and the situation that we are facing today.
Pacifists delayed any action against Hitler, and it was only after the full magnitude of his attrocities were learned, did public sentiment, and common sense, override the defeatist "peace at all costs" mentality, and we took action. But because we waited, it took longer to win and the cost in lives lost was greater. Many, even today, have no idea of just how close Hitler had come, to perfecting a long range missle, and how he was well past the learning curve on a nuke of his own. Had we waited another 6 months or a year, and we might be speaking German right now.
Should we make the same mistake, and wait until Saddam develops a nuke, and launches it against Israel, or gasses more of his own dissidents, or another 9/11 happens here? Should we send the message to the terrorists that our resolve has weakened and we don't have the stomach for the battle, thereby opening the door to more terrorist attacks? When you are dealing with a barbaric, primal mindset, weakness is something you dare not show.

I suggest all those, who think that Saddam isn't such a bad guy, and that the U.S. gov't is "wrong", spend a little time living in these countries, under their oppresive rule, and then come back tell us how
"wrong" we are.

That 8 year old message was EXACTLY what I sent you. You have even reprinted it yourself, and I have a copy of it as well. I can't believe you are so dense as to not see it, or so arrogant and defiant to not accept it when the proof is presented to you.

The rest of your BS is not worth commenting on. It's plain to see, for anyone even remotely interested in our mutual mudslinging, that I've presented the evidence, and referenced the source, and your continual insistance that I've somehow lied, in the face of all this, is even more telling as to your sociopathic tendancies.

You go ahead and believe whatever you want. You go ahead and think that I'm Mark Salyzen's alter ego, or whatever. I've made the case to anyone with a reasonable intelligence. What you think is irrelevant.

That is purely an inconsiderate attitude. People have the right to enjoy life, without being subject to the perverse, primal, urges of a segment of our society that has somehow de-evolved. You want to watch porn all day long, great! Rent the movies and watch them in your trailer. But you have no right to demand that your crap be blasted all over the air, for people to see, even if they don't wish to. There is such a thing as over the line. Just as while you may have the right to listen to a "boom box", you don't have the right to disturb other people with it at 2:00 AM.

That you would see it that way, once again underscores your underlying contempt for the rest of society, hence your diagnoses of APD. You believe that you have the right to do anything you want and the hell with everyone else. An arrogant, self-centered, inconsiderate, and immature attitude.

tales of societal woe and decline.

Once again, immaterial..and utilizing ME as an example with porn and a

Your lid-status is way beyond your control, today, Davey,,but as you say, it's not rooted in anger, so it must be rooted in contempt and malice. You have dilemmas.

You have lied many times, Davey,,from the Phelps down to the cber IN Philly, NOT in Philly..your remiss at insults notwithstanding, speaks much more concerning the lid status you continually deny. You fail at effective debate, you fail at deliberate and malicious misattributions, you fail at communication, and you fail to employ the hammie creed...your reasons are irrelevant and anothers personal life does not negate your inferiorities and actions.

I do. I believe what I see for myself, not what some cantankerous hammie that has a reputation of unconditionally defending the likes of N8, and one who has no self-control when it comes to topic and insult tells me to believe. It's part of what makes you so deranged and unhinged...it all boils down to a control issue, something which you have never been able to get a grip on or manage...easily recognized by your unending quest of personal info on strangers on the internet whom you have demonstrated personal discord with, merely so you can use the info for fomentation.

>You go ahead and think that I'm Mark >Salyzen's alter ego, or whatever.

And you go ahead and continue to fail with the false innuendos that you desperately cling to and try to attribute to me,,,such as the above.

You're washed up..your hand has been played and your altruistic tendencies are there for all to see.....watching you defend your incoherent ramblings, behaviors and self-contradictions makes for a sunshiney day.

That's right. What's relevant, is watching the extent you manage to go to portray yourself in a manner other than what you are viewed.

It is again quite obvious that you have no concept of reality. Wax the nozzle in a quarter car wash.

Or are you intending to take your car through an automated car wash?
I hope not, but seeing evidence of your logic on this group I just had Great. No doubt about it...partisanship is responsible for dividing this country and you have done more than your share at fostering such on this group. Now, allow us to try again with you,..you MUST get past this notion that if you aren't aware of something,, it can't be true.

> But these folks have their own (not so) hidden >agendas that fuel their motives.

Agreed, which is why we need cohesiveness instead of the partisanship you play. You do the same thing with cb and hammies.....you seek divisiveness, not cohesiveness...THAT,,is part of the problem with this country...people like you who would rather condemn history rather than unite and focus on the present.

Bush has lied and lied and lied and so has Powell.

>According to whom?

Geez, Davey,,how old are you? Did you not pay attention at all during 91? Do you know nothing of the history of that "maneuvered invasion"? Merely expressing doubt over this is reason enough to drop this subject.

..they were caught
plagiarizing british intelligence reports as well as the satellite images they claimed showed massive buildups on the Iraqi border (they showed no such things) that were used as a means of deploying more troops.

That's right..YOU claimed you are behind the government "Right or Wrong" so why would any reasonable freedom lover and advocate look to you or Bush for "evidence" of Hussein's threat when you very clearly indicate it's not needed in your blind ambition to follow him on nothing but his word which has been ADMITTEDLY false in the past..all in the name of national security, of course.

Check your history..Powell employed the same strategy in 91 with phony satellite interpretations and the lovely St. Petersburg Times was catapulted into the world spotlight by obtaining their own images at a substantial cost to debunk the lie that Powell told.

Natch. So then again, it must not be true.

Oh, but Davey, it DID..were you in a drunken stupor when the news broke across the AP wire and went world wide? Did you miss the words used above describing the times "Catapult into the national spotlight"? Never mind..you haven't a clue what you're speaking of..merely blindl following the sheople,,,,, like a good number should.

...Now,,Powell
admitted he lied about this, (only AFTER he learned what the Times had done) much later, and chalked it up to "National Security"..Powell also was heavily involved in the vietnamese coverup of the massacre that took place there.......... they recently employed the same sorry ass attempt with the satellite pics........with the same results.

You failed to asnwer why Hussein is any more important or of a threat than Syria, Belarus, China, Singapore, N. Korea,,I can go on Davey..ALL these countries have human rights abuses as bad or WORSE than Hussein, and the same or higher tech ballistics and weapons of mass destruction than Hussein.

>Should we send the message to the terrorists >that our resolve has weakened and we don't >have the stomach for the battle, thereby >opening the door to more terrorist attacks?

We already did by failing in the hunt for Bin Laden..that is exactly what we have demonstrated.....what happened to "Osama is responsible...he can not run..he can not hide..he is our number one priority..and for the atrocities he committed against the US, we will hunt him down like the animal he is..and I promise,,he will be brought to justice..he is our number one priority and we will spare no expense until he is brought to justice".
Now, Davey, here we have Hussein being called an infidel by Osama,,,Hussein isn't even Muslim..so how do you defend Bush' stance that Hussein is now "Osama in disguise" or even had a hand in anything of Osamas doing? Oh, excuse me, that's correct, you need no defense, nor explanations..you blindly follow the will of the government, right or wrong.
I truly understand how a freedom lover like me can provoke one who holds Orwellian-like beliefs with mere words, sans insult.

What about the rest of these rulers that fit that description to a "T"?
Where were you and your mouthpiece for war when China puled the massacre in Tianamen Square? We have N Korea who DEFINITELY has nukes and is directly threatening us..we have Hussein who we aren't even certain if he has nukes,,who is NOT threatening us, yet we must "bomb" him, even though the entire world knows he will not attack the US unprovoked..

Stop it, Hall.
your bullshit stops here. No one is disputing he isn't a bad guy, and I must take this opportunity to show the hypocrisy you have just illustrated. You cry about those who hold an "agenda" against the president, yet you commit the exact same offense against those that you whine about, by claiming those who are against an Iraqi war somehow think Hussein isn't such a bad guy. No dice, Davey. Being a "bad guy" does not constitute war. Did you ever stop to think why we have republican manufactured wars on crime, drugs, terror, etc..but not one,,not one single war against homelessness or poverty or the mentally deficient? "Cause there ain't no $$ in it and THAT, even you can not dispute..same with these other dictators I mentioned....they have no oil.

so dave, you think by getting on a internet forum and arguing these moot points you can somehow save the cb band......i am sorry but i beg to differ on that....you cannot......frankly i think some of you guys whining about skipland, etc, and overpowered radio systems on 11 meters are wasting bandwidth getting on this newsgroup complaining about it. try and talk to those that you are complaining about here....i assure you. they will not listen, because they were taught, as have many that power talks and bullshit walks......and if you have to ask for a break , you aren't going to get it........you take the break...and the weaker station has to stand by......i myself....i did not make these rules........these rules , whether you are anyone else likes it, have been in effect from day one almost on cb..........hell, a guy turns on his cb and some guy a thousand miles away sounds like he is right next door......so the government says we cannot talk more than 150 miles......give me a break......i think that the hams did not want 11 meters so they gave it up and they really don't want it back either..........i disagree that hams who were cbers do not talk about their cb roots because they are ashamed of it.......they just don't bring it up........of all the things to do on the ham bands, talking about cb stuff is not one of the more important subjects......and i dare say most hams do not care what goes on in the 11 meter band as well....they do not care if anyone pumps it up on 11 meters....they could care less...all they ask is that you keep it on 11 meters, which is fine with me.......now i have talked sometimes out of band, but it really doesn't matter.........i have not done it in years.........doesn't do anything for me...hanging around the tracks is my thing.........so i think you guys who hang around here complaining have a chip on your shoulder about all of this and have a ax to grind so to speak, and you cannot get your message across anywhere else so you do it here, where a captive audience has to under these conditions read it and put up with it......you say, that all of the channels are full of crud.........well hell, man you are a ham.....turn on your ham set and get to gettin..........you are a ham guy dave, not a cber.......admit it......and we can end this qso right now..............

New UN Resolution Re: Twistedhed

(NEW YORK) From 2000 to 2003, more than 3732 posts were made by Twistedhed. Numerous puppies were beaten. Untold numbers of Federal laws were broken. International Radio Treaties were broken. Truth and sanity is the ultimate victim of the Twisteheds "regime of one". RESOLVED that Twistedhed is not acceptable in any law-abiding society. The results of a general vote are a call for a complete unilateral ban on Twistedhed. To that end, we demand the following:

* Twitstedhed must relinquish his keyclowning and freebanding gear, plus relinqush his webtv account. Alternately he may voluntarily go into exile.

* Twistedhed must destroy all keyclowning and freebanding equipment and provide proof of destruction.

* Twistedhed must agree to allow ARRL inspectors on site free access to investigate reports of freebanding equipment and keyclowning gear on his premises.

* Twistedhed must allow U2 and other surveillance satellite overflights of his property and premises.

*All of the above must be accomplished by March 5, 2003.

*If Twistedhed does not cooperate by the deadline we will lead a coalition to disarm him.

The United Nations supports recognition of a culture free from Twisted's opinions, support for international radio treaties general and complete banishment of Twistedhed.

Subject: Leland Scott Is Innocent View: Complete Thread (5 articles)

To Whom It May Concern:

As far as we know Leland Scott has done nothing except to occasionally speak out in disapproval of illegal CB operation in this public forum. He is not now, and has not ever partipated in organized Anti-KeyClown or TwistedhedTweakers actions.

To the best of our knowledge, he has posted nothing under any screen name except his own. We who opose Twistedhed respect Leland for his views and wish to go on record as stating that he has no ties to us or any other AntiKeyclown personnel. We are soley responsible for all tweaking, baiting, and embarassing of Twistedhed.

Mr. Twistedhed has, as usual, succumbed to his own half-baked and deluded theories about who is doing what to whom. He has barked up many trees, all of them wrong. It has been a pitiable, laughable spectacle, and one that we have enjoyed immensely.

But the time has come for Twisted to apologize to Leland Scott. Following this, he must spare himself further shame and embarassment and leave this newsgroup for good.

Sincerely,
Anti-Twistedhed Group

$500.00 for an UNUSED Cobra 2000 in the box.

What you see on ebay are usually modified and aveage about $300.00. I paid $285.00 for a virgin (used but unmodified) 2000.

I've had an alignment and a super tune by Bill Good. All the switches are original and there are no extra holes or controls. No channels either! Now its worth about $375.00. But its used.

The coating isn't a significant factor, but I'd be a little nervous in that this is probably soft copper and will sag significantly (and detune) over time. No radio shacks locally? They also carry the end ("egg" or "dogbone") insulators that you need to finish the ends, and hang the dipole from.
Don't use metal wire to suspend the dipole, or it will become part of the antenna, and complicate things. :) Nylon cord works well.

One other source, sort of non-linear solution, would be to use CATV overhead coax.
Cut it to length, connect to the shield, ignore the center conductor, and suspend it by the steel suspension wire. The steel holds the weight, and the shield becomes your nice RF conductor.
The impedance of the coax dosen't matter, because you aren't using it as coax.

Most dipoles end up with the balun and feedline hanging from the center unsupported, so it's not just the weight of the dipole wire itself.

Greetings! I have the following for sale in US only. US Postal money orders only please. All prices include shipping via UPS.

1. Radio Shack TRC-485 side band mobile. Works great. Dead on frequency. 2 holes were drilled in bottom by someone for mobile mounting. Radio is an 8 of 10 in appearance. Radio comes with Radio Shack power hand mike. This radio has a frequency readout display. $75.00 shipped.

2. Radio Shack TRC-495 AM only base. Radio works great and is 8 of 10 on appearance. Comes with stock Realistic 5 pin din mike. Meter light is burned out. All else is a okay. $60.00 shipped.

3. Diesel #4-36 echo power emergency sounds mike. Wired with 5 pin din. Echo works intermittently. It needs to be rewired at plug. Loose wire in there. Probably why echo is intermittent. All else works. Good modulation. $25.00 shipped.

4. 18 various unpowered hand mikes. Cobra, Realistic. SBE, LRE, etc. Some with plugs, some without. $15.00 shipped.

5. Teaberry T-Command 40 channel base. It has 59 extra channels added. Some lowers and some uppers. FM also added. Clock works as does all else. Light over clock is burned out. Radio is 6 of 10 or better on appearance. Radio has great audio, but not the best receive. Great for local QSOs, but distant stations can be hard to copy. I never could get a power mike to work on this radio, it always wanted to squeel. A hand mike works fine, but will come without one. Not hard to wire as it is a 4 pin screw on plug. This is a nice old radio. $65.00 shipped.

6. 2 each Turner SSB+2 desk mikes. Also, 1 only Turner Super Side Kick desk mike. $20.00 each shipped or all 3 for $50.00 shipped.

I have several 23 channel mobiles and a couple bases for cheap. None with side band. If interested in them or if you have any questions feel free to e-mail me. Thanks a bunch! Jon.

Survival Bill,
The 'kind' of wire used for a dipole should have
two physical characteristics. It should be conductive.
It should be able to support it's own weight and maybe the weight ot the feed line. Other than that, it doesn't matter a whole lot...

skin effect: The tendency of alternating current to flow near the surface of a conductor, thereby restricting the current to a small part of the total cross-sectional area and increasing the resistance to the flow of current. Note: The skin effect is caused by the self-inductance of the conductor, which causes an increase in the inductive reactance at high frequencies, thus forcing the carriers, i.e., electrons, toward the surface of the conductor. At high frequencies, the circumference is the preferred criterion for predicting resistance than is the cross-sectional area. The depth of penetration of current can be very small compared to the diameter.

4903. TWISTEDHED COMPLYING WITH UN RESOLUTION - BUT JUST BARELY

OLDSMAR, Fla (March 1) - U.N. inspectors confirmed Saturday that Twistedhed had begun destroying some of his freeband gear and keyclowning equipment and had agreed to a timetable to scrap the rest of it within a matter of weeks.

Deputy chief inspector for the ARRL, Ed Handy said at least one keyclown radio was partially destroyed when a dog urinated on it but the process was going more slowly than expected.

Handy also said termination of the WebTV account was under way Saturday although he gave no further details.

AntiKeyClowns were not impressed with the destruction of a single keyclown radio.

"Our resolution called for complete, total and immediate ban on Twistedhed's illegal activities. It did not call for pieces of it" said an AKC spokesman. "We always predicted that Twisted would destroy a radio or two as part of his game of deception."

"The timetable for destroying the rest of the gear and associated email accounts had been agreed upon. He said the timetable for destruction was "a matter of a few days or a very short few weeks."

He added that it would be in Twistedhed's interest to accelerate compliance.

Actually, the discussion is not about newsgroup postings, Stephen.
It is about people responding to newsgroup postings by email. And, given that, I have to agree with the others here - newsgroup discussions should be kept in the newsgroups. An email response is too personal, when a personal response
was neither expected or invited.

A long, long time ago
twithed still remembers how his daddy used to made him suck
he knew if he had his chance
for gay sex he’d drop his pants
and get his pooper reamed out
for a while

Sucking cock makes twhithed quiver shakes him to his lily liver
fagness in the truckstop
as twhithed eats that dick glop
Twhithed fag will whine and cry
but the anti-boys will never die
and keyclowns will suck both far and wide
until the CB dies...

So, hey hey that twithed’s so gay
he’s a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ‘em til he dies.....
Twit sucks ‘em til he dies....

twithed loves a gay sex slave
and writing in sporadic waves
and his bible is play girl
he believes in anal hole
and licking on a jizz filled pole
he’ll teach ya how to suck reeeeeeal slow

now we KNOW twithed’s in love with dick
just watch him kneel and start to lick
he stops his drugs and booze
to slurp up that pulsing goo
he’s a lonely fag ass gayboy suck
with a camper shell on his pickup truck
wow the truckers sure are all in luck
the day the CB died

So, hey hey that twithed’s so gay
he’s a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ‘em til he dies

Now for many years twits been a fag
sucks cock each day until he gags
and thats also how it used to be...

Twithed sucked for landshark queen
and sideband too cuz he’s so mean
to that great hammie named N8

and while twithed bobbed up and down
they all called him a fag keyclown
dumb twithed never learns
and his sphincter always burns

and while train fag read from “CB Tricks”
twit sucked 8 or ten more dicks
look at how that punk ass licks...
The day the CB died...

And we were singin...hey hey that twithed’s so gay
he’s a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ‘em til he dies.....

helter skelter in the summer swelter
twit sucks hard cock in a city park shelter
eight times a day and does it faaast!
He’ll suck yer dick on the grass
you dont even have to make a pass
cuz he loves throbbing dripping boner up the ass
the keyclowns whipped out their little bones
and twithed licked ‘em till they moaned
Chapwoman stuck his tongue out
for a pulsing throbbing jizz gout

the FCC then took the field
the keyclown fags just whined and squealed
cuz 11 meters was repealed
the day the CB died....

So, hey hey that twithed’s so gay
he’s a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ‘em til he dies.....

The keyclown fags were all in one place
as twithed talked of saucers from space
and that they had to start again
so twit be nimble and twit be quick suck upon a truckers dick cuz jizz is a keyclowns only friend

and as he watched amps melted down
he knew they were all just fag keyclowns
no more five five five
no more keyclown jive
and as the flames climbed high into the night
they saw the end of their faggot fight

and Riley laughing with delight
the day the CB died

So, hey hey that twithed’s so gay
he’s a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ‘em til he dies.....

FINAL VERSE

He saw Dweebo on drugs and booze
and asked him for some happy news
but he just smiled and said “I’m Gay”
He went down to the CB store
Where he first learned to be a gay sex whore
but the man there said that he was just too queer

And in the streets the children screamed
as the ran like hell from twisty queen
But no keyclowns were speaking
no more CB’s needed peaking

And the 2 men twithed sucked the most
his father, and son, as he loved to boast
they got busted and they were toast...
The day the CB died...

So, hey hey that twithed’s so gay
he’s a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side

Stranded wire does have less skin effect than for the same size diameter solid (less resistance as well). However the difference in skin effect between stranded and solid for a dipole at 27 Mhz is so small as for all practical purposed to be nonexistent.

Do you mean like a no-ground-plane antenna? They use the coax for the >effect is?

I know what skin effect is, but I have never heard of anyone preferring stranded over solid because of it. If stranded wire had better surface conduction properties it would be chosen over solid wire for RF coils in tuners and other circuits. I'm sure you already know that solid wire is used, and usually it's silver plated as well.
So I would like to know why Brian uses stranded wire because of skin effect.

You're not going to need much more than about 7 amps to run the grant.. What I'd do, is find a nice 3 or 4 amp power supply, run the output of that to a car battery (put it in an aluminum pan in case it leaks), and run the radio off the car battery. The 3-4 amp supply shouldn't be much more than about 20 or 30 bucks, and the battery will cost about the same.

The supply will charge the battery while you're not transmitting, and the battery will serve two purposes. First, it'll filter out the supply, providing clean power to the radio. Second, it'll be there to provide power in case the lights go out, the phones are down, and you need to call for help.

Think about it... a 30 amp supply for $100.00 which requires the power from the electric company to be on for your radio to work, or a 600+ amp supply (with several DAYS of standby power in case of a prolonged power outage) for $60.00 or so.

This is how I run the two 2M rigs, the two HF rigs, the CB, the soundcard interface, the CI-V interface, and all the switching networks on my base station at home, and I have yet to have problems with power to my radios.

Just an idea.

It is, where practical. Ever heard of Litz wire?

In TVs and monitors, there is usually a particular coil in the horizontal deflection ckt that passes HUGE currents, made with multistrand wire, and often biased with a permanent magnet to double it's current carrying capacity without saturating the core.

Same but different here, a samlex charger I got cheap on ebay, and gell cell.
I do SSTV at 100W with no problems, that's continuous output for 30S at a time, and I've never had to shut down because of battery droop.

Our EOC station is the same way, small power supply, big battery.
I highly reccomend an "aw shit" fuse at the battery of about 60A, with spares on hand.

We OWN FAGGOT TWISTY <weowntwistyfag@yahoo.com>, who is really Douglas W. Adair N8WWM, a federal criminal from Toledo Ohio, was featured in the Rain Report recently for violating Federal Communications Law. This would normally be just another example of an unpleasant, obese social retard with a ham license, but Douglas W. Adair N8WWM had, for a number of years prior to his violations, harassed and forged others, complained about eBay auctions and abused usenet regularly to combat FCC rule violations as an "antikeyclown".

Details and audio at http://www.geocities.com/chiprshredr

Thus, Douglas W. Adair is a ridiculous hypocrite (with the tiniest, daintiest little hands ever seen on a grown man). Fortunately, he doesn't have the good sense to lay low and continues to post his uniquely imbecilic rants, somehow hoping his hypocrisy will be forgotten. This presents a great opportunity for those of us who enjoy verbally clubbing Douglas W. Adair N8WWM like a helpless, fag-laming baby seal.

With that in mind, here is evidence that not only is Douglas W. Adair N8WWM a federal criminal (see link above), but that he is also a homosexual and a pedophile due to his writing of a long and creepy song (deleted for brevity) featuring the following references to gay sex and children, specifically young boys :

At 27 Mhz Litz wire has no advantages... at 15Khz yes...

What's funny is how readily you cuddle up to a trolling, nymshifting 'tard an intellectually myopic, bitter ol' windbag, you'd stick to tech topics and

The fact is that a single strand of stranded wire has no better conduction... you are correct there... but you you forgot an important point. That point being that for a given wire "overall diameter", the stranded having multiple strands, it has less loss to the "skin effect".

It's obvious that you have no confidence in doing a neat job with the
wax. Wax, unlike silicone is cut by detergent.

You replied in French to a message written in English. If you cannot see how this could be seen as rude, then you have much to learn about life. If you can understand a language well enough to understand and reply to the message, then you can reply in the same language.

Maybe your English is not perfect but it's better than my French, and a poor grasp of the English language never stops Georgina from posting messages.
As I don't speak French, I find Pidgin[illegible] better that Frog.

If you hear two people talking on a frequency, using FM... would you try to break in using SSB?

Peter.

They shouldn't agree. Tnom is right, it's about the electrical length of the shield. When the antenna end of the shield is grounded (as it should be) then having a half-wavelength of SHIELD (18 feet, or any multiple thereof) ensures that the radio will also be at RF ground, REGARDLESS of the transmission line characteristics of the coax, and
REGARDLESS of SWR. That is the ONLY reason for having 18 feet of coax.

After all the argument about this topic, it boggles the mind that nobody has bothered to sit down and read a stinking book!

I am certainly no fan of Clinton or his "govern by the poll results"
method of rule.

GWB may not know all the answers, and he may not be the smartest of our presidents, but he has deep rooted convictions and a strong set of moral principles. Principles which he is sticking with, despite protests and other backlash from the left fringe.

I admire that much more than someone who changes their "opinion", based on the numbers in any given popularity poll.

That 8 year old post, is what I sent you in the email, which you "claim"
went through Villavona. Well, you're partially right, it did go through Villanova, 8 years ago. I never disputed that. So yes, it would be verified as originating there from that time period in 1995. But it did not originate there in Novemeber 2002, when I sent it to you via E-Mail from my current ISP.

Maybe I could, but unlike you, I have better things to do, then play whining crybaby to people's ISP's. I'm a man, I can fight my battles without crying to the teacher......

I wouldn't know, since there is no evidence that they were ever contacted, or given the opportunity to verify the date at which this message transmitted.

But that is all unnecessary, since Google has it there for all to see.

You cannot differentiate between deliberate deception, and simple humility. Yes, I have a "fair" grasp at networking, but I'm not a genius. I know people, who are far better than I am. But I have built several computers, have run BBSes, so I am somewhat "savvy". And I do know how simple routing protocols work.

Generally speaking, a switching power supply does its "magic" by rapidly switching (hence the name) line voltage on and off, at a rate dependant on load. This switching, causes RF to be generated, and the squarewave nature of the switching, generates tons of harmonics, which can be heard as a "hash" noise in many receivers. Since this "noise" is radiated into the air, in many cases, line filters will do little to help. The best course of action is to tightly shield the supply and make sure it is grounded. Later designed power supplies are a bit better, but IMHO, I'd opt for a good old fashioned linear regulated power supply. They are much less hassle.

You may be too young to remember this, but at once time, disrespecting a police officer was a citable offense. And it was long before
"Bush/Ashcroft" came on the scene and have been attempting to correct
the wrongs created by the last generation of liberals, who think respect

One of the wonderful things about this country, is that everyone has the right to express themselves. But with that right comes the responsibility to know when some subjects are just not in good taste, or not appreciated by other people.

Flaunting your "rights", while at the same time disrespecting other people and their rights, is a sign of immaturity, and lack of moral character.

You want nudity and gutter language? Go rent a movie. No one will stop you. But you have no right to insist that the rest of the population be subjected to this type of barbarism. Believe it or not, there are still some decent moral people, and they have rights too.

I'm not sure what you mean by the phrase "less skin effect". For any given frequency, stranded wire has a higher resistance due to skin effect than solid (round) wire.

> However the difference

Depends. But for antennas at 27 MHz it's probably not going to make any noticable difference.

For short lengths copper is better, because it is more conductive. The difference is not large.
Radio shack sells a suitable antenna wire in rolls.
You want fairly thick wire, because copper is relatively soft, and will stretch over time.

> does it matter if you use braded or solid wire for dipole?

Not as far as it being an antenna.. Mechanically, stranded wire is better,
it takes flexing easier.

Doesn't really matter, but copper-clad steel antenna wire is best. It gives the strength of steel with the conductivity of copper.

It doesn't really matter, but stranded wire will be able to flex in the wind better.

showed no such things) that were used as a means of deploying more troops. Check your history..Powell employed the same strategy in 91 with phony satellite interpretations and the lovely St. Petersburg Times was catapulted into the world spotlight by obtaining their own images at a substantial cost to debunk the lie that Powell told.....Now,,Powell admitted he lied about this, (only AFTER he learned what the Times had done) much later, and chalked it up to "National Security"..Powell also was heavily involved in the vietnamese coverup of the massacre that took place there.......... they recently employed the same sorry ass attempt

I am. Why can't someone be both?

I never thought so. From my perspective, the radios may be different,
and sometimes the subjects are different, but I conduct myself the same way. It's all about putting your voice over the air, and having people to talk to.

You may be right. But if everyone gave up trying, then we'd have no one to blame, but ourselves, for the sorry state that we find ourselves in.

> forget about it and enjoy........if someone stomps a electronic muddhole in > your radio transmissions , change channels.

A simple concept, but ineffective when all the channels are clogged with the same crud, when the skip is running. Time will provide us with some relief, once cycle 23 is history. Then, hopefully, we can enjoy CB again.

>so you can talk on your 4 watt pep radio to all your little buddies.

That's all it normally takes, when the conditions are not clogged with interference.

> of course.....i do not understand why some people never seem to be able to let > go of cb
once they have become hams.

That depends on the reason why someone becomes a ham in the first place. If someone is truly looking to "escape" the lawlessness of CB, and does not have any ties, or history, to leave behind, then they generally can make a clean break and never look back. I, on the other hand, had a TON of fun on CB, for many years. Ham radio, for me, was meant to augment, not replace, CB. Although, it's getting tougher and tougher to find decent local people to "fun around with", without running across the undesirable element.

>...to me, i was always told that ham was
> a step up and most hams once they become hams do not come

Those are hams that are either ashamed of, or deny their roots on CB.

Others have no problem switch hitting.

I am aware that there are certain leftist propaganda regurgitators, who would like to give the impression that GWB's policies are less than honest. But these folks have their own (not so) hidden agendas that fuel their motives.

> Bush has lied and lied and lied and so has Powell.

And Richard C. Hoagland claims that NASA is covering up the truth about the "face on Mars". Photos can be doctored, and anyone can make any claim that they wish, but it does not automatically disprove an earlier claim. Again, you have to consider the motivation and agendas of the Bush detractors, when assesing their credibility, WRT any "evidence"
that they may present.

> Check your history..Powell employed the same strategy in 91 with

I am unaware of any such story. It obviously wasn''t newsworthy (AKA credible) enough to make it to the big time news.

....Now,,Powell

Sometimes you have to do what you have to do to preserve the American way of life. I am surprised at the few very vocal detractors, who enjoy all of the benefits of our freedom, and general prosperity, attempting to undermine the very mechanism that keeps those freedoms alive and well. Those of us, who were alive in the 1930's, and remember when Hitler "wasn't such a bad guy", can only gasp in shock at the striking parallels between then and the situation that we are facing today.
Pacifists delayed any action against Hitler, and it was only after the
full magnitude of his attrocities were learned, did public sentiment,
and common sense, override the defeatist "peace at all costs" mentality, and we took action. But because we waited, it took longer to win and the cost in lives lost was greater. Many, even today, have no idea of just how close Hitler had come, to perfecting a long range missle, and how he was well past the learning curve on a nuke of his own. Had we waited another 6 months or a year, and we might be speaking German right now.
Should we make the same mistake, and wait until Saddam develops a nuke,
and launches it against Israel, or gasses more of his own dissidents, or another 9/11 happens here? Should we send the message to the terrorists that our resolve has weakened and we don't have the stomach for the battle, thereby opening the door to more terrorist attacks? When you are dealing with a barbaric, primal mindset, weakness is something you dare not show.

I suggest all those, who think that Saddam isn't such a bad guy, and that the U.S. gov't is "wrong", spend a little time living in these countries, under their oppresive rule, and then come back tell us how
"wrong" we are.

That is purely an inconsiderate attitude. People have the right to enjoy life, without being subject to the perverse, primal, urges of a segment of our society that has somehow de-evolved. You want to watch porn all day long, great! Rent the movies and watch them in your trailer. But you have no right to demand that your crap be blasted all over the air, for people to see, even if they don't wish to. There is such a thing as over the line. Just as while you may have the right to listen to a "boom box", you don't have the right to disturb other people with it at 2:00 AM.

That you would see it that way, once again underscores your underlying contempt for the rest of society, hence your diagnoses of APD. You believe that you have the right to do anything you want and the hell with everyone else. An arrogant, self-centered, inconsiderate, and immature attitude.

YOU are a prime example of what's wrong with this country today.

That 8 year old message was EXACTLY what I sent you. You have even reprinted it yourself, and I have a copy of it as well. I can't believe you are so dense as to not see it, or so arrogant and defiant to not accept it when the proof is presented to you.

The rest of your BS is not worth commenting on. It's plain to see, for anyone even remotely interested in our mutual mudslinging, that I've presented the evidence, and referenced the source, and your continual insistance that I've somehow lied, in the face of all this, is even more telling as to your sociopathic tendancies.

You go ahead and believe whatever you want. You go ahead and think that I'm Mark Salyzen's alter ego, or whatever. I've made the case to anyone with a reasonable intelligence. What you think is irrelevant.

Not everyone agrees with you that our society has "de-evolved". Matter of FACT, you are in the minority once again believing such remarkable tales of societal woe and decline.

Once again, immaterial..and utilizing ME as an example with porn and a trailer is illustrating your inability to refrain from being a lid..no one mentioned porn (except YOU) and speaking of it,,,it was YOU that claimed you were in the illegal cb business with one who had a problem with pornography, so it appears you are speaking out of experience of the company you keep...trying to project such degrading filth from your

Your lid-status is way beyond your control, today, Davey,,but as you say, it's not rooted in anger, so it must be rooted in contempt and malice. You have dilemmas.

You have lied many times, Davey,,from the Phelps down to the cber IN Philly, NOT in Philly..your remiss at insults notwithstanding, speaks much more concerning the lid status you continually deny. You fail at effective debate, you fail at deliberate and malicious misattributions, you fail at communication, and you fail to employ the hammie creed...your reasons are irrelevant and anothers personal life does not negate your inferiorities and actions.

>You go ahead and believe whatever you want.

I do. I believe what I see for myself, not what some cantankerous hammie that has a reputation of unconditionally defending the likes of N8, and one who has no self-control when it comes to topic and insult tells me to believe. It's part of what makes you so deranged and unhinged...it all boils down to a control issue, something which you have never been able to get a grip on or manage...easily recognized by your unending quest of personal info on strangers on the internet whom you have demonstrated personal discord with, merely so you can use the info for fomentation.

>You go ahead and think that I'm Mark >Salyzen's alter ego, or whatever.

And you go ahead and continue to fail with the false innuendos that you desperately cling to and try to attribute to me,,,such as the above.

You're washed up..your hand has been played and your altruistic tendencies are there for all to see.....watching you defend your incoherent ramblings, behaviors and self-contradictions makes for a sunshiney day.

That's right. What's relevant, is watching the extent you manage to go to portray yourself in a manner other than what you are viewed.

It is again quite obvious that you have no concept of reality. Wax used in this manner will not come off with the careful/proper use of the nozzle in a quarter car wash.

Or are you intending to take your car through an automated car wash? I hope not, but seeing evidence of your logic on this group I just had to ask the question.

Great. No doubt about it...partisanship is responsible for dividing this country and you have done more than your share at fostering such on this group. Now, allow us to try again with you,..you MUST get past this notion that if you aren't aware of something,, it can't be true.

> But these folks have their own (not so) hidden >agendas that fuel their motives.

Agreed, which is why we need cohesiveness instead of the partisanship you play. You do the same thing with cb and hammies.....you seek divisiveness, not cohesiveness...THAT,,is part of the problem with this

Bush has lied and lied and lied and so has Powell.

>According to whom?

Geez, Davey,,how old are you? Did you not pay attention at all during 91? Do you know nothing of the history of that "maneuvered invasion"? Merely expressing doubt over this is reason enough to drop this subject.

That's right..YOU claimed you are behind the government "Right or Wrong" so why would any reasonable freedom lover and advocate look to you or Bush for "evidence" of Hussein's threat when you very clearly indicate it's not needed in your blind ambition to follow him on nothing but his word which has been ADMITTEDLY false in the past..all in the name of national security, of course.

Check your history..Powell employed the same strategy in 91 with phony satellite interpretations and the lovely St. Petersburg Times was catapulted into the world spotlight by obtaining their own images at a substantial cost to debunk the lie that Powell told.

Natch. So then again, it must not be true.

Oh, but Davey, it DID..were you in a drunken stupor when the news broke across the AP wire and went world wide? Did you miss the words used above describing the times "Catapult into the national spotlight"? Never mind..you haven't a clue what you're speaking of..merely blindl following the sheople,,,,, like a good number should.

...Now,,Powell
admitted he lied about this, (only AFTER he learned what the Times had done) much later, and chalked it up to "National Security"..Powell also was heavily involved in the vietnamese coverup of the massacre that took place there.......... they recently employed the same sorry ass attempt with the satellite pics........with the same results.

You failed to asnwer why Hussein is any more important or of a threat
than Syria, Belarus, China, Singapore, N. Korea,,I can go on Davey..ALL these countries have human rights abuses as bad or WORSE than Hussein, and the same or higher tech ballistics and weapons of mass destruction
than Hussein.

>Should we send the message to the terrorists >that our resolve has weakened and we don't >have the stomach for the battle, thereby >opening

We already did by failing in the hunt for Bin Laden..that is exactly what we have demonstrated.....what happened to "Osama is responsible...he can not run..he can not hide..he is our number one priority..and for the atrocities he committed against the US, we will hunt him down like the animal he is..and I promise,,he will be brought to justice..he is our number one priority and we will spare no expense
until he is brought to justice".
Now, Davey, here we have Hussein being called an infidel by Osama,,,Hussein isn't even Muslim..so how do you defend Bush' stance
that Hussein is now "Osama in disguise" or even had a hand in anything of Osamas doing? Oh, excuse me, that's correct, you need no defense, nor explanations..you blindly follow the will of the government, right or

What about the rest of these rulers that fit that description to a "T"?
Where were you and your mouthpiece for war when China puled the massacre in Tianamen Square? We have N Korea who DEFINITELY has nukes and is directly threatening us..we have Hussein who we aren't even certain if he has nukes,,who is NOT threatening us, yet we must "bomb" him, even though the entire world knows he will not attack the US unprovoked..

your bullshit stops here. No one is disputing he isn't a bad guy, and I must take this opportunity to show the hypocrisy you have just illustrated. You cry about those who hold an "agenda" against the president, yet you commit the exact same offense against those that you whine about, by claiming those who are against an Iraqi war somehow think Hussein isn't such a bad guy. No dice, Davey. Being a "bad guy" does not constitute war. Did you ever stop to think why we have republican manufactured wars on crime, drugs, terror, etc..but not one,,not one single war against homelessness or poverty or the mentally deficient? "Cause there ain't no $$ in it and THAT, even you can not dispute..same with these other dictators I mentioned....they have no oil.

> Dave

so dave, you think by getting on a internet forum and arguing these moot points you can somehow save the cb band......i am sorry but i beg to differ on that....you cannot......frankly i think some of you guys whining about skipland, etc, and overpowered radio systems on 11 meters are wasting bandwidth getting on this newsgroup complaining about it. try and talk to those that you are complaining about here....i assure you. they will not listen, because they were taught, as have many that power talks and bullshit walks......and if you have to ask for a break , you aren't going to get it........you take the break...and the weaker station has to stand by......i myself....i did not make these rules........these rules , whether you are anyone else likes it, have been in effect from day one almost on cb..........hell, a guy turns on his cb and some guy a thousand miles away sounds like he is right next door......so the government says we cannot talk more than 150 miles......give me a break......i think that the hams did not want 11 meters so they gave it up and they really don't want it back either..........i disagree that hams who were cbers do not talk about their cb roots because they are ashamed of it.......they just don't bring it up........of all the things to do on the ham bands, talking about cb stuff is not one of the more important subjects......and i dare say most hams do not care what goes on in the 11 meter band as well....they do not care if anyone pumps it up on 11 meters....they could care less...all they ask is that you keep it on 11 meters, which is fine with me.......now i have talked sometimes out of band, but it really doesn't matter.........i have not done it in years.........doesn't do anything for me...hanging around the tracks is my thing.........so i think you guys who hang around here complaining have a chip on your shoulder about all of this and have a ax to grind so to speak, and you cannot get your message across anywhere else so you do it here, where a captive audience has to under these conditions read it and put up with it......you say, that all of the channels are full of crud.........well hell, man you are a ham.....turn on your ham set and get to gettin..........you are a ham guy dave, not a cber.......admit it......and we can end this qso right now..............

Litzendraht wire is a bundle of individual solid wires that are insulated from each other. It isn't the same as 'stranded' wire, and it doesn't provide any advantage with freqs HF and above.

Horizontal deflection circuits operate around 15 KHz.

Permanent magnets are sometimes used to change the saturation characteristics of a core without affecting it's loss characteristics.
Is that what you are trying to say? And what does that have to do with the difference between stranded/solid wire and skin effect?

New UN Resolution Re: Twistedhed

(NEW YORK) From 2000 to 2003, more than 3732 posts were made by Twistedhed. Numerous puppies were beaten. Untold numbers of Federal laws were broken. International Radio Treaties were broken. Truth and sanity is the ultimate victim of the Twisteheds "regime of one". RESOLVED that Twistedhed is not acceptable in any law-abiding society. The results of a general vote are a call for a complete unilateral ban on Twistedhed. To that end, we demand the following:

* Twitstedhed must relinquish his keyclowning and freebanding gear, plus relinqush his webtv account. Alternately he may voluntarily go into exile.

* Twistedhed must destroy all keyclowning and freebanding equipment and provide proof of destruction.

* Twistedhed must agree to allow ARRL inspectors on site free access to investigate reports of freebanding equipment and keyclowning gear on his premises.

* Twistedhed must allow U2 and other surveillance satellite overflights of his property and premises.

*All of the above must be accomplished by March 5, 2003.

*If Twistedhed does not cooperate by the deadline we will lead a coalition to disarm him.

The United Nations supports recognition of a culture free from Twisted's opinions, support for international radio treaties general and complete banishment of Twistedhed.

To Whom It May Concern:

As far as we know Leland Scott has done nothing except to occasionally speak out in disapproval of illegal CB operation in this public forum. He is not now, and has not ever partipated in organized Anti-KeyClown or TwistedhedTweakers actions.

To the best of our knowledge, he has posted nothing under any screen name except his own. We who opose Twistedhed respect Leland for his views and wish to go on record as stating that he has no ties to us or any other AntiKeyclown personnel. We are soley responsible for all tweaking, baiting, and embarassing of Twistedhed.

Mr. Twistedhed has, as usual, succumbed to his own half-baked and deluded theories about who is doing what to whom. He has barked up many trees, all of them wrong. It has been a pitiable, laughable spectacle, and one that we have enjoyed immensely.

But the time has come for Twisted to apologize to Leland Scott. Following this, he must spare himself further shame and embarassment and leave this newsgroup for good.

Sincerely,
Anti-Twistedhed Group

$500.00 for an UNUSED Cobra 2000 in the box.

What you see on ebay are usually modified and aveage about $300.00. I paid $285.00 for a virgin (used but unmodified) 2000.

I've had an alignment and a super tune by Bill Good. All the switches are original and there are no extra holes or controls. No channels either! Now its worth about $375.00. But its used.

The coating isn't a significant factor, but I'd be a little nervous in that this is probably soft copper and will sag significantly (and detune) over time. No radio shacks locally? They also carry the end ("egg" or "dogbone") insulators that you need to finish the ends, and hang the dipole from.
Don't use metal wire to suspend the dipole, or it will become part of the antenna, and complicate things. :) Nylon cord works well.

One other source, sort of non-linear solution, would be to use CATV overhead coax.
Cut it to length, connect to the shield, ignore the center conductor, and suspend it by the steel suspension wire. The steel holds the weight, and the shield becomes your nice RF conductor.
The impedance of the coax dosen't matter, because you aren't using it as coax.

Most dipoles end up with the balun and feedline hanging from the center unsupported, so it's not just the weight of the dipole wire itself.

Greetings! I have the following for sale in US only. US Postal money orders only please. All prices include shipping via UPS.

1. Radio Shack TRC-485 side band mobile. Works great. Dead on frequency. 2 holes were drilled in bottom by someone for mobile mounting. Radio is an 8 of 10 in appearance. Radio comes with Radio Shack power hand mike. This radio has a frequency readout display. $75.00 shipped.

2. Radio Shack TRC-495 AM only base. Radio works great and is 8 of 10 on appearance. Comes with stock Realistic 5 pin din mike. Meter light is burned out. All else is a okay. $60.00 shipped.

3. Diesel #4-36 echo power emergency sounds mike. Wired with 5 pin din. Echo works intermittently. It needs to be rewired at plug. Loose wire in there. Probably why echo is intermittent. All else works. Good modulation. $25.00 shipped.

4. 18 various unpowered hand mikes. Cobra, Realistic. SBE, LRE, etc. Some with plugs, some without. $15.00 shipped.

5. Teaberry T-Command 40 channel base. It has 59 extra channels added. Some lowers and some uppers. FM also added. Clock works as does all else. Light over clock is burned out. Radio is 6 of 10 or better on appearance. Radio has great audio, but not the best receive. Great for local QSOs, but distant stations can be hard to copy. I never could get a power mike to work on this radio, it always wanted to squeel. A hand mike works fine, but will come without one. Not hard to wire as it is a 4 pin screw on plug. This is a nice old radio. $65.00 shipped.

6. 2 each Turner SSB+2 desk mikes. Also, 1 only Turner Super Side Kick desk mike. $20.00 each shipped or all 3 for $50.00 shipped.

I have several 23 channel mobiles and a couple bases for cheap. None with side band. If interested in them or if you have any questions feel free to e-mail me. Thanks a bunch! Jon.

Survival Bill,
The 'kind' of wire used for a dipole should have
two physical characteristics. It should be conductive.
It should be able to support it's own weight and maybe the weight ot the feed line. Other than that, it doesn't matter a whole lot...

skin effect: The tendency of alternating current to flow near the surface of a conductor, thereby restricting the current to a small part of the total cross-sectional area and increasing the resistance to the flow of current. Note: The skin effect is caused by the self-inductance of the conductor, which causes an increase in the inductive reactance at high frequencies, thus forcing the carriers, i.e., electrons, toward the surface of the conductor. At high frequencies, the circumference is the preferred criterion for predicting resistance than is the cross-sectional area. The depth of penetration of current can be very small compared to the diameter.

5024. TWISTEDHED COMPLYING WITH UN RESOLUTION - BUT JUST BARELY

OLDSMAR, Fla (March 1) - U.N. inspectors confirmed Saturday that Twistedhed had begun destroying some of his freeband gear and keyclowning equipment and had agreed to a timetable to scrap the rest of it within a matter of weeks.

Deputy chief inspector for the ARRL, Ed Handy said at least one keyclown radio was partially destroyed when a dog urinated on it but the process was going more slowly than expected.

Handy also said termination of the WebTV account was under way Saturday although he gave no further details.

AntiKeyClowns were not impressed with the destruction of a single keyclown radio.

"Our resolution called for complete, total and immediate ban on Twistedhed's illegal activities. It did not call for pieces of it" said an AKC spokesman. "We always predicted that Twisted would destroy a radio or two as part of his game of deception."

"The timetable for destroying the rest of the gear and associated email accounts had been agreed upon. He said the timetable for destruction was "a matter of a few days or a very short few weeks."

He added that it would be in Twistedhed's interest to accelerate compliance.

Actually, the discussion is not about newsgroup postings, Stephen.
It is about people responding to newsgroup postings by email. And, given that, I have to agree with the others here - newsgroup discussions should be kept in the newsgroups. An email response is too personal, when a personal response
was neither expected or invited.

A long, long time ago
twithed still remembers how his daddy used to made him suck
he knew if he had his chance
for gay sex he’d drop his pants
and get his pooper reamed out
for a while

Sucking cock makes twhithed quiver
shakes him to his lily liver
fagness in the truckstop
as twhithed eats that dick glop
Twhithed fag will whine and cry
but the anti-boys will never die
and keyclowns will suck both far and wide
until the CB dies...

So, hey hey that twithed’s so gay
he’s a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ‘em til he dies.....
Twit sucks ‘em til he dies....

twithed loves a gay sex slave
and writing in sporadic waves
and his bible is play girl
he believes in anal hole
and licking on a jizz filled pole
he’ll teach ya how to suck reeeeeeal slow

now we KNOW twithed’s in love with dick
just watch him kneel and start to lick
he stops his drugs and booze
to slurp up that pulsing goo
he’s a lonely fag ass gayboy suck
with a camper shell on his pickup truck
wow the truckers sure are all in luck
the day the CB died

So, hey hey that twithed’s so gay
he’s a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ‘em til he dies

Now for many years twits been a fag
sucks cock each day until he gags
and thats also how it used to be...

Twithed sucked for landshark queen
and sideband too cuz he’s so mean
to that great hammie named N8

and while twithed bobbed up and down
they all called him a fag keyclown
dumb twithed never learns
and his sphincter always burns

and while train fag read from “CB Tricks”
twit sucked 8 or ten more dicks
look at how that punk ass licks...
The day the CB died...

And we were singin...hey hey that twithed’s so gay
he’s a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ‘em til he dies.....

helter skelter in the summer swelter
twit sucks hard cock in a city park shelter
eight times a day and does it faaast!
He’ll suck yer dick on the grass
you dont even have to make a pass
cuz he loves throbbing dripping boner up the ass
the keyclowns whipped out their little bones
and twithed licked ‘em till they moaned
Chapwoman stuck his tongue out
for a pulsing throbbing jizz gout

the FCC then took the field
the keyclown fags just whined and squealed
cuz 11 meters was repealed
the day the CB died....

So, hey hey that twithed’s so gay
he’s a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ‘em til he dies.....

The keyclown fags were all in one place
as twithed talked of saucers from space
and that they had to start again
so twit be nimble and twit be quick
suck upon a truckers dick
cuz jizz is a keyclowns only friend

and as he watched amps melted down
he knew they were all just fag keyclowns
no more five five five
no more keyclown jive
and as the flames climbed high into the night
they saw the end of their faggot fight

and Riley laughing with delight
the day the CB died

So, hey hey that twithed’s so gay
he’s a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ‘em til he dies.....

FINAL VERSE

He saw Dweebo on drugs and booze
and asked him for some happy news
but he just smiled and said “I’m Gay”
He went down to the CB store
Where he first learned to be a gay sex whore
but the man there said that he was just too queer

And in the streets the children screamed
as the ran like hell from twisty queen
But no keyclowns were speaking
no more CB’s needed peaking

And the 2 men twithed sucked the most
his father, and son, as he loved to boast
they got busted and they were toast...
The day the CB died...

So, hey hey that twithed’s so gay

You're not going to need much more than about 7 amps to run the grant.. What I'd do, is find a nice 3 or 4 amp power supply, run the output of that to a car battery (put it in an aluminum pan in case it leaks), and run the radio off the car battery. The 3-4 amp supply shouldn't be much more than about 20 or 30 bucks, and the battery will cost about the same.

The supply will charge the battery while you're not transmitting, and the battery will serve two purposes. First, it'll filter out the supply, providing clean power to the radio. Second, it'll be there to provide power in case the lights go out, the phones are down, and you need to call for help.

Think about it... a 30 amp supply for $100.00 which requires the power from the electric company to be on for your radio to work, or a 600+ amp supply (with several DAYS of standby power in case of a prolonged power outage) for $60.00 or so.

This is how I run the two 2M rigs, the two HF rigs, the CB, the soundcard interface, the CI-V interface, and all the switching networks on my base station at home, and I have yet to have problems with power to my radios.

Just an idea.

Do you mean like a no-ground-plane antenna? They use the coax for the counterpoise and it's already cut to a specific length.

I know what skin effect is, but I have never heard of anyone preferring stranded over solid because of it. If stranded wire had better surface conduction properties it would be chosen over solid wire for RF coils in tuners and other circuits. I'm sure you already know that solid wire is used, and usually it's silver plated as well.
So I would like to know why Brian uses stranded wire because of skin effect.

It is, where practical. Ever heard of Litz wire?

In TVs and monitors, there is usually a particular coil in the horizontal deflection ckt that passes HUGE currents, made with multistrand wire, and often biased with a permanent magnet to double it's current carrying capacity without saturating the core.

Same but different here, a samlex charger I got cheap on ebay, and gell
cell.
I do SSTV at 100W with no problems, that's continuous output for 30S at a time, and I've never had to shut down because of battery droop.

Our EOC station is the same way, small power supply, big battery.
I highly reccomend an "aw shit" fuse at the battery of about 60A, with spares on hand.

Stranded wire does have less skin effect than for the same size diameter solid (less resistance as well). However the difference in skin effect between stranded and solid for a dipole at 27 Mhz is so small as for all practical purposed to be nonexistent.

At 27 Mhz Litz wire has no advantages... at 15Khz yes...

Not true. If you take a cross section of stranded wire, it appears to have more surface area around the outside of the conductor (seen as the whole bundle of strands). But RF doesn't see all those hills and valleys, it just sees the conductor as a circle. Draw a circle around that cross section with the same outside diameter, and with a thickness depending on the frequency/current penetration. You will see that stranded wire much less conducting surface area than solid wire, the diameters being equal.

I'm interested in contacting anyone in the Baltimore area experimenting with the new MURS radio service. Iv'e been monitoring the lower 3 (151mhz) frequencies for a week now, and have heard nothing-Nada! The upper 2 (154mhz) frequencies ARE busy with business traffic, most using PL tones and are not the hobbyist chit chat type.

I monitor Ch 1 151.820 and put out calls periodically, to no avail. I feel alone in the wilderness. Boo Hoo. I ID as Unit 827. WE are all pioneers in this new service. Let's get it going. What do you say?

Sorry, it is true. The current flows on the outside of the wire or strands. In the R.F. range a conductor of thin tubing will have just as low resistance as a solid conductor of the same diameter, bcause material not close to the surface carries prctillay no current.
Take the Circumference of each strand times the number of strands, that is the "effective" Circumference. The total will be more than the Circumference of a solid wire.

I beg to differ.

The current flows on the outermost part of the conductor, whether the conductor be solid or stranded.

You got that much right.

That's only true for Litz wire. With normal stranded wire the diameter of the conductor is the diameter of the bundle of strands.

> Brian is correct. Time to head back to the books

Neither of you are correct. Both of you are confusing Litz wire with normal stranded wire.

There is a firesale going on for the VHF mobile and handheld business band transceivers. I picked up 2 of each this week.

Mobile 19-1210
Sale price$44.97
2 ch (programable) choose from 9 freq.151.625,151.700,151.760,151.820*,151.880*,151.940*,151.955,154.570*,and 154.600*.
Info is available on the net to program any freq between 150.775-157.740Mhz. This works and is easy to do. *=MURS
38 ctcss sub tones.
1watt transmitt out of the box. MURS allows 2 watts. It's easily adjustable up to 5 watts.
Includes a rubber duck antennea with a PL-259/BNC adapter. So you can get on the air quickly as a base station.

Handheld 19-1206
Sale price $29.97
1 ch (programmable) like mobile. There is a (Hack) secret feature where you can program a 2nd channel and switch to it with the flip of a dip switch under the battery cover. Not mentioned in the instructions.
Battery- 7.2v 950mah pack
Wall wart charger
Rubber duck
38 ctcss sub tones

MURS ch 4&5 (154.570&154.600) are in heavy use here SW of Baltimore. I've heard nothing on the lower 3, so I'll be using them.
I plan to do extensive range testing soon and will report my findings when I do.

Get em while they're hot, cause when they're gone - they're gone!

The coax should be around 18 feet long because that's approximately equal to a half wave length at cb frequencies. The coax becomes an impedance repeater at if it's a halfwave length so that the 50 ohm output impedance of the radio is "repeated" at the antenna connection for a close to perfect match. There is truth to what some people say about the length not mattering but only if the antenna's input impedance is close to perfect (50 ohms). If you're. for instance, using a quarter wave whip antenna on your car, the approximate input impedance is 36 ohms. Therefore the length of your coax dam sure does matter in that case, which means if your coax is not the proper length to be an "impedance repeater" your swr will go up in a hurry. On the other hand, if you cut your coax to about 18ft or a multiple of that, you should enjoy an SWR of about 1.4:1 which is theoretically the best match possible, but some people swear they can get their whips to "flat line" (probably because their coax was a different length and fooled the meter).

I hope this helps to clear up the controversy.

no, sorry your still wrong, even if you look at your humps and valleys theory, there is still more surface area. Draw your self a picture, they don't have contact for 360 degees

This is what Tech Target said:
Skin effect can be reduced by using stranded rather than solid wire.
This increases the effective surface area of the wire for a given wire gauge. Tinned wire should be avoided because tin has higher resistance than copper.

Even though the conductors touch without the insulation, there are "air" gaps. Stranded wire reduces the effects of skin effect by inceasing the surface area..
So back to the books for you,

I've got a couple of these myself. A bunch of us in the area are buying them up for personal use. The range is quite good on the little "ducky" antenna, even with the radio and antenna in the house... If you use the lower frequencies, don't use the ducky antenna. The SWR is good for the upper two, but up over 3:1 on the lower freqs.

BTW, where exactly can you find the instructions online to program any frequency? I know that it can be done as it states it in the owners manual, however it says you have to send it in. I'm assuming it must have something to do with the momentary push button marked "set" on the board...

Thanks,

DAN RATHER INTERVIEW WITH TWISTEDHED

Dan Rather: So, you do not intend to destroy all the keyclown equipment?

Twistedhed: Which is that? Which equipment are you talking about? I do not have radios that go beyond the prescribed ranges, the ARRL, the inspection teams have been here. They have inspected every place. That is a lie. And if there is a question to that effect, I think the question should be addressed to them.

Dan Rather: Are you afraid of being jailed or captured?

Twistedhed: Whatever the god of freebanding decides. We are believers. We believe in what he decides.

Rather: Have you been offered asylum anywhere? And would you, under any circumstances, consider going into exile?

Twistedhed: I can understand the motive behind your question, which is excitement. This is a very Antikeyclown style, and it may not be liked by some, but I can understand. However, I will answer your question. And, after all, you talk and I understand, as a journalist, this may be important. You talk, you ask such a question and, of course, naturally, you seek an answer. But whoever believes in faith, and faith that should not be manufactured by someone else.

Dan Rather: Excuse me Twistedhed but I don't understand the answer.

Twstedhed: I will say it again for you in a way that you may understand. Obfuscation and disclarification, if it not part of the answer, contradicts the remaining natural meaning of the elements of the question. Any further confusion is a communication deficit on your part.

Dan Rather: You mentioned the great flame wars of years past. You fought the father N8, Voob, Leland, Sparky, and George Busch the first. He and the forces he led prevailed on the battlefield. Now you face the son who has an even greater, even more modern, even more lethal force aimed directly at your crackpot ideas. Why would you think that you could prevail this time on the battlefield? Or do you?

Twistedhed: I was not defeated. In fact, I withdrew from rec.radio.cb according to a decision taken by me. Yes, I withdrew but when I was back within my boundaries, the boundaries of WebTV, I was not defeated. Nor were the people of the freeband. You know that in both situations, then and now, I have only spoken about illegal actions and in no way can be proven to have done them. The officials of the United States FCC and ARRL and AKC have themselves spoken about their intentions to commit aggression against me. Isn't it part of our responsibility and our actions and our morality and, in fact, the basic meanings of freebanding that we should say to the aggressor that once you commit aggression against us, we are not going to succumb.

Dan Rather: So you feel that you are the champion of rec.radio.cb?

Twistedhed: How do you see yourself? I am pleased when I see that according to the principles in which we believe that-- in the sense that one is true-- I believe - I believe you are teaching truth and not trying to - indulge any sensation&#65533; detract someone as-- detract the speaker from-- into saying that he doesn't want to say. I do not believe that this is what you see.

Dan Rather: What?

Twistedhed: Yes.

Dan Rather: Is-- did the answer finish?

Twistedhed: Maybe.

Without bias, the flux goes from zero to +something and back.
With bias, you go from -something to + something (depends on application) but generally speaking, you can get roughly twice the current before saturation.

And what does that have to do with

Just mentioned it in passing.

Below copied from net discussion:

No - inductance is lossless. We are talking about losses and therefore resistance. All else being equal, stranded wire is measureably lossier than solid section, presumably due to skin effect artifacts. I have measured this in quite short lengths of wire.
Area for area, litz is better than both as it has a greater effective cross sectional area due to the insulation between strands. I am not saying that a resonator built with stranded wire will produce inferior results however - primary losses and output spark losses are dominant.

End

It appears after reading much on this subject that the increased surface area of standard stranded wire and its perceived decrease in AC resistance is never actually realized.

Only in badly designed power supplies. I've also seen linears oscillating at 1-2MHz outputting a watt or two of RF. A bad engineer can screw up any design.

My charger is a switcher, sitting right next to my 847. Literally on the other side of a piece of 1/2 inch pressboard. I haven't ever had interference from it. It's nothing special, just a samlex unit that I got cheap on ebay. Before that, I used an open frame "no-name" switcher from Japan with the same results.

My antenna is an Antron 99 located about 20' away, fed with LMR-400, and properly fitted connectors. Note that I'm NOT saying switchers don't make RF noise. They definitely do. However, it is usually low level (they do have to pass part 15!) and you shouldn't be getting noise through your feedline, or coupling it out to the antenna on the shield.

I've heard this over and over, yet never seen it happen in real life. Never had a switcher I designed cause me any grief in part 15 testing either. :)

They run cool, and usually need no fans or special ventilation.

One never knows until they try. I truly believe that much of the abborant behavior on CB is born from ignorance, rather than malice. I'm not so down on the human race, that I believe that people's attitudes can't change once they finally understand the error of their ways.

Well, you're certainly entitled to your opinion, and you may be right, but like I said before, if I stood by and allowed this stuff to go on, then I'd be just as guilty as those who promote it, for not at least trying to present "the other side".

And of course many of those same people have serious psychological issues, stemming for a lack of respect when they were kids. Being "loud and proud" on the radio, gives them some sort of vindication, when they strike back at what they believe are the symbols responsible for their own disenfranchised life

>.....and if you have to ask for a break , you aren't going to get it.

Shame their parents didn't have the forethought to teach them any manners.

And you don't see anything wrong with this?

I will respectfully disagree on that one. I've been on CB since 1970, and back then things were much more civil. People DID ask for breaks, they had respect for other people. People actually talked TO people, and not just AT them. The situation that we have to day, where the band is dominated by miscreants and other disrespectful people didn't really start to be a problem until the mid 80's.

>.........hell,

That will change very soon (Thank God!).

Go ahead break! (See, that wasn't so hard) ;) There's a reason why the FCC does not allow communications over 150 miles. It's just a shame that many people either don't understand, or don't care.

>.....i think that the hams did not

I don't know any hams who are bitter about losing 11 meters. I think it's a myth.

>.........i disagree that hams who were cbers do not talk about

I've known several, who get very upset, when someone menations the "old days" on CB, and they attempt to distance themselves from the subject. I think it's funny.

>......they just don't bring it up.

That is also true in many cases.

Who says we have to talk about "important stuff"? Many in our local group are either current or ex-CBers. Many times we chew the fact reminiscing about the old days on CB.

That is normally the case. As a ham, I don't care what goes on on CB.
But as a CBer, I most certainly do

Sort of like what we have to deal with on CB, only the other way around.

>.....you say, that all of the channels are

That's certainly an alternative. That's why there are so many former CBers hanging loose in the crowd.

> you are a ham guy dave, not a cber.......admit it.

I am a ham AND a CBer. I enjoys aspects of both services. If I didn't have such a warm feeling from CB, I wouldn't be as passionate as I am about turning things around.

MURS (Multi-Use Radio Service) is a no-license VHF personal radio service which operates on 151.820, 151.880, 151.940, 154.570, and 154.600 MHz. The FCC MURS rules permit simplex voice and data communication; as well as external gain antennas. There are no restrictions on business activities with MURS, and the 2W transmitter power limit works as a major benefit in reducing interference, and allowing more users per channel. Using external gain antennas, it is possible to create quite efficient mobile and base stations. External power amplifiers on MURS are of little or no benefit, so most of the problems present on the 11m CB radio "zoo" do not exist on MURS. Most any low-power VHF Part 90 business radio can be used on at least some of the MURS frequencies.
Are you tired of the range limitations of FRS radio? Are you constantly having to deal with interference for kids and call-tones on your FRS radio? Would you like to get a MURS base / mobile radio but you don't want to pay $200 and UP for it? GREAT! You can now have professional, reliable communications for as little as $49.99 each!

MURS (Multi-Use Radio Service) has recently been created by the FCC to allow a more flexible communications medium than FRS radio. For instance, MURS is in the VHF band (151 - 154 MHz). This gives better range in most conditions than the FRS UHF band radios. Also, MURS allows removable antennas. This allows you to use a base station antenna at home or a mobile antenna in the car. Note: A "rubber duck" antenna is included to use as a desk-top radio. You can replace that antenna with a base station antenna. This gives you a superior range advantage over FRS radio! You can even use high-gain and directional antennas that can give you communications distance measured in 10's of miles rather than one or two miles with FRS radio.

The Radio Shack MURS base / mobile radio gives you the full legal limit for MURS operation (2-watts). That's four (4) times the power of FRS radio!

General range estimates on MURS with the supplied "rubber-duck" antennas is a few miles. With a base station antenna at home or a mobile antenna on the car, you can expect 7 - 10 miles or more! With directional antennas you may get more than 20 miles. Range is limited by your surroundings. Obviously, if you are in a flat area, your range will be greater than if you are in a mountainous area.

MURS does NOT require a license. You may use it for personal or business use.

These fantastic radios has all the features you need! Here is a list of the major features:

a.. Programmable Frequencies - you can program the transceiver to any MURS or business band frequencies - no crystals to buy!
b.. 38-Tone CTCSS (Continuous Tone Control Squelch System) - helps reduce interference from other transceivers which are operating on the same frequency, in the same area.
c.. Removable microphone - The microphone displayed in the picture IS included. You can use an optional speaker/mic.
d.. Earphone/Speaker and Microphone Jacks - lets you connect an external VOX headset for handsfree operation or an earphone/speaker and an external microphone to ensure understandable communications in noisy areas.

e.. PLL-Controlled Circuitry - provides accurate and stable channel selection.
f.. BNC Flexible Antenna - lets you use the transceiver on a desktop. (Includes right-angle PL-259 - to - BNC adapter. You may also connect an external mobile or base station antenna via the SO-239 jack on the back of the radio.)
g.. Built-In Modulation Limiter Circuit - automatically adjusts for a wide variety of voice levels to ensure an understandable transmissioin.

Thanks for the link...

I just tried it out on the 19-1210 mobile, and it works the same way for this unit... Effectively turning it into a 4 channel radio... Cool...
Just going to have to install a case-mounted switch to toggle dip switch #2 to jump between the 2 sets of 2 channels on the fly...

Well, when there is a DC component (bias) through the coil the core flux density is more limited than without DC in the coils. That's one of the reasons for using a gapped core for audio transformers in tube audio amps -- the gap prevents saturation caused by the DC component.

But if by 'bias' you mean the magnet provides a magnetic flux 'bias', that's true, but it makes the core EASIER to saturate because you are increasing the flux. That isn't always a bad thing, especially if you want a swinging choke.

Fair enough.

I haven't tried the programming hack on the 1210 yet. It's programming method is a bit different than for the BTX-127. You have to first power up with the dip's set to101010. Did you really get 2 extra channells? Maybe you could explain the steps that you used.

You forgot about the velocity factor of the coax. Read what Tnom Irrelevent. The post said that it was the "new CB". Before you come on with this nonsence, answer this:

1. How would you get all the truckers to go to MURS? CB is the #1 source of communication between truckers, and the largest % of buyers for CB radios.

2. Part of the mass appeal of CB from the non-trucker end, is it's abilitly to DX. Why would people give this up for 7-10 miles? And I would tend to believe that 7-10 miles is a major stretch, just like the FRS 2 miles, and the GMRS 5 miles.

>Not yet, just leave it up to the bozos who ruined the current CB band,they

Why? This has little use outside of very short range communications.

>But with the fact that this band is MUCH closer >to public service bands bootleggers will be easyer to catch.

This frequency band has very little in common with 11 meters.

DIARY OF A YANKEE IN TEXAS

April 30th:

Texas is fantastic! Just got here and love it already. Now this is a state that knows how to live!! Beautiful sunny days and warm balmy evenings. What a place! Watched the sunset from a park lying on a blanket. It was beautiful. I've finally found my home. I love it here.

May 14th:

Really heating up. Got to 89 today. Not a problem, live in an air-conditioned home, drive an air-conditioned car. What a pleasure to see the sun every day like this. I'm turning into a real sun worshipper.

June 5th:

Had the backyard landscaped today. Lots of cactus and rocks. What a breeze to maintain. No more mowing for me. NO MORE SHOVELING SNOW EITHER! Another scorcher today, but I love it here.

July 1st:

The temperature hasn't been below 90 all week, not even at night. Where are those ocean breezes we heard about, still seems hot. Getting used to it will take awhile, I guess. I sure miss my LP collection, though. I'll have to remember not to leave anything made out of plastic in my car. Got one of those fuzzy steering wheel covers, cheaper than the burn ointment for my hands. I always wondered what burnt flesh smelled like.

July 15th:

Fell asleep by the pool. (Got 3rd degree burns over 60% of my body.) Missed two days of work, what a dumb thing to do. I learned my lesson though: got to respect the ol' sun in a climate like this.

July 20th:

I miss our cat, Tabby. He snuck into the car when I left this morning. By the time I got out to the hot car for lunch, he'd swollen up to the size of a shopping bag and just as I opened the door he exploded all over $2,000 worth of leather upholstery. I told the kids he ran away. The car now smells like Kibbles and poop. No more pets in this heat!

July 25th:

Ocean breezes, my rear. Hot is hot!! The home air conditioner is on the fritz and AC repairman charged $200 just to drive by and tell me he needed to order parts. Only hope for a break in the heat would be a hurricane.

July 30th:

Been sleeping outside by the pool for three nights now. Swatting the mosquitoes that are as big as B-52's. $1,500 in darn house payments and we can't even go inside. Why did I ever come here?

Aug 4th:

100 degrees. Finally got the air conditioner fixed today. It cost $500 and gets the temperature down to about 90. The electric bill is almost as much as the house payment. And two redneck drivers almost ran me off the road. I hate this state.

Aug 8th:

If another wise jerk cracks, "Hot enough for you today?", I'm going to tear his head off. Darn heat! By the time I get to work the radiator is boiling over, my clothes are soaking wet, and I smell like roasted Garfield!!

Aug 10th:

The weather report might as well be a darn recording: Hot and sunny. It's been too hot two #@*& months and the weatherman says it might really warm up next week. And who came up with the statement "it may be hot, but at least you don't have to shovel it" should die from heat exhaustion. Doesn't it ever rain in this God forsaken place??

Aug 13th:

Welcome to Hell!!! Temperature got to 102 today. Forgot to crack the window and blew the windshield out of the Cadillac. The installer came to fix it and said, "Hot enough for you today?" My wife had to spend the $1,500 house payment to bail me out of jail.

Aug 14th:

Worst day of the summer. I'm not leaving the house. The rains finally came and all they did is to make it muggier than Hades and drove the darned roaches out of the ground. I wasn't aware they could fly! The Cadillac is now floating somewhere in the Gulf with its new $500 windshield. That does it, we're moving back to New York where all you have to worry about is getting mugged.

It would be interesting to see a packet net in USA. All the radios are in place we just need to hook up the packet equipment which can be as simple as a computer with a sound card.

Not correct.

The skin effect keeps you relatively safe when you are in a car that is struck by lightning. A lighting strike although DC strikes at such a fast pulse rate that it more acts like AC than DC. When a bolt strikes your car it creates a magnetic field around the outer surface of your car and forces the current to flow on this outer surface. There is no current flow on the inner surfaces of the cars sheet metal.

The same can be said about stranded wire. RF will create a magnetic field around the bundle. All RF will be forced to the perimeter of the bundle. The inner surface areas of the individual strands will be analogous to the inner sheet metal surfaces of a car struck by lightning. There will be no flow.

All right you SUPER TECHS out there, answer this one for me.

WHY do the CB "BUTCHERS," you know the IDIOTS that put in Mod. kits and the like, WHY are they jumpering across the GROUNDS in Galaxies, and other radios? I'm talking about the case ground connection and the board's neg. gnd. connections.

I always un-do what these MORONS do, 'cause I figure IF the engineers wanted the case ground seperate from the negative ground, then we GOOD techs had better leave it alone!

The only possible reason as to WHY they would do such a thing, is MAYBE to eliminate squeal, which can be done more sucessfully other ways. SO WHY do they do it, other than to prove dey IS da BUTCHERS ? !

Well, the final outcome.....

Cheap Walmart mag mount and one scratch one minute later :)

Took the antenna to a CB shop and the owner pretty much had a good laugh.
After metering and adjusting, could not get below 2.5 on low channels and in the red from 20 to 40.

So, I ended up with a Wilson, all nice and tuned (1.2 to 2). I can get a few miles now and will live with it. I use this one to hide my new scratch.
Thanks for all the advice, some IMHO, good, some not so. What I need now is a bracket to mount to the Xterra rack up top for a permanent mount.
None made as far as I can tell. Thomas

Please notice I said around 18ft. long and yes the exact length for a half wave length will vary a little based on the exact type of coax (velocity factor is a little different for rg58 compared to rg8, etc.). I think I explained pretty well why 18ft. is used but admittedly didn't go real deep into the mathematical theory envolved (would have to dust off some text books for that).

I am not too sure about Texas, but I am sick of snow and cold! Here it is March and we are supposed to go to six BELOW ZERO tonight! This right next to Lake Ontario (probably froze deep enough to no longer help moderate temperatures). We've been averaging 20 degrees below normal here. Snowed every day in January. The mounds of snow where I shoveled the driveway were more than halfway up the 1st story windows! We were running below zero for a solid week a few weeks ago (and we normally might dip below zero once in a season). Natural gas is up over 20% in cost (can't wait for the heating bill). We won't talk about gasoline since everyone is having a ball with that! ;)

Dx? You do know that 148 MHz (very close to murs) has made the California to Hawaii circuit a number of times, right? Maybe not. Tropo conditions, possible sporadic E ... given reasonable power, expect a hundred miles or more 24/7 communications range and thousands of miles with appropriate conditions. Certainly not world wide communications, but thousands of miles are possible at this frequency, given some reasonable (say 50 watts or so) power. What is reasonable power? The whole reason for his post was to bash the current state of CB, and its power abuse. What is the purpose of making this a "new CB", and then have everyone run high power all over again? Doesn't this defeat this guy's reason for cleaning up CB?

>Certainly not world wide communications, but thousands of miles

You get thousands of miles with that on CB. Why would you need MURS?

>You'd be surprised what VHF (and even UHF) can do ...

Except that he was talking about these great Radio Shack radios, that have low power and a 7-10 mile range. And that was what the issue was. It wasn't high power or what VHF and UHF can do with high power.

Seriously, why would the FCC frown on CB and high power, and approve MURS and high power?

you'd do better to creack it open & fit NiMh cells
no memory effect & they last hours longer + don't mind 1/2 flat recharge

Wrong, Brian. When you bundle up those strands you are making one big conductor out of many small ones. The current goes to the outside of the conductor, i.e, the bundle of strands. The center of the conductor sees the voltage. Litz wire is not the same because each strand is insulated from the others. Seems I have typed this before...

Many dipoles are indeed built from tubing (solid wire is too heavy).
Ever look up on the roof of a house and see a TV antenna? Are those made with stranded wire? No. Are the UHF loops on the backs of TV sets made with stranded wire? They look like solid wire to me. Even the rabbit ears are made from tubing. Are there ham antennas built from tubing? You betcha. There's a ham just north of my house that has a 12 meter and a 6 meter beam on a 50 ft tower and they are both made from tubing, not stranded wire. Maybe you should pay more attention to what happens in the real world instead of being an ass on a newsgroup. Oh yeah, and maybe YOU should hit the books yourself.

King James "translation", wonder if he was better than all the others?

Many people have found many hidden meanings when translating it, watched a program last night about Isaac Newton's translation of the bible.

It's ALL baloney, Chinese whispers that have been going on for millennia, possibly started as a play.

I love the way you go on about the communist ways of your governments (even called non Christian doctors murderers). If you were in power no other religious teaching would be allowed, anyone who questioned the (King James) bible would be arrested and tortured, God forbid anyone who mentioned that the earth goes around the sun. Talk about a dictarorship.

Thank God (pun intended) that most of us are more enlightened than you.

You can't get them online. They are discontinued. But some stores still have them. I found several in my area. You need to call all the stores in your area and give them the stock numbers. All the stores that had them in my area that had them found them in the back of the stores. You gotta search a bit but they are still out there, and worth the search. Go to this link for info on these radios. www.murs-usa.com They are the first MURS radios built and therefore might become collectable. There seems to be more of the mobile sets available. I got 2 of each. Ebay has plenty of people selling them, but for higher prices.
HAPPY HUNTING! Let us know how you make out.

Political spewage below. Any war or "peace" mongers out there STOP readng NOW !

Just thinking of the alleged "war" that we are in, and WW1, WW2, and the BIG changes that happened in the country and world after/ during WW2. MY question is: WHAT big bad changes are going to happen before, during, and after THIS war that will change things as they were or are now? Will they affect the CB? Will the next verse in Deut. 28 come to pass next? Will God's people (Christians) DO 2 Chron. 7:14? Are we in for the biggest NAZI Communist police state there has been since Hitler or Stalin? How will it affect the CB and Ham bands, and us on digital CB here? OR will we be with OR fighting "HomoLAND" security? I see the HATE against anyone here in THE SOUTH with TOWELS on their heads rising to high levels, not even knowing which country they are from. Even hollywood is getting in on the "action."

I talked to a truck driver the other day who drove all over Europe too, in the OLD commie days. He said that when entering the commy countries, they COUNTED HIS Cigarettes and asked them how many he would smoke while there, until he left; to make sure he wouldn't give or sell them to the commy slaves while there!

SO WHO is pushing BUSH to shove? ! Will WE be BUSHwhacked because of it? IF the US Constitution isn't enforced above unconstitutional "homoland security" agencies, then we is in BIG trouble, Folks! IF dey come after our BILL of RIGHTS, grab da 2nd Amendment devices, FOLKS !
2 Chron. 7:14 is STILL the answer!
Dave!!!

I called my local store, gave the clerk the number (19-1206) and he had none.
I asked if any other stores had any, he pressed a button and told me who did.

I'm programmed for 151.82 and 151.88.

We were up until 3:30 this morning, talking about different bands for ham and CB use and how they propagate and the different modes and bandwidth.
412 said 11.25 Khz for the lower 3 and 12.5 for the upper 2. Wideband FM is 20 KHz. You could pump some data at that bandwidth.

On another note, got my 19-1206, programmed it for 151.82 and 151.88, and will try to prepare a 1/4 wave groundplane for it within the week. Carl, it was nice that I got you motivated to turn on your 11 meter radio and talk with the guys you haven't talked to in a while. Catch most of them on 2 meters, but not me. I still don't have a ticket, Only because I don't want one.

I was at a DXpedition on a mountaintop, heard and communicated to the same guy in CT from the MD-PA line on 6 and 2 meters. Just the 706MKIIG and a beam for the band. I was set up for 11 meters and worked a lot of stations.

I know the answer but am not sure of a proper way to explain it.

Connecting the two grounds, chassis and system can potentially create a less restrictive return path. The drawback is that connecting the two grounds together will increase the radiated EMI of the device. This is why it is not done at the factory.

The FCC requires that equipment not radiate to much EMI. EMI is reduced by having the stock configuration of separate grounds.

Connecting them together can (hit or miss) reduce a feedback problem but it will do it at the expense of EMI.

Then maybe you can enlighten us on the physics of what causes skin effect. If you understood why skin effect exists then you would also understand that a conductor, stranded or not, will be influenced by its own magnetic field and will have similar effects.

The exception is litz wire where the strands are separated and thus the magnetic fields are allowed a degree of separation also.

IS that WHY they do it--to reduce or eliminate squeal? That is MY guess--I can't imagine them doing it for any thing else. I eliminate their solder "bridge" and seperate the grounds when I get them. When the radio is done RIGHT it will NOT squeal, but since they don't KNOW how to do it right, they come up with all these idiotic ideas to get rid of squeal.

Not at all Dave,
It's one of 640 made between 1970 to 1975. It's one of 120 left registered, about 20% not registered. So It's a fairly rare vehicle that should be back form the paint shop in two to three weeks.

I had heard on a local news report, that before the last storm we had (last weekend) that we were at that time 3 inches below the rcord for snowfall in a season, well we beat that previous record by 5 inches.

It's cold here tonight too with a good wind, just got home from a "coffee break" with some of the local radio personalities (both ham and 11m crowd), when I got into my car my springs were creaking from the cold.

Suppose you have four different conductors:

#1. Solid round wire: We already know that RF flows on the outside, or 'skin' of the wire. No problem, right?

#2. Round tube: Since the skin is the only part that conducts current, there isn't any point in using any more copper than necessary, right? And you already know that no RF current flows on the inside of the tube, don't you? Ok.

#3. Six strands wrapped around one center strand: Now lets not forget that round tube. There are six strands that form a 'tube' around the center strand, correct? So there will be NO current in the center strand, just like a round tube! Also, there will be no RF current on the inside of that tube, and therefore no current on the inside half of each strand!

#4. A solid wire grooved to look like a stranded conductor: What's the difference? All the RF current flows on the outside of the conductor, regardless of whether the conductor is a solid wire or a bundle of individual strands!

If you still don't understand I can work up some visual aids. I don't know where you got your idea that normal stranded wire behaves like Litz wire, no book I have ever read says anything of the sort. But I would hazard a guess that you got it off the internet. If you are going to educate yourself in electronics, at least learn it from authoritative references and legitimate textbooks, not internet hacks.

gee,
then it must be dead in your area. I see constant traffic on the 14 channels of FRS allocated here in phoenix. In fact, I can hear stations up to 8 miles away with my scanner and a high-gain verticle antenna for the 450 Mhz bands. A lot of what I hear are kids or families talking with one another. some of the chans are also shared with GMRS and I hear a lot of repeater traffic on those quite frequently into the late evening hours.

I also happen to have (and use) an frs radio (Midland G series 14 chan) and can communicate with most anyone up to 2 miles away with the OEM rubber duck on the radio. IN FACT, I had 4 conversations just last night with a couple of parties looking to startup a small FRS users club!

soooo.... what may not be happeneing in your area is happeneing here.
please don't presume that whats true for your location tends to apply everywhere else. It doesn't.

Hey, Landshark... I seem to remember someone counting the posts of everyone in the group and posting the figures.
Who was it now... and does Georgina consider that to be extremely sad?

Maybe it's just when the amount of his posts is pointed out that he considers it a problem... he did like to hide behind so many names to avoid hitting

*Another way of settling the argument for most reasonable people.

It is generally accepted that a hollow tube at RF is just as effective at conducting RF current as a solid one.
Why? The answer is the skin effect causes most all the current to flow on the outside of the conductor so that the inner portion of the solid conductor is not used or needed.

But wait ! Doesn't the hollow tube have more surface area than the solid conductor? Shouldn't this hidden surface area of the hollow tube (inner diameter) add a extra path for skin effect flow?

I think Brian should answer.

* it will never be settled with Brians stubbornness

Truckers are irrelevant. Much of the "non-skip" interference that the locals have to put up with, comes from truckers moving off 19 to "chat", right through other people's QSO's. If the truckers stay off of MURS, that's a bonus.

Not everyone wants to DX. Some people just want to chat locally among friends. Back in the day on CB, the distance between the local group never really exceeded 5 miles anyway, unless someone made a "road trip".

Judging from what was considered socially acceptable 50 years ago, and what people have pushed forth today, leaves little doubt. Guys like Howard Stern would've been off the air in 5 minutes back then, and you never saw gratuitous sex and violence on prime time TV shows. Movie with "love scenes" would cut away, before "the act" was performed, and left it up to your own mind to figure out what was happening. Today, nothing short of each and every steamy detail would be tolerated by an increasingly voyeuristic society.

You claim to be a person "older" than I am, and if you can't see these societal changes, then you're just blind.

Once again, it's not always about you, your NPD not withstanding. The original poster made reference to cussing and sex on TV, that was the frame by which I am responding.

> no one mentioned porn (except YOU)

If you kept in line with the subject you would see where this subject came from and you wouldn't make such claims. Of course, your only purpose here is to malign me, you care or know nothing of the original subject.

I claimed nothing of the sort. Once again, you read meanings into words that just aren't there, yet ironically you acuse other people of the same thing, underscoring once again, your inability to spot your own hypocricy.

That "point" is a great example of how you really don't have unlimited "rights". The 1st amendement, that you so conveniently try to hide behind, does not guarantee you the right to annoy people unconditionally. That's why there are such a thing as "quiet hours", and the "7 dirty words" for TV broadcasting.

There is no point in trying to have a further philosophical debate with you, as you do not grasp the concepts, nor the dangers of "unlimited rights". Furthermore, you add little of any value, as your only purpose is to attack me, and what I stand for, which is also a constant reminder of your own failings.

Actually Dave, Red China has been known to do some pretty amazing work wrt electronics. The aviation buff ((& fmr. professional) in me is about to crawl out. Did you know that Red China manufactures the Sukhoi Su-27 interceptor (Under license grant from Russia.) with an avionics package far superior to the original Russion design? (In addition to producing a better overall build quality.) Here's a scary one. Japan produces the F-15J Eagle (The equivalent to our F-15C, also under license grant from the USA.) with a better avionics package as well. Sad, but true.

As for CBs, two of the best I've ever owned were made in Taiwan R.O.C., go figure? :-)

Sure I could. But I haven't see any credible evidence that I am.

As much as you must get over the notion that because someone puts up a website and lists a bunch of "facts", that it proves that the US policy is wrong. Anyone can say anything, and distort truths. That doesn't mean that our mission is any less noble.

As soon as you get past the notion just because you hear about something, that it's automatically true.

So why are people like you undermining the US effort at routing out terrorists and the countries that harbor and support them? That's hardly "cohesive".

No one is condemming history. Rather, it's people like me who believe that those of us who refuse to learn the lessons from history will be doomed to repeat them.

I guess you don't consider the liberation of Kuwait to be a worthy cause?

WWII started with the invasion of Poland. Was that not a worthy cause either?

You obviously do not understand the concept of neutralizing a threat before it becomes too large. I suppose by your way of thinking, we should back off of Saddam, revoke the sanctions, let him be, and then act surprised 5 or 10 years down the line when he starts invading his neighbors again, and this time he has nukes, and a bigger bio-chemical arsenal. And if we can muster the public support this time, how many more American troop's lives will be at risk against this bigger, badder enemy?

No, but my father was, and many of his friends served in WWII. I've been

Only in the minds of paranoids. Even the Russians were painfully aware of MAD (Mutually Assured Destruction), and they were not about to start anything with us, that would result in them eating radioactive isotopes for the next several hundred years.
Hitler, on the other hand, was a very real threat to the countries in Europe (Especially those ungrateful French). Hussein has taken on similar ambitions WRT Kuwait, and Israel.

China has not acted in a belligerant manner toward their neighbors. And while they are a communist nation, we are slowly killing this from the inside out as their people are becoming more and more "westernized", thanks to trade agreements with us.

The rest of these countries will all be dealt with, when their time comes. We can't take on everyone at once. We only have so many soldiers and planes.

Who said we failed? Is there any evidence that Bin Laden is still alive?
Surely, you don't hold those audio tapes and concrete proof do you?
Don't you think for a minute, that if Bin Laden were trying to make defiant stand against us, that he would've used a VIDEO tape, where his living status could be more easily verified?

We are still arresting Al-Qaeda members, almost on a weekly basis. Sure, it's fallen off of the mainstream news radar somewhat, but we've hardly given up on the fight against terrorism. We now have Bin Laden's right hand man. I'm sure we will learn little from him, as he is probably prepared to die for his cause. But he's off the street and not planning any more 9/11's.

And that hasn't changed, and you missed the part about going after countries that have aided the terrorists. There is evidence that Iraq has provided aid to terrorist groups, as well as a link to Oklahoma City.

Bush never claimed that Hussein is "Osama in disguise". Osama is not the only terrorist you know.

Once again, Osama is not the only terrorist or leader of a terrorist group.

> I truly understand how a freedom lover like me can provoke one who holds

You love the concepts of freedom, but are unwilling to fight for them, nor do you accept the responsibilities that go with freedoms. You want it all one way.

And internal affair. If the Chinese had invaded Taiwan, it would've been a different story.

And we are dealing with them. All N. Korea wants is money. They are a bunch of opportunists. They are taking advantage of the tense world situation, to leverage us. Nothing more.

>.we have Hussein who we aren't even certain if

And how do you know that? Sure he doesn't have long range missles, or a submarine fleet, but he can attack his neighbors, including Israel. And just becasue he hasn't perfected his nukes, should we wait until he does, and becomes a bigger threat? He's already demonstrated a desire to expand his boundaries. Why would any reasonable person assume that he wouldn't continue to do so, if he were left alone?

> >I suggest all those, who think that Saddam >isn't such a bad guy,

Sorry, but that's the perception that you anti-war types are projecting. Since you are either unable, or unwilling to see the threat that Saddam poses, the conclusion is that you don't believe that he will "act", hence the "he's not such a bad guy" label.

> No one is disputing he isn't a bad guy,

Sure you are, otherwise you'd be on board with the effort to remove him from power.

Sorry, but you demonstrate that yourselves with your inability to utilize statistical analysis in assessing his threat potential.

It's not about oil. Only you brainwashed, marxist fed anti-war types believe that.

What does ham radio have to do with foreign policy? And last time I looked, GWB wasn't asking me to choose a dictator to attack.

> It is more than obvious you have no loved ones or immediate family in the

What difference would that make?

The cost of freedom is greater than that of the brave lives that are spent defending it. If you truly believe in freedom, then you wouldn't be questioning the need to defend against those who have us living in fear right now. That you cannot connect the dots and come up with a clear picture, should not quench your resolve. There is intelligence info that only the top brass know. We, the people, are not privvy to everything. So it comes down to trust. Who do you trust? Do you trust the leaders of this country to advance the cause of freedom? Or do you believe the promoters of leftist propaganda (Gee no agenda there), who would like nothing more than to topple the free market capitalist society that we've enjoyed here for over 200 years?

Says you. And therein lies your problem. Due to your APD, and symptomatic NPD, you are unable to view any situation except by your own narrow perspective, which is clouded by uncommonly grandios opinion of yourself.

You are guilty of the same traits as you accuse others of, yet due to the affects of NPD, you are unable to see them. Your inability to understand what I tell you, now translates into my communications deficit. I'll let you in on a little secret, I've been "communicating" by radio since 1970, and by keyboard since 1982, and I have never had a problem with someone unable to grasp the concepts, analogies, and cases, that I've provided. You seem to be the lone holdout in this case.

Look at the subject dumbass. It does say Need dipole info, not all the bullshit you through into your posts .He asked what wire does he build his dipole out of. Do you have a comprehesnsion problem? As you stated "Pay attention" Stick to the subject. No one except for you has mentioned UHF loops, 6 meter beams, tubing etc.. Whats your problem? Just make stuff up as you go? You need to hit the books, and learn how to stick to the subject material. Thats what should happen in the real world, which seems you are not to be a part of.

And there are a ton of them out there.

That's usually only a problem if the input and output legs of the regulator aren't bypassed properly.

Well that's certainly true. Looking at some of the export "10 meter" radios, I can certainly see examples of bad engineering.

The built-in supply of a Yaesu FT 736R is a switcher as well. It is shielded well, and contribues no appreciable noise into the VHF and UHF bands either.

I used to have a 100 amp switcher which made a hell of a racket on the CB frequencies. The signal level was under S1, but unless you squelched it out, when the channel was quiet, you'd hear the incessant whine of the oscillator. I've also used computer type supplies, that were also less than desirable, from a noise perspective.

That depends on how the switcher is radiating, and whether the noise is conductive or radiated. Conductive noise can usually be suppressed with in line filters. Radiated noise gets picked up by your antenna, the same as any other RF. If you disconnect the antenna, and the noise goes away, that tells you where the noise is coming in from.

I never meant to imply that they were all bad, nor that the noise you hear will be deafening. Just that one should be careful when utilizing a switching supply, especially a "cheap" one, especially if you do alot of weak signal work. I have seen examples of switcher hash first hand, and it annoyed me. I might be a bit more critical than the average user, so as usual, YMMV.

Survivor Bill ask what material to build his dipole from:

Franks suggestions:

1: TV antennas

2: UHF loops from the back of your TV set.

3: Rabbit Ears

4: Your neighbors 6 meter beam.

why can't he use stranded wire Frank?

I think you answered your own question. In many cases, when people add to or modify the modulation circuit, they introduce RF feedback into the radio, which manifests itself as a squeal. Many times, the fact that antenna systems are not grounded properly, and the radio chassis "floats", only exacerbates the problem. Grounding the chassis "hard" often solves the problem, and is usually a quick and dirty fix, when time is money and these guys don't have the expertise to properly address the issue.

A tidbit that I'm sure he will deny. His vast paranoia about people knowing who he is, would preclude his getting, or using a ham call, for those reasons alone. I believe he's even stated such, at one time or another.

Who looks stupid? Please look in the mirror.

A dipole can be constructed out of tubing. There is a point where the dipole becomes too long to be practically constructed from tubing and then wire is normally used. Since this is a CB newsgroup we are talking about 27 Mhz where dipoles made out of tubing ARE practical. And some consider MURS and FRS to be CB too, so then you could say the VHF and UHF are included in the discussion.

People usually resort to name calling when they know they are on shaky ground. I think this is true in your case.

Scott, Good to hear that you found a 1206. Do you know there is a way to programm a secret 2nd channel in it for any freq btw 150.775-157.740? After it's programmed in, you only have to flip dipswitch 2 to on(up) and your there. I had Ho Co FD on it LOL. Check this link for details www.murs-usa.com/ .This band behaves just like 2 meters. If the bug has bitten you check out the 1210 mobile which can adjust up to 5watts. There are 2 left in the Catonville-Arbutus store on Wilkins Ave @$44.97. It can be programmed for 4 ch.
Not everyone wants to be a HAM. Alot of them can be stuffy and boorish. You know-----I got on 2 meters this week for the first time in 2 years for a midnight QSO which was fun. I listen more than talk. I use CB 37USB daily, so what does that tell you. I'll look you all up agn on 36USB soon. Keep in touch with me on how your MURS endeavors are progressing. I now have a mobile ready to go. When you get your GP up, I 'll get out in the car and start heading your way. We can first contact each other on CB. Why don't you E-mail me direct, instead of this way?

The original poster wanted to make it out of wire, not tubing. Why is so hard for you not to stick to his question? I resorted to name calling because some people just can't help trying to dragging the thread away from the original subject. Look in a mirror, thats what you just did with your tubing and FRS post. Like he ask what is the best wire to build his dipole out of, steel or copper, solid or twisted wire?
I posted that I build my dipoles out of twisted wire. Frank had post a bunch of crap about tv antennas and 6 meter ham antennas.
Frank never has given the original poster an answer to his question..

Yep, Mopar: he is WORSE than a Heathen! First of all, I do n't "worry" about my CB. I worry about HIS soul and hopfully he'll make it to Heaven IF he repents of his sins, and believes the Gospel (Good News). The world is in bad shape because it has rejected THE Savior (Jesus Christ--the carpenter of Nazareth) who was God in the flesh. I believe only CB's made in RED CHINA are "stupid."

I wrote this post BEFORE I heard Texe Marrs last night, or on Sat. pm.
What I said here was VERY Prophetic concerning his program. Listen to it--get a copy from powerofphrophecy.com or texemarrs.com or interesting stuff on infowars.com !

You are the one making accusations, therefore it is you that would need to prove you are correct, for anyone to take you seriously instead of Smokey with all that being said by everyone this man can get wire stranded or solid and make himself a dipole rather cheap and easy, and either one would work and be a decent choice. Every one wants to rush to show how smart they are no kiddin the guy can use tubing and scrap this or scrap that, but he also can use wire whether solid or stranded and will never know the difference what he has in performance. Most dipoles you would prefer stranded wire because it won't stretch etc in time like solid. Other than that you can prestrech the solid wire. there really is no wrong answer except griffey's voodoo wire.

I Know, I offered to ship him the wire that he needed to build it. I guess Frank would prefer to ship him a 6 meter beam?

Hi Dave.

I have seen an RCI with RF feedback problems. It was getting into the VCO and causing all kinds of crap on SSB.
The crazy thing was that removing the cover, or just it's screws, cured the problem.

Rather than connecting the ground and -ve, I added extra coupling between the case and the ground on the board. That cured it, but left the chassis floating.

Regards,

Peter.

At this point in the thread it obviously does not matter what the original question was. You started the argument that dragged the thread off into never-never land. Frank makes a valid point about building dipoles from tubing. Why are you having such a hard time with that?

I can send email, too. I'd like to try to get a few more folks to come up on 1.9 meters!!! See if I can't get a few of the hams to mod their radios to hit 151.

I got the model #'s reversed. I got the mobile radio. It's now got full wattage and plenty of mod. I didn't CUT any parts. I didn't tweak any coils.

Tomorrow is Tuesday. Don't forget to check in. It's Mark's turn this week.

I'm not, Let Frank make his valid point about building dipoles from tubing. Its not what the original poster asked. Why are you having such a problem with that?
Anyway I don't care what he builds his dipoles out of, he can put 20 skunks nose to tail if he cares too, in fact he can add himself to the "string" and act like a counterpoise.

As far as we know Leland Scott has done nothing except to occasionally speak out in disapproval of illegal CB operation in this public forum. He is not now, and has not ever partipated in organized Anti-KeyClown or TwistedhedTweakers actions.

To the best of our knowledge, he has posted nothing under any screen name except his own. We who opose Twistedhed respect Leland for his views and wish to go on record as stating that he has no ties to us or any other AntiKeyclown personnel. We are soley responsible for all tweaking, baiting, and embarassing of Twistedhed. Mr. Twistedhed has, as usual, succumbed to his own half-baked and deluded theories about who is doing what to whom. He has barked up many trees, all of them wrong. It has been a pitiable, laughable spectacle, and one that we have enjoyed immensely.

But the time has come for Twisted to apologize to Leland Scott. Following this, he must spare himself further shame and embarassment and leave this newsgroup for good.

Sincerely,

Anti-Twistedhed Group

Absolutely hilarious! You have the right not to listen..you have the right not to read.....Break break break..y'all get more ignorant with each passing day. Junior and yourself have the rights to change the channel or turn it off..LOL!

I thought it was mostly N8, but merely seeing the extent at which Georgie WA3MOJ DEFINITELY has done, and N3CVJ with his...<g> well, heheheh......davey and George and Lelnad, anything that you are not mature enough to handle or read that may result in your lid status causing you to be condescending toward another for holding opposing views is welcome here....it illustates magnificently what type hammie to avoid and not become. (chuckle) The right to be anal retentive is yours as well.. I swear you can hold it till the cows come home, it still won't get me to babysit either of you. Oh yea,, if I came back from a weekend without N3CVJ, KC8LDO and WA3MOJ making foolish lids of themselves (Yes, DAvey, you screwed up again with one of your mulit-names and posts) showing their reverance and love for me, I would be worried. If you lids liked me and didn't call me names,,.. I would be worried.

The fact that so many posts are aimed toward me in my absence tells me without doubt or hesitation that I am on dead in my endeavors. Lotsa time spen on 'lil o'l psycho me..... I guess reading from the book "How to identify lids and effectively communicate with the severely challenged" and finding the above named as angry, lying lids that have done nothing in this forum for the good of either service was a great start..talk about a bullseye..LOL!. The venom and vitriol coming from the Davey, Georgie, and Lelnad this weekend reassures me like a warm ray of Gulf sunshine that I'm doing the right thing. No wonder these lids are angry with me for calling them lids,,,,,when these lids are deliberately manipulated into exposing themselves as all they deny, they feel had.....and rightly so.

Fantastic DX this weekend..had Michigan in there all morning,,,,my good friends in Missouri and Minnesota,,,always a pleasure......keep up the great work Breakin' the law around Tampa Bay!

Jay in the Mojave, I would like to try my hand at a 5/8 wave for MURS. (HF-CB is too long.) I understand how the dual trombone matching network works, but I'd like to get some better pictures or descriptions of it to modify it to work within the parameters of 151.8 MHz. I'm going to make a 1/4 wave GP this week. That's easy, it requires no matching network. I should be in MURSland this weekend.

Theories and formulas are nice, but practice makes perfect.

Immaterial. It's the law and the first amendment that you have a problem recognizing.

>de-evolved.

Not everyone agrees with you that our society has "de-evolved". Matter of FACT, you are in the minority once again believing such remarkable tales of societal woe and decline.

>Judging from what was considered socially >acceptable 50 years ago, and what people >have pushed forth today, leaves little doubt.

When you throw around the word "perverse" as casually as you do,,,would that apply to your ex-partner in the illegal cb business?

>Guys like Howard Stern would've been off the >air in 5 minutes back then, and you never saw >gratuitous sex and violence on prime time TV >shows.

Oh please. The innuendo was always there,all that has happened since then was a connection of the dots. This goes deeper..it isn't about YOU......you already admit you have several dilemmas and problems, one being you feel the fall of the Roman Empire is abut to recreate itself again in the US with a little Sodom and Gomorrah thrown in for extra measure. The society is changing and you're not..youre stuck in the mud while people pass you by and b4 you claim you do not want to be a part of a society such as what is around you,,,,,you have two simple choices as I see it..one, is you can leavethe country after getting some cajones, or two, you can take yourself out. Suicide isn't illegal and I promise you will be referenced from time to time. To stand as a sore thumb and point to all around you on a broken down old soap box thats stinks of alcohol and dog poop and tell the world they are going down the wrong path makes you a sort of rebellious anarchist that isn't taken serious.

>Movie with "love scenes" would cut away, >before "the act" was performed, and left it up >to your own mind to figure out what was >happening. Today, nothing short of each and >every steamy detail would be tolerated by an >increasingly voyeuristic society.

Only by virtue of you always expressing that ever-present and unhealthy interest in personal information on me.....and bringing up age.

>and if you can't see these societal changes, >then you're just blind.

George, quick,,write me a song about irony.

>You want to watch porn all day long, great! >Rent the movies and watch them in your >trailer.

Once again, immaterial..and utilizing ME as an example with porn and a trailer is illustrating your inability to refrain from being a lid.

>Once again, it's not always about you,

Agreed,,,,then stop using me as an example or learn proper English and when to use pronouns and when not to use references to pronouns.

>your NPD not withstanding.

Your "lidness " kindly noted :)

>The original poster made reference to cussing >and sex on TV, that was the frame by which I >am responding.

Yup..and referred to me with the term "you",,or as I said, poor grammatical and English habits...no matter..NOW you know better.

no one mentioned porn (except YOU)

>If you kept in line with the subject you would >see where this subject came from and you >wouldn't make such claims.

I did...and again,,no one mentioned porn but you.

>Of course, your only purpose here is to malign >me, you care or know nothing of the original >subject.

Two things are occurring here,,one is that you have nothing to fadd constructively. There really is no need to discuss your personal feelings toward my mature intentions. My intelligent suggested method of taking your personal issues to email on many occasions have been ignored since day one. I made the offer several times to you, and as noted by the tone in my email to you concerning your lying identity, my intentions were anything but what you suggest. I have correspoded with many on this group, and only yourself and the other AKC personas have demonstrated their inability to cope when speaking with me. The fact that you continually make a comment, whine about content, then focus on me as your topic, speaks volumes about your imbecilic chant that "it's not about YOU". Hey George,,about that song,,can you call it "Blind Irony"..LOL.

The second thing happening here is Davey and Dogie and Lelnad and the other little lost sheep such as Georgie wish to express their denied anger at themselves for having no self-control and for having their dignity stripped by a bunch of cbers.
I also suspect that (based on N3CVJ's rants about war) these folks are a bit scared, intimidated by the mounting tension of war. It is causing much confused and angry emotions among the lids and they are scared.
It's been shown over and over...these lowlives do not like being shown what they are about.

and speaking of it,,,it was YOU that claimed you were in the illegal cb business with one who had a problem with pornography, so it appears you are speaking out of experience of the company you keep.

>I claimed nothing of the sort. Once again, you >read meanings into words that just aren't >there, yet ironically you acuse other people of >the same thing, underscoring once again, your >inability to spot your own hypocricy.

Well, go ahead and obfuscate just what you meant when you told this group your ex-partner in the illegal cb shop you had, had a problem with porn. Once again, the contingency looks forward to this weeks prophecy of what N3CVJ Davey Hall junior will tell us he really meant in a post, not what the actual words meant.

>But you have no right to demand that your >crap be blasted all over >the air, for people to see, even if they don't >wish to.

Once again, no one is or has demanded anything of the nature, Davey junior..try to remain relevant and non-projecting.

>Try reading the original post in this thread, and >you will see that that is precisely what we >WERE discussing, until you added your >ineptitude to the discussion.

Won't work. NO ONE, repeat, NO ONE (meaning none, zero, nada) has put such a thing forward, Davey..no one has demanded anything, and no one IS demanding anything, except you to take the focus off your foolish rants that are not true.

>There is such a thing as over the line. Just as >while you may have the >right to listen to a "boom box", you don't have >the right to disturb >other people with it at 2:00 AM.

You lost any point so now you must create another topic...fine..you won't be able to hold that one long, either.

>That "point" is a great example of how you >really don't have unlimited "rights".

Make up your mind. Is it about "me" or isn't it? You are self destructing again through self-contradictions. And even so...again...NO ONE said anything about "unlimited " rights. You;'re really losing ground and have become quite desperate, Davey.

>The 1st amendement, that you so >conveniently try to hide behind, does not >guarantee you the right to annoy people >unconditionally. That's why there are such a >thing as "quiet hours", and the "7 dirty words" >for TV broadcasting.

And yet again, it has nothing to do with me, as you claimed (right?), so why would you even mention such bullshit?

>There is no point in trying to have a further >philosophical debate with you, as you do not >grasp the concepts, nor the dangers of >"unlimited rights".

Your lidness kindly noted. :)
Your limited scope and closed mind preventing you from knowing anytihng about others except what your ignorance permits nullifies anything you claim about others. No one claimed anything about "unlimited " rights except your lost self.

>Furthermore, you add little of any value, as >your only purpose is to attack me,

I don't attack you, lid,,,,I don't lay down and allow you to roll your bullshit through here unscathed like you'd wish. I don't conform to your minority view, nor does the majority of this group. The fact that you can not enable yourself to muster enough self-control to allow yourself an intelligent exchange of communication with out losing focus on non-pertinent and non-related personal issues, does plenty of damage,,you neeed not be "attacked" for that to take place.

>and what I stand for, which is also a constant >reminder of your own failings.
>Dave
>"Sandbagger"

I must thank you. All these years, until meeting you, I was fooled concerning my undaunted success. Thank you, Davey..illustrating your lidness is exemplary to what I stand for.
Yes, N3cvj, I admit, I do not agree with anything you stand for. I could never stomach a liar.

Programming the main 2 channels on the 1210 is probably different than that of the 127, however programming the "extended" channel is exactly the same as the instructions for the 127's "extended" channel. The only really difference is that the "SET" button isn't as easily accessible on the 1210; you have to remove the top case cover to get to it.

All you need to do is follow the instructions given on that website. Most likely you won't need to write down the dip-switch settings prior to doing it, as they are all supposed to be in the off position during operation anyway, so it shouldn't matter...

1) With the radio on, set the channel switch to the channel you want to program (that will be the secondary set of 2 channels, because you are using the set button inside the radio instead of using the regular programming method; this won't effect the regular channels you already have set).
2) MAKE SURE CTCSS IS SET TO _OFF_!
3) Set the dip-switches to the those listed under "bank 1" for the frequency you want, and press the "SET" button. You will hear one long beep.
4) Set the dip-switches to those listed under "bank 2" for that same frequency, and press the "SET" button again. You should hear two (2) long beeps. If you hear three (3) beeps you will have to start over as something went wrong.

On a side not, over in the back right corner is VR1. It's labeled low power out. Guess what that's for!?! Give it a turn clockwise to lower, or counter-clockwise to raise... NOTE: FCC rules state that you can't turn it up to more than 2-watts... It's capable of 5-watts when turned up all the way...

There is also what appears to be a ?VC (variable capacitor)? near the front right of the board... It's labeled "MOD". Could it be modulation? I didn't think that had an effect using FM transmissions. Maybe it's the FM Deviation? Figure it would be labeled "DEV" then.... Who knows. I haven't touched it, and probably won't. If anybody else plays with it, let me know if you notice any difference...

Paranoia? LOL! Stop projecting. Guess what I just heard? And you know I am the bastion of truth and radiating light, so this is the gospel..y'all check it out....the feds are JUST BEGINNING to hassle folks over a few minor issues......one of a small consternation to several present...good advice from Uncle Twist.......update them addy's boys....don't matter what any of the websites and various hammie organizations say,,the FCC better have your CURRENT addy on file,,in other words,,where you live,,the locale of yer' crib, your domicile, your abode,,dig it all? Cuz the deal is....the hasslin' has begun.

One can cure squeal with better coax, good mic cable and rf bypassing

Need I remind you that I did not respond to your posts until you responded nastily to mine. My response was to something that Frank posted. By responding to me in a nasty manner you instigated this exchange. I could care less if the original question was about wire dipoles, TV antennas, or Aliens...

Pick up a copy of the ARRL antenna book. I actually like the 70's and 80's vintage brown cover version better. Easy to handle/carry and more hard content.

I got the motor to read it from a local cb'er back in the 70's who started homebrewing beams from various scrap metal/wire. He knew little about antennas, but he followed the examples in the book and built some really sweet antennas that just talked really well.

So I took his advise and read that book as a starter... been fun from that point on...

I just got a used HR 2510 and it didn't come with the original mic. Where I have the unit mounted is just far enough away to make it dangerous to change freq. during driving. I really could use the channel selecting feature the original mic offers. Would anyone have one for sale or know of a place I might be able to purchase an original mic.
Thanks in advance!

Hmm..more "facts" in a bit..but let's be accurate.......you're setting yourself up again........

>I am aware that there are certain leftist >propaganda regurgitators, >who would like to give the impression that >GWB's policies are less than honest.

Great. No doubt about it...partisanship is responsible for dividing this country and you have done more than your share at fostering such on this group. Now, allow us to try again with you,..you MUST get past this notion that if you aren't aware of something,, it can't be true.

>As soon as you get past the notion just >because you hear about something, that it's >automatically true.

It;ss not what I "hear" Davey,,it's part of what I do..I "ascertain" (a word that upsets Sparky).

>But these folks have their own (not so) hidden >agendas that fuel >their motives.

Agreed, which is why we need cohesiveness instead of the partisanship you play.

Not undermining it at all, anymore than you are undermining the opposition. I don't know if I ever mentioned it here, but the youngest of my brothers is in the AF in Tucson and has already been to Bagram once. Appears they will probably have to go again. He has 2 small children at home. Now I know war doesn't affect you and your golf buddies, only the faceless rabble,,,but make no mistake.....war is for when the US is directly attacked or threatened, and when only two other countries in the world stand with the US, and the citizenry at home is divided every bit as much over attacking Hussein as we were over the last presidintial election,,,,you can't say "probably he is connected." This is the same leadership that told us we would not stop or spare any expense in going after Osama..now it's Hussein,,,now they tell us Mohammed was responsible. We KNOW Hussein will not attack unprovoked,,,,,,,we're not even certain he has nukes.....

You do the same thing with cb and hammies.....you seek divisiveness, not cohesiveness.

>I seek respect, consideration, and proper >manners.

Once again, your afterthought interpretive suggestions of what you "really" meant when you posted is..um...appreciated.

.THAT,,is part of the problem with this country...people like you who would rather condemn history rather than unite and focus on the present.

>No one is condemming history.

Every time you bash Clinton you do it,, every time you say "this party was responsible."' Nevertheless, that in your involuntary ignorance you actually believe it to be true, the actual words coming from your keys are exactly that of which you (sigh) deny....."condemning history".

>Rather, it's people like me who believe that >those of us who refuse to learn the lessons >from history will be doomed to repeat them.

It's people like you who are a threat to their nation and people,,,to utter that you are blindly behind the government, right OR wrong, illustrates just how effective the propaganda has been on. Mustn't have any free thinkersDANGERmustnt have any detractorsCRIMINALmustn't allow dissidenceANARCHYcan't permit criticism of the governmentCOMMIEcant have any of that.

Bush has lied and lied and lied and so has Powell.

>According to whom?

Geez, Davey,,how old are you? Did you not pay attention at all during 91? Do you know nothing of the history of that "maneuvered invasion"? Merely expressing doubt over this is reason enough to drop this subject.

.they were caught

plagiarizing british intelligence reports as well as the satellite images they claimed showed massive buildups on the Iraqi border (they showed no such things) that were used as a means of deploying more troops.

>And Richard C. Hoagland claims that NASA is >covering up the truth >about the "face on Mars".

behaviors do not negate the topic.

>It is relevant, as it illustrates the ease by which >information can be "manufactured".

Sure they can, Davey,,but again, if you had half a clue what you speak of,,you wouldn't be opening for more ornithological delight.

>What makes you so ready to believe these 3rd >party sources over our own leaders? What >about these unverifiable sources is more >credible in your mind?

(sigh) Can you hear the laughter of the politically intellect crowd, Davey? Powell admitted it,,and judging by your self-defacing questions as to 'unverifiable sources".....(please excuse the huge shit-eating grin) it was history...more than likely it isn't a part of history if it didnt occur. Do your own research,, I refuse to take enough time to educate one who refuses or can't learn.....but here is a hint...begin with Vietnam, the US civilian massacre (you DO know where that took place, do you not?) and watch for Powells rising star..follow it all the way to the present...the Post,,NY TImes, Time Magazine, Atlanta Constitution, The Village Voice...aw, the hell with it.

>Again, you have to consider the motivation >and agendas of the Bush >detractors, when assesing their credibility, >WRT any "evidence" that they may present.

That's right..YOU claimed you are behind the government "Right or Wrong" so why would any reasonable freedom lover and advocate look to you or Bush for "evidence" of Hussein's threat when you very clearly indicate it's not needed in your blind ambition to follow him on nothing but his word which has been ADMITTEDLY false in the past..all in the name of national security, of course.

>I guess you don't believe in extending the >concept of "freedom" to the Iraqi people, or the >Afghani's as well?

And yet as a warmonger which war will not have any affect on you wahtsoever, you have YET to explain why Iraq and not dozens of dozens of other countries with the exact same nature of a dictator, equal weapons, equal or greater human rights abuses, ,,,,but als....no oil. STILL.....listening and waiting patiently for your response.

>Sometimes you have to do what you have to >do to preserve the American >way of life.

Just so there is no doubt, please tell us how the American way of life was threatened (besides the maladys our soldiers were infected with while there) in 91 and just how we "preserved"it while there in 91?.

>I guess you don't consider the liberation of >Kuwait to be a worthy cause?

Answer the question. A 'worthy cause" does not constitute the need for war. Worthy cause...isn't that a might liberal of you? Yet, you would assist and coddle other SELECT nations peoples (some could suggesy that makes you a racist or anti-semite) instead of focusing on our own, for when OUR people demand attention, you cry :"class warfare" and claim governments job isnt to take care of people...unless it's another nations of course, eh?

>WWII started with the invasion of Poland. Was >that not a worthy cause either?
>You obviously do not understand the concept >of neutralizing a threat before it becomes too >large.

Irrelevant. Once again, YOUR personal feelings, of what "I" supppose are think, are immaterial to the topic.

>And if we can muster the public support this >time, how many more American troop's lives >will be at risk against this bigger, badder >enemy?

I give up? The same amount that were affected with horrific maladys during the needless and useless Gulf war of 91 that we continue to deny have anything wrong with them? Here we have you parrots claiming one thing, but the second OUR families are hit with some nerve gas shit or any other pathogen,,,,,,,,,you same warmongers that used those 'variables' as an excuse for war,,DENY (that word is inherent and ingrained to you, eh Daevy?) such variables ever existed when OUR families are affected. Is that a good number? HOW many? YOU tell us,,WHAT IS an acceptable US casualty rate, DAvey,,,whatever it takes for a "worthy cause"? How many?

>I am surprised at the few very vocal >detractors, who enjoy all of the >benefits of our freedom, and general >prosperity, attempting to >undermine the very mechanism that keeps >those freedoms alive and well.

You failed to asnwer why Hussein is any more important or of a threat than Syria, Belarus, China, Singapore, N. Korea,,I can go on Davey..ALL these countries have human rights abuses as bad or WORSE than Hussein, and the same or higher tech ballistics and weapons of mass destruction than Hussein.

what we have demonstrated.....what happened to "Osama is responsible...he can not run..he can not hide..he is our number one priority..and for the atrocities he committed against the US, we will hunt him down like the animal he is..and I promise,,he will be brought to justice..he is our number one priority and we will spare no expense until he is brought to justice".
>And that hasn't changed, and you missed the >part about going after countries that have >aided the terrorists.

Sure it changed..he is no longer the number one priority...Bush wants his war and he wants it! YOU know it, I know it, the whole freakin world knows it....Bush looks likes' he's gonna pop any second if he can't bomb Iraq.

>There is evidence that Iraq has provided aid to >terrorist groups, as well as a link to Oklahoma >City.

You have demonstrated beyond a belief, from even the most jaded right winger, that one who blindly follows their government right OR wrong, is to be counted on for nothing, as they do not understand the most basic principles of freedom.

>nor do you accept the responsibilities that go >with freedoms. You want it all one way.

Now junior,,,you are self-destructing yet again with your obstinate aand ridiculous self-contradictions..if you insist the topic is not about me, then stop obsessing on the off topic, such as what I wish, want, or think. It clouds your fair contributions to discussions.

>When you are dealing with a barbaric, primal >mindset, weakness is >something you dare not show.

What about the rest of these rulers that fit that description to a "T"? Where were you and your mouthpiece for war when China puled the massacre in Tianamen Square?

>And internal affair.

You mean "an internal affair?"
LOL! And the entire mid-east conflict isn't? LOL.....once again,,,maybe your daughter buys your bullshit......

>If the Chinese had invaded Taiwan, it would've >been a different story.

Why junior, are you self-contradicting and claiming an economical relation?

We have N Korea who DEFINITELY has nukes and is directly threatening us.

>And we are dealing with them. All N. Korea >wants is money. They are a bunch of >opportunists. They are taking advantage of the >tense world situation, to leverage us. Nothing >more.

Hang around your local VFW for an afternoon, if you can locate one who will take you inside as a guest, blow that shit to the Korean vets. All Iraw wants s to be left alone....but hang on...you have a little more to go....

we have Hussein who we aren't even certain if he has nukes,,who is NOT threatening us, yet we must "bomb" him, even though the entire world knows he will not attack the US unprovoked.

>And how do you know that?

Sorry junior, but I made that last quote out of my own selfish reasons.......to illustrate the absurdness of waging war based on where you receive your limited news information.

>Sure he doesn't have long range missles, or a >submarine fleet, but he can attack his >neighbors, including Israel.

ANd here is where your shining intellect and education come in to play....you may stop me at any time, but before dining on feathers from the crow feast...a mere suggestion...check all the facts against what I am about to tell you.
Jeb Bush has been quite friendly with Orlando Bosch for years and years. Maybe you aren't familiar with Bush trying to buy Sharon with an Iraqi gift of war to the tune of 10 billion tax payer dollahs.....of course, we overlook the fact that Sharon killed almostone thousand women and children at the Chatilla refugee camp.
And of course, you casually dismissing N Korea as if you were informed of their situation, comes back to bite you in the azz.....see, junior,,,Dick Cheney's "Halliburton" did mucho business with Hussein. Did you miss last weeks widespread AP reports all across CNN and MSN and everyother damn media outlet in the world revealing Donald Rumsfeld headed the company that provided nuclear TECHNOLOGY to N. Korea? Whoooop-Dayyyummm! How about Iran that sued the US last month for giving weapons of mass destruction to Hussein? ANd you obviously didn't know daddy Bush ordered federal spooks off of Bin Ladens azz in 91..as the Bush clan and the Bin Ladens have long had business dealings.
Over 1500 Arabs and Muslims detained with no rights since 911....a single conviction out of the lot.

>And just becasue he hasn't perfected his >nukes, should we wait until he does, and >becomes a bigger threat? He's already >demonstrated a desire to expand his >boundaries. Why would any reasonable >person assume that he wouldn't continue to do >so, if he were left alone?

You are so cornfused.
No one is disputing he isn't a bad guy,

>Sure you are,

LOL! Tey it to someone that believes what you say, Davey? Can you name one?

and I must take this opportunity to show the hypocrisy you have just illustrated. You cry about those who hold an "agenda" against the president, yet you commit the exact same offense against those that you whine about, by claiming those who are against an Iraqi war somehow think Hussein isn't such a bad guy.

>Sorry,

Agian, no you're not. You are intentionally slimy and deceptive.

> but you demonstrate that yourselves with >your inability to utilize statistical analysis in >assessing his threat potential.

I have demonstrated that you have not a clue concerning many things, the state of the world, most recently. You haven't a clue,,,you take your anger and misdirect it at those who do.

No dice, Davey. Being a "bad guy" does not constitute war.

>When have we ever had a war with a "good >guy"?

Self- apparent transparency intact and on display......

Did you ever stop to think why we have republican manufactured wars on crime, drugs, terror, etc..but not one,,not one single war against homelessness or poverty or the mentally deficient?

>You want us to kill the homeless and the >metally deficient? Hmmm.....

How do you "kill" an inanimate object such as a "drug"..or an intangible, such as a thought?
C'mon junior,,if ya' wanna lid around,,try harder.

"Cause there ain't no $$ in it and THAT, even you can not dispute..same with these other dictators I mentioned....they have no oil.

Nice touch..you select and choose which dictators we should declare war on based on the same logic you selectively disburse the hammie creed.

>What does ham radio have to do with foreign >policy?

Its not all about what YOU feel it is...it's a demonstration in your approach, lack of self-confidence and esteem, and the way you choose to selectively apply standards to select situations and mistreat those who bring you information detracting from what you attempt to spew.

>And last time I looked, GWB wasn't asking me >to choose a dictator to attack.

You're right..he is demanding it.

It is more than obvious you have no loved ones or immediate family in the military.

>What difference would that make?

See how perceptive I am despite your failed attempts at creating an opposite illusion? If your daughter was out there, you would understand. AS I said, since you are not a vet, you have no loved ones n the military, the war is fodder to you, as it can't possibly have any ramifications in your world, sans the slight inconvenience at the pump.,,but hey,,your guy will straighten things out.

>The cost of freedom is greater than that of the >brave lives that are spent defending it. If you >truly believe in freedom, then you wouldn't be >questioning the need to defend against those >who have us living in fear right now.

Ha! Hows that for nailing the bullseye? I said in my other post plenty of you lids' anger is from fear..thank you, junior,,,but some of us hold your card. We aren't all cowering in fear, junior. Where you are concerned, the terrorists won. They have you defeated.

I'm not saying that stranded wire gets around all skin effect... just that for two wire diameters that are equal... the stranded has less skin effect than a single conductor.

I don't know how much they have. A friend of mine in British Columbia says it has been mild and not too much snow. Normally, he gets down to 40 below in the winter. His temps are warmer than ours (would you believe our high today was 8 degrees? Next to Lake Ontario and less than 3 weeks away from spring?). We were almost up to normal yesterday, then dropped 25 degrees in 1 hour. Went below zero last night, headed there again tonight and 6 to 8 inches of snow predicted Wednesday :(

The tube is a special case and is as you say... has an inner and outer skin.
We are talking about solid wires that are in a bundle. The stranded solid wires have less skin effect than a single wire if both are the same diameter.

The only way I could tell if it was high or low power was to hold the rubber duck by a fluorescent lamp. One way didn't affect the light, the other did.

My freq counter measured 151.8201 and 151.8801. My counter was also cold.
Using my scanner to monitor, turning that little metal pot in the front right corner does make it louder. The only tools I used for these adjustments were my fingers. No metal tools to leave telltale marks. <:

Scott you can try making a J-Pole antenna. There are lots of plans for them on the net. All you really need to do is scale down the dimensions by the factor 146/151.8, i.e. multiply them by 0.96 to move the operating frequency up to the MURS band. Try checking out the sites below:

http://www.qsl.net/ai4hb/jpole.html (Cheap but better than rubber duckie)
http://home.computer.net/~qsy/copperj.html http://www.packetradio.com/jpol.htm (Fill in the frequency and use the formulas to calculate the dimensions for you) http://kk1cw.tripod.com/antennadesigns.html (Look for J-pole. Also has spreadsheets for doing antenna designs too) http://home.attbi.com/~buck0/Kb1dig_j.htm (Has more gain. Don't forget to scale for frequency change) http://home.attbi.com/~buck0/Kb1dig2m.htm

http://home.attbi.com/~buck0/5-8thx2j.htm (5/8 wave 2m)

That should be enough to get you started. Good luck.

Its only been around since 2000. And the FCC finally quit mucking with the rules only last November. It is also covered under Part 95. The same as 11m HF CB and FRS, the UHF CB band.

I agreed with you. Years ago when we looked at products made in Japan, we said they were junk. Years later, we owned 90% of electronics (ie,Sony) in our household are made in Japan. Then it came from Singapore. Now, products made in China are getting better in quality. More and more manufacturers are moving their factories to China, jewerly business also. Scary right? China is also known to be Well if you guys gave up the amps on 11m you wouldn't have the problem there to begin with. And of course all I hear is Amps - Amps everywhere. Seems you think its out of hand too. So why not tell it like it is and try to discourage the use? Many of the Pirate CB posters on this group can't think any other way. So they just continue their "advise" to the newbies and get them in to the same bad habits that have caused the decline of 11m CB. You seem to think the same will happen on MURS. Perhaps you're right. But then again why complain about it? They're only following the poor examples set by your fellow CBers on 11m.

I hope not with the 706. RH gets ya doing that and he's going to NAL

Because of the "air holes" in stranded wire, it has a fill factor of .906 compared to solid conductors. Depending on the frequency, and length of wire the fill factor could be something that probably should be included in designs. Stranded wire probably is between stranded and solid core, being closer to solid core.

And get busted? That would be dumb. Given how cheap the legal rigs are it wouldn't make sense to mess around with an expensive 2m HT. Besides I see piles of used Motorola commercial HT's at most Hamfests selling for pocket change. All you have to do is find one crystaled for one of the 5 MURS frequencies, or get a crystal for one.

They wouldn't. A few watts and VHF or UHF can supply very nice local communications. No one should encourage high power on MURS. I don't think it will happen - for a while. It isn't a question of 'if'; rather it is a question of 'when'. Already folks are modifying radios and increasing power (albeit very modestly at this point). Anyone who thinks VHF can only be short range is kidding themselves.

Did you bother to read this thread? The come with 2 watts. Someone here said you need 50 watts to DX. Wouldn't that require an amp? I mean, wouldn't you require an amp with your "few watts'?

Why don't you kiss my ass. I seem to do fine during the day on CB. And at night, it;s fairly quiet. I like it just the way it is.

I am just curious, you have any rough stats on the actual illegal use of CB and ham? I mean, how do you not know that maybe 75% are legit? What about ham? You only assume that everyone has an amp, and everyone is illegal. I call it narrowminded.

>You seem to think the same >will happen on MURS.

I really don't know what will happen to MURS. I really don't care. I don't care if CB is all illegal, or 50% illegal. I know that I like talking on it. I know that II have better things to to than to go on ham groups and tell them what scum they are, and what a hypocrite Doug Adair is.

I am not complaining about it. I am saying, how is it the new CB, when old CB seems to be going strong. If I go on a MURS in my cars, will I be told where a cop is o the highway? Can I get directions? I don't think so.

Vinnie,

I almost forgot to mention - there is one repeater that I usually can't hear on my HT. It boomed in one day and I worked a Canadian. That was on a walkie talkie on 440 FM running all of 2.5 watts. Very comparable to MURS power. Add a decent antenna on the roof (nothing huge, just something with some gain) and that 2 watts (well, most folks have 'em turned up to 5 watts now) will be capable of more than line of sight with tropospheric enhancements. The 50 watts or so will allow communications over quite a stretch with enhancements. Quite a stretch.

But they are short range in there current state. There are rated 7-10 miles.

Jim,

If people can, they will increase power. The difference is I don't care if they do. That is not my problem, and I don't care. The destruction of this country will not be by people running high power on CB. I have other concerns. NJ has a serious property tax problem. It has a auto insurance problem. This country now faces threats it never faced before. We have 18-20 year old kids in the Persian Gulf, many of whom are going to die in a war.

Do you think I have better things to worry about than a keydown, or the "sewer" that these people complain? Seriously, When I came here after 20 years out of CB, I came to learn and see whay I missed. What I found is a war between people about running high power and the hams. One guy has made it his job to get all non-legal CB equipment banned from ebay, while he commits illegal operations on ham. We have another guy who feels so deeply about the 4 watts, that he threatened me, and practically stalks others on this group. I am just curious if these people ever had a beer before they were of legal age, or if they smoked pot. I would bet they did. Which makes them hypocrites.

So, is MURS the new CB? I doubt it. Will people run high power? I don't care. I don't even care about the illegal hams.

As far as pot, remember, we may have smoked, but we didn't inhale ;)

The real problems will gradually reveal themselves as we continue to go off

No, but my employer was using a very noisy RF heating machine and one could draw arcs from a pencil to ground a few feet from the machine. The airport was only a few miles away. The FCC showed up and there was considerable scattering ;)

Begin quote:

Bare Strands in Contact
The resistance ratio of n strands of bare wire placed parallel and making contact with one another is found by experiment to be the same as for a round solid wire which has the same area of cross section as the sum of the cross sectional areas of the strands; that is, n times the cross section of a single strand. [note this doesn't say that the resistance is n times, it is the resistance ratio we are tallking about here. The DC resistance will be R/n, where R is the resistance of a single strand. What this says is that the AC resistance will be, generally, R, so that Rac/Rdc (n parallel bare strands) = n * Rac/Rdc (single strand).] This will be essentially the case in conductors that are in contact and are poorly insulated, except that at high frequencies the additional loss of energy due to heating of the imperfect contacts by the passage of the current from one strand to another may raise the [ac] resistance still higher

End quote

Gee........more losses at AC frequencies from imperfect contacts.

Not here. There is no one on GMRS except a few using repeaters in NYC area. And that's is only one channel. As far as FRS, there is no one at all. But that range is too short anyway. There aren't many on CB at night, but still far more than the above. I don't know about MURS. But I can get slightly farther on my CB than I can on MURS. I can probably go up to 20 miles at night. depending where I am. Some places I get barely a couple miles.

I can only speak for the Western Ohio area. Monitoring both MURS and FRS frequencies I have noticed a lot of former 11 m operators using these frequencies. There are also a lot of people who have never used a CB now using FRS. This is the band of the new CBers.

There is a group of guys that use the Audiovox GMRS/FRS base around here. Audiovox was selling reconditioned ones on their website for $19.99! Here is some links:

http://www.audiovox.com/cgi-bin/ncommerce3/ExecMacro/product_mainpage.d2w/in put?prrfnbr=578063

http://www.liquidations.com/AudiovoxGMRS2000.htm Unfortunately this website only sells them in lots of 4 at $19.99 ea. If you check the Audiovox website they have them on there periodically.

It has the 7 lower FRS channels as well as 8 GMRS only channels. It has a detachable BNC rubber ducky antenna. The other interesting thing is that it can be set for high/low power on all the channels including the FRS ones. Low power is 0.500 W and high is 2 watts. Using high power and a modified RS scanner antennas a few guys get about a 15 mile range between base stations. One guy also uses the base station as a mobile since it has a 12v DC input and the RS speakermic works with it. He uses a modified 70 cm 5/8 wave ham mag mount antenna with it. Range between the base and mobile has been up to 10 miles (normally 5-8 miles). FYI they both have GMRS licenses. A couple of other guys don't.

Gee........stranded wire is contained by insulation which t is a dielectric that heats up and causes loss at high frequencies.

Gee.....stranded wire causes unwanted dispersion at high frequencies.
Dispersion causes attenuation.

Are you sure dipoles work better with stranded wire?

Assuming you can count as high as 2, notice there are that many questions:

The first asks about the difference between copper and steel in a dipole, which was answered easy enough without some half-educated CB supertech-wannabe confusing the issue.

The second question had to do with solid or braided wire, which is where the discussion took the turn into internet mythology. Because of this question you might assume that he is specifically talking about a wire dipole, but you fail to realize that some people don't know that rigid beams for 11 meters are not only possible but common, as I'm sure Jay could tell you. In fact, they are fairly easy to construct from scratch. Also, it was pointed out that the real difference isn't with the skin effect, but the diameter and construction, and that is where the original poster was asked to pay his attention.

But one thing is for sure, and that is the poster was interested in making the best antenna possible. While I may not agree that a horizontal dipole is the best idea for a band that is mostly vertical, the fundamentals are the same -- whatever you do, do it well. Matter of fact, if he has the space, I would suggest either a collinear or yagi antenna, neither of which have been mentioned so far.

Also, there is one more thing that hasn't been mentioned in this thread, which is that an antenna made from tubing has a greater bandwidth than wire simply because of it's greater diameter. And that greater diameter increases both the capture area AND the radiation resistance, making it more efficient than wire, stranded OR solid. So even if he is planning on making a hanging dipole, tubing might be a consideration, especially if he want's to make the best dipole possible.

> It does say Need dipole info, not all >the bullshit you through into your posts .

This is an open discussion -- take a pill. Are you suggesting that the original poster is too stupid to pick through the information in the thread and apply only what he wants? Or do you think that that he is morally compelled to follow every piece of advice resulting from his questions? Get real.

>He asked what wire does he >build his dipole out of....

...stranded or solid. The consensus was to use stranded, and to that I agree. But then you had some internet-educated poster claiming that stranded was better because of skin effect, which is not true. And now -you- are promoting ignorance by defending that myth.

> Do you have a comprehesnsion problem?

No, but apparently you do, since the original poster never asked for false information, half-assed opinions, or trolling whining.

> As
>you stated "Pay attention" Stick to the subject. No one except for >you has mentioned UHF loops, 6 meter beams, tubing etc.. Whats your >problem? Just make stuff up as you go? You need to hit the books, >and learn how to stick to the subject material.

You mean that providing practical examples of antennas made from tubing and solid wire has nothing to do with the difference between stranded and solid wire? What books have YOU been reading? Are they incomplete and the reader is expected to connect the dots and finish them with a box of crayons?

> Thats what should >happen in the real world, which seems you are not to be a part of.

Ok, I guess we do need a visual aid:

www.aimcomm.com/sparky/skin.gif

There are cross sections two conductors of the same diameter d, the left one is solid and the right one is stranded. RF current will only penetrate a maximum distance from the surface, as shown by the two grey circles. On the stranded wire, see how the 'skin' is shaped like a cresent, getting shallower the closer it gets to contacting an adjacent wire. (Actually, that cresent is more pronounced, but that's the best I could do with my CAD program.) And notice the dotted line indicates the 'tube' created by the outer strands, and that no current flows inside that tube. Also, and most important, notice that the solid wire has much more area covered by current penetration (skin effect) than the stranded. So when you say that stranded wire has less effect, what you -should- be saying is that stranded wire has less area covered by skin effect. Don't forget that more area means less resistance. So which conductor has less resistance? The solid wire.

That's the way it works, Brian, like it or not. If you want to do the math, do so at your own leisure. Or, you can do what students have been doing for the past century and measure the difference for yourself in a practical experiment. That shouldn't be a problem since you are an RF engineer, aren't you?

EXACTLY!!! Now, if there is less area that conducts current, that means MORE resistance, not LESS!

5318. Battery power supply for CB

Hi--

I have a 19 DX III Cobra CB radio. I am currently running it off a DC power supply at home that I use for some other stuff. I would like to have a battery power supply as well for home use in case of emergency. Does anybody have any plans, or does somewhere like Jameco sell a unit off the shelf, or a kit? This radio needs 13.8 VDC, and draws up to 1.5 amps when sending.

Thanks for any ideas,
Amanda

You CBers have 3 general purpose bands to use. So what's your problem?
Afraid to use them?

>How do you get every one on 11 M to make the > switch? Please answer the question.

Since your did say "please" OK. When people find out they don't have to put up with S9 noise levels during the day and the overpowered stations 1500 miles cross country, keying up on their QSO, when all they want to do is talk to a buddy a few miles cross town. Contrary what you may hear most people are only interested in CB for local communications anyway. If they can't get it on 11m they will go elsewhere, like FRS, already full of kids, and now the up and coming MURS channels. The motivation will come from other CBers spreading the word that a new band, i.e. service, exists where they can talk without most of the draw backs found on the current 11m band.

Dave, are you really that stupid, or are you just trying to help Douglas W. Adair N8WWM live down his own violations on the Rain Report so he can get back to crying about CB rule violations, posting gay porn binaries, pedophile fantasies, running BI>20 spew attacks on rec.radio.cb and forging Twistedhed to all groups in the rec.radio hierarchy with fellow net-abuser and outcast Leland C. Scott KC8LDO?

In any case, instead of defending Twistedhed, I merely pointed out that Douglas W. Adair N8WWM appears to enjoy writing original pieces featuring children, specifically boys, and gay sex. It's not like this is the first or even the second time Adair N8WWM has written original pedophilia songs.

Why are you, Dave Hall, so eager to defend Douglas W. Adair N8WWM from having his pedophile fantasies exposed and disseminated? Are you sympathetic to pedophile fantasy writers, assuming N8WWM hasn't -yet- raped children? Are you frightened that Adair will call you a "traitor to amateur radio", as he did the late Richard McCollum N  BK, if you don't support his insane, abusive behavior? Does Twistedhed drive you crazy enough to support Doug Adair N8WWM who regularly uses the kind of "gutter language" you've spoken so vehemently against, Dave?

Your hypocrisy is positively shocking, Dave Hall N3CVJ.

The most likely explanation for your brainless follow-up is that you're just one anti-twistedhed k00k defending another. Appropriate groups added. When malicious clowns like you are involved, Dave N3CVJ, it's hard to tell, but I'm willing to explore it at length with you.

Regarding your baseless assertion that I am "twisty" under another "nic", one needs only to be able to read to realize that his posting style and mine are quite different. You obviously consider yourself quite intelligent, regardless of the fact that you're actually a blinkered, intellectually myopic hypocrite. Can't you at least read well enough to see the difference, Dave?

I've restored the post in question below my comments. Read it closely and decide whether your bitterness over being clobbered in debate after debate is worth defending a federal outlaw, homosexual stalker, racist and pedophile fantasy writer like Douglas W. Adair N8WWM just because he, too, is obsessed with "twisty".

What you may find is that the MURS band will have about the same range as your 11m equipment when there is no propagation due to the ionosphere. The crazy thing is I've personally noticed I can get through to another station on 2m easier than I could on 6m running double the power, and NO repeaters. This is in an urban setting. Several other Hams have noticed the same thing. Some have reported even better results on the 1-1/4 m band. At 70cm the losses becomes high enough that the range is reduced greatly. You would figure that a lower frequency, thus lower losses, and more power would work better. That doesn't appear to be the complete picture. Other factors seem to play a key roll such as how well the RF reflects, or refracts, around buildings etc. I think people will be a bit surprised by the kind of performance they will get from basic MURS gear.

Hate to "break" it to you. Most people can use CB during the day, with the exception of truckers. When they get home at night, the bad is clear. The Dxers Ispeak to, seem to be older retirees or such.

Truckers, sure. But the day DX is far more popular than night QSO.

I am just curious. Do you bother to see the ebay auctions for CB. It's still popular. Hate to "break" it to you. It's not going anywhere.

Depends on what you want to do. A few watts is plenty for a handheld.
In fact you won't find a handheld with over 7 to 8 watts. Thats due to RF exposure guide lines.

>You can already DX all over the country on 50
> watts on 11 M.

People do it on 6m with less than that, like 10 watts. Of course I heard 11m stations doing the same on 4 watts. When the band is open you don't really need much power.

That happens much more in the summer months. Try early in the morning

I've done 200 miles mobile on 2m sideband running no more than 50 watts. When I picked up my FT-817 at Dayton I worked another station in Indianapolis from the university dorm room using a used 30 watt 2m linear I picked up.

Sounds like they were using one of those old vacuum tube power oscillators. The kind with the water cooled transmitting triode operating off of a 15 to 18 KV anode supply. By the way they should NEVER generate an arc like you described!!! One unfortunate person pointed at the output of one of those things using a pencil, had the output arc to it, and killed him in from of a group of school kids that came through their plant for a field trip tour. Our service manager had something similar happen to him. The output wasn't shielded. He was lucky. And he also has the scars up and down both arms from RF burns he got to prove it.

For around $45 a setup with a small 8A gel battery and automatic charger.
www.mouser.com
With 2 war's near a 600AH marine battery ($60-$100) at West Marine) is a better idea, it will a small rigs 24-7 for a couple days (receive).
Can run reading lamps, small TV a APS for computer, also.

How about if we make a braid out of 20 gauge insulated wire. 3 or 4 strands. More?

However, in a mobile or other high flex application, stranded lasts longer. With this in mind, a single strand of #16 will fatigue and break or stretch before a multiple strand of #16. If you can keep your solid wire from flexing, by attaching it to a long non-metallic support, it will last longer. At this point, you might as well use tubing that is self supporting.

Just wanted to verify that the radio WAS on the frequency it was supposed to be.

I cranked mine all the way!! Got 3 times louder. Got feedback from the scanner.

Did you notice the mic connector only had two pins with wires?
Condenser mic. Must be a current loop sensing key with audio superimposed on DC.

Stranded wire most likely is insulated. The insulation at 27mhz becomes a lossy dielectric and makes its use less attractive.

There are a couple of ways that you can approach your problem. You could simply buy a motorcycle or lawn tractor battery (They're around $30), and run it in parallel with your power supply. The power supply will keep it charged, and if the power goes out, the battery should run the radio for several hours, up to a couple of days, depending on battery capacity.

You could also utilize a computer UPS. The batteries in a UPS, are designed to run a computer for at least a half hour. Since a CB radio draws less power than a computer, it should last much longer. Simply plug your CB power supply into the UPS outlet, and you're good to go.

It's already happening. I, just yesterday, heard my first "non business" MURS QSO, and as I listened, I heard the one guy admit that he was running an ICOM 706, MKII.

Most 2 meter ham rigs are easily modifiable for the MURS area. I suspect that 25 and 50 watts will soon be the "norm" for MURS.

> It isn't a question of 'if'; rather it is a

The answer is "already". The line of sight characteristics of VHF will ultimately limit MURS WRT DX opportunities. The band enhancements will be few and far between, and not so obvious, when they occur. Using 2 meters as a guide, I can safely say that your normal local range can be in the 20 - 50 mile area, depending on your HAAT, antenna gain, and power. Mountain toppers, can expect even more. So the range can be comparable to 11 meter CB, when there is no D

However, I do not agree that higher power will not buy you anything. Higher power helps fill in the gaps in coverage, and will extend your range to a small degree.

Maybe you should. Too many people live their lives with an "I don't care" attitude, and that's why we have many of our social problems. As long as people continue to "not care" nothing will get done, and things will only get worse.

> The destruction of this country will not be by people running high power on CB.

No, probably not. But like that old saying; "The road to hell begins with the first step". If you ignore small societal problems, they will only grow into big spcietal problems.

The price you pay for freedom. It's been a long while since this country has been in a long term war situation. Many people grew up, never knowing what sacrifice was all about. People living through WWII, will remember gas rationing, blackouts, air raid drills, curfews etc. Things that the current crop of "kids" call, "infringing on our rights".
Sometimes you have to make short term sacrifices for the greater good.
Those who give their life for the preservation of freedom, and the American way of life, will be no less honorable than those who have fought in wars since our own revolutionary war.

You can't know who is "turning in" people to E-bay, so you really can't make that statement. I applaud efforts to keep honest people honest.
Sorry if it rains on someone's parade. But part of growing up is realizing that you can't always get what you want. Sometimes you have to give in to what other people want as well.

So, by your logic, every cop, who's ever misbehaved as a kid, has no right to enforce the law now? You don't think people's attitudes can change?

You keep approaching this as an "either/or" situation. No one here is suggesting that anyone "give up" 11 meter CB. Only that MURS offers an alternative for those people who are more interested in reliable local communications.

If your primary interest is DX, and the "primal" nature of operators, then CB is the place for you. If you just want to chew the fat with close local friends, without the interference, MURS can be an attractive alternative.

I understand what you are saying, but realistically, many of the guys futzing around with MURS right now are hams. Most already have 2m gear, and so it's much easier to modify what they already have, rather than spend more money. If they turn the power down to 2 watts, it would be extremely difficult to tell the difference between a modified ham rig, and a bona-fide MURS radio. Some have told me that if interest in MURS picks up, that they will "legitimize" themselves by springing for the real McCoy. But they aren't spending the money if the band doesn't become popular.

Seems to me judging from that post, you think they're the same. But yes
I know, that's really not what you meant to say, it's only what you wrote........

Simple logic. Anyone who is convinced that Saddam IS a bad guy, would be willing to do something about it. The fact that you hesitate, means that you don't believe he is really a threat, and by extension, not such a bad guy.

It would seem that you are the one infuriated, since you seem to see fit

And for the record, you did make the claim that liberals and

Of course not. And those who don't are usually part of the problem.

Speaking for the silent majority again? When will you get over yourself?
You are hardly in any position to speak for anyone, seeing as how biased and warped your perspective is.

When was the last time, I used the term "perverse"? Certainly not in this thread.

I had no partner in any business.

No, it wasn't. Try watching some classic shows on Nick's TVLand channel, to get a better perspective on what was popular 40 years ago. I guarantee you that any "innuendo" that might have been there was both brief and subtle. Not like today, where it smacks you in the face, and certain shows have to be rated for nudity, violence and sexual content.

I know that. The real question is why are you always making it out to be?

That's a bit of an exaggeration, but our society's moral values have declined in the last 30 years or so. What it eventually leads to, is anyone's guess.>

> The society is changing and you're not.

So, what you're saying is that I should adopt the declining moral values, so that I can be with the "in" crowd? What sort of person, sells off his principles for a little popularity?

You see, there are still a great number of morally decent people in this country. I am hardly in the minority in that respect. What I don't want to be a part of is, the cancer that is slowly eroding those values, eminating from hedonistic and self centered people, who were never taught the proper way to conduct themselves.

You forgot the more obvious choice of fighting back to reclaim what was once a much better place to live. Work through the system to oust people who promote socially devisive issues. Demand accountability and responsibility for all citizens. Undo the years of liberal programs, which teach dependancy and drain away incentive.

That makes no sense. How can one be a "rebellious anarchist", when they support the rule of law, and the code of decency and morality? And anarchist believes in abandoning rules and constraints, and doing what they damn well please.

You are hardly one to be lecturing me on the proper use of grammar.
You've obviously never heard of using the term "you" as a general pronoun to used to describe a particular group. As in, "You illegal Cbers".

That you would consider yourself worthy of that judgement, is another classsic NPD symptom rearing its ugly head.

Your "intentions" are hardly mature. As I've said before, your attitude is that of a spoiled, disenfranchised 20-something, who feels that they are owed something, and who is not above taking it out on the world.

> My intelligent suggested method of > taking your personal issues to email on many occasions

Of course they were. Your ulterior motives are clear to anyone other than you, it seems. You are not about resolution. You are about defiance and belligerance.

> I made the offer several times to you,

Another lie added to the growing list.

> I have > me.

It's not an inability as much as it is contempt. You are a sociopath. A wart on the ass of society. You defend those who break the law, and shun common courtesy, and then act as if you are in the right. You offer nothing constructive, in any threads, your only defense is to attack your opponent, with ad-hominem namecalling and vitriolic statements, and deliberate inflammatory accusations about being untruthful. You then make the weak excuse that "I only give back what I get", in order to somehow justify your inexcusable actions. You argue and obfuscate. You are deliberately evasive, and deceptive. You hide behind a fake name, and then have the nerve to demand credibility, and claim to speak for the "majority", which to date, has remained strangely silent, when it comes to defending your "good" name. In essence, you epitomize the failings of our society, our parents, our teachers, and those entrusted with our care. This is illustrated further by your lack of either incentive or ambition, to rise above your menial career as a charter boat captain, which further underscores your bitterness at those who are successful, and who have achieved something more worthy in their lives, than DXing with a handfull of rocks in the ocean.

This newsgroup is your only blessing. You hide behind a fake name and persona. You attempt to project an image of a person who you are really not. You attempt subterfuge, by coyly hinting at professions that you can only wish you were a part of. You've claimed to be a writer, yet you've made many grammatical mistakes, and your vocabulary skills are based on plagiarism. Your Sporatic Waves article was judged to be the work of a high school student, by someone who teaches writing. You've hinted at being involved with the law, yet you do not understand the basics of the very laws you claim to be familiar with. You've claimed to be in the information gathering busines, yet your only connection to the internet is a WebTV. There are way too many inconsitencies which have appeared in your claims. Yet, when called to the carpet over your "innuendo"s, you quickly accuse the other party of having a "communications deficit". It's funny, only those of us, who have your true number, do you accuse of this. When pushed for something which would verify your claim, you hide behind your anonymous "cartoon name", and further accuse others of "invasion of privacy". But through all of this, your anti-social and narcissitic tendancies show through loud and clear, and give a fairly solid baseline, by which your other actions become instantly obvious.

No go play with someone who you can impress.

Which direction was up and which was down (for the MOD)? I'm sure I could

Yes, I did notice that 2-pin deal. I'm not really keen on the mike itself, as you have to push the button in all the way, and if you even let off the pressure a little, it will occasionally stop transmitting and cut you off for a second or so. There is a very distinct clicking sound when you push it. Might just be some sort of on/off momentary pushbutton switch in there.
I think I might just have to tear it apart and see if there is someway to make it less sensitive to pressure change...

Exactly why I moved up to MURS. Can't talk across town during the day. I haven't given up on CB at all, I'm just using MURS as an alternative to CB during those times when CB won't get me the distance I need... They are both on at the same time, always have been, always will be...

Wow! I didn't know you were appointed secretary of state. And all this time I thought it was Colin Powell. Since when do you determine when a war is "just"? In case you've missed your history lessons, we haven't fought a war on our shores since the Civil War. I guess the rest of the wars, that we fought in were "unjust"?

>, and when only two other

There are far more than 2 countries standing by us. Other than Britain, there is Spain, Italy, Israel, some of the Balkkan states, and even Canada. That's just off of the top of my head. The only real opponents of the war are France, Germany and China. Since France and Germany have trade agreements with Iraq, it's not too tough to see why they would oppose war. Russia is sitting on the fence.

And the citizenry of this country still support the war by well over 50% (I don't know the exact poll numbers as of today), it's just that the liberally biased media has been giving the protestors a disproportionate amount of air time which gives the impression that the movement is greater and more organized that it really is. And many protesters are not so much anti-war as they are anti-Bush. They clearly haven't gotten over the fact that their guy lost in 2000.

And for you to blindly distrust the government, shows how effective the 3rd party propaganda has worked on you. And for the record, I do not support policies that I feel are wrong. When I said that I'm behind the US right or wrong, I was alluding to the perception of some of the public, that the government is wrong.

A more accurate statement would be "Whether you believe the government right or wrong, I am behind the US". It's called projecting a united front, showing resolve, showing that we are truly UNITED.

For the record, there are not "dozens and dozens" of countries with despotic dictators, who commit anything worthy of our attention. Invade the sovereignty of a neighboring nation, and that will get our attention.

You should, your emotionally based position cannot be supported in the face of logic.

Answer me this, When should we worry about Saddam? When he invades Kuwait again? Fires a missile at Israel? Sneaks a suitcase nuke into the US? Just when, in your mind, will he become "worthy" to you? How many innocent civilian lives will be lost before we finally put that man in his place?

So, in your mind, we should have never gone to war in 91, and just let Saddam roll all over Kuwait? Not our problem you say?

The amount of US casualties will increase exponentially, the more we allow Saddam to build up his arsenal of WMD. Hit him now when his ability to fight back is weakened, or wait until later when he becomes a bigger threat. What's your choice.

I know about it quite well. The country was in panic, many fly by night companies got rich selling "bomb shelters", and in the end, it was over, after some posturing at the hands of Nikita Kruschev and our own JFK.

> Check the doomsday clock...oh, never mind,,you'll say it's not official,

It was all perception. Russia was only too aware of our ability to stike back. Do you REALLY think they'd risk mutual annihilation to prove a point?

All information available, from many sources, including Belgium agreed with what I posted. It now looks like you couldn't even read that info correctly.
No where will you find any information that states that cycle 23 was

The wheel was set in motion on 9/11. That is when we said collectively, "enough is enough". We will route out terrorists and those who harbor and aid them. Nothing more.

Absence of evidence is not, in itself, evidence. The fact that we've never recovered Bin Laden's body does not mean that we failed to kill him. He could be buried under the mountains of Afghanistan. You don't know. The fact that he has not been seen in public since only adds to the speculation that he no longer lives.

As for Mohhamed, he was Bin Laden's right hand man. He carried out the orders that wee handed to him. He deserves the fate that will be bestowed upon him for the crimes he has comitted. All in due time.

While it is logically improbable to prove a negative, the absense of

Only to those with misguided motives. I'd say Bush has used an incredible amount of restraint. He could've started this war many months ago, when public sentiment had not yet been polluted with the crys of the leftist propagandists.

Because it's not the lead story from the talking heads on the 6:00 news, does not mean that the insiders in the government are not still comitting resources to the problem. Did it ever occur to you that we might make more headway covertly, with respect to verifying whether Osama is still alive?

As opposed to an anarchistic sociopath who believes that freedom is the right to do what he wants, where he wants, with no due consideration for other people's rights? Yea, you're a true litmus test of the principles of freedom.

Well, if they kill enough PLO members, maybe their terrorist problem will go away. I have no sympathy for any people who strap bombs on their backs and blow up innocent civilians, to advance their cause. What Israel did was in retaliation.

So what? The Clinton administration was on watch when much nuclear information was made available to the Chinese. No one ever suggested that we are clairvoyant. We will do business with someone one day, and then realize that they are a terrorist the next, and things change.

As did Clinton give up the opportunity to take charge of Bin Laden from the Sudanese. So what's your point? Bin Laden wasn't public enemy #1 then, and his family are well respected in the construction business.

This is pointless. You go ahead and take that "Blame America First" attitude, and somehow justify the reasons why we should just ignore all the unrest and anti-american sentiment in the world, and just hide our heads in the sand.
You are right, that in the short term, we will save the lives of maybe a few hundred soldiers. But what will the eventual cost be to American citizens when more 9/11 acts are committed, and other despotic leaders set their sights on us?

More inaccurate assumptions? Just because you can't muster up enough education to obtain a career that would allow you to afford a real computer among other things, is no reason to project your own failings onto others.

That you cannot understand simple sentences and common grammar, you then contacts on the hams bands by hams.

Just some sidebar comments in regards to the MURS vhf radio service previously mentioned on the news group.

******

It will be useful to some as is the GMRS service.

Low cost radios will suffer in busy locations... as in poor receiver preformance.

Adjacent high power repeaters and paging systems will degrade the system preformance. One might also consider an Itinerant VHF License.

Radio Companies will offer and close out low cost radios like crazy...

Disconnect the battery from the supply when the supply is not turned on.
There is a bleeder resistor that discharges the main filter cap.

Cheap UPS's have square wave outputs. These heat up your transformer more and regular AC. Also your CB's internal supply may not have enough filtering to remove the square wave noise.

Typical ham pot-stirrer. You ASSumed wrong, again. I don't have a 706.
I've got a 2950. Had it for a decade.

I know lots of hams that use their 2950 on 10 and 11. It's very convenient for them to shift up 1 MHZ to get on the voice portion of 10 meters from 27.3x50.

Is he going to take away my CB license?

I don't splatter the band. I don't cause H&D. I don't cuss.
If he wants to bust me for using a stock PC-122 and a TS-250 (on low once in a while, use the preamp more, in the mobile,) more power to him. He should go after the dicks on CH 31, then get US Marshalls and clean up CH6, CH11 and CH22. If

me. I just want them to keep their energy on one frequency.

Rev.Jim has the right idea.

We have in use right now a marine deep-cycle battery being trickle charged by an automatic on-board charger, both purchased at Wal-Mart. It is currently powering an all-band scanner, but can be used for CB and other 12V devices with ease. Modern receivers will run for many days without recharging with this set-up. The battery is about $75.00, the charger about $30.00, but it is a very versatile arrangement and will last a long time. 13.8 volts is nominal, and available, but your radio should work down to 9 volts should you be off the grid for that long. If you want to economize a little, you can use a regular MAXX car battery from Wal-Mart, they are 3 year replacement / up to 96 month pro-rated battery with up to 900 cold cranking amps. I'm guessing they will deliver about 100-120 amp-hrs if required. Some group sizes even have the top posts AND side posts, which is pretty handy for radio use. We have detected ZERO noise or hum from the charger... that battery is a HUGE capacitor! :).

Have you looked at the Hustler SF-2? It will trim up to MURS fairly easily. It has a 3/8 24 mount, you would just need to add the radials to the mount to make a GP.

Vinnie,
I think you are missing the point. He said "new CB", but that doesn't mean anyone has to quit using the 'old CB'.
Just like no has to quit driving an older car when the "new or the other, and not both. Geez man, save it for something important, like when Bordens or BlueBell quits making 'Butter

Pardon me if I jumped the gun, and you have my apolgies if I'm wrong, but it sure sounds like you just claimed to be working stations on 2 and 6 meters.

If you were only listening, or if another person in your party worked them, then you should have said so. Your comment implies that YOU worked them, and as you have admitted not having, or wanting a license, that would mean they were not legal contacts.

Which of course means that liberals (according to you) are not in favor about. You made the connection between a liberal and a libertarian, which is as wrong as saying liberals are republicans. You goofed, admit

Hi..
I just acquired a Tram CB 201 w/Vox.
The mic connector on the radio is one that I have'nt seen before (First Tram I've owned..). Is there a source where one could get one for the mic? Or change it out to a four pin connector?
I've searched around and no one seems to have one. It appears to be a "twist" type connector.
Also there is a small "toggle" switch on the chassis.What is this for?
I got the radio at an estate sale.
Any help would be appreciated. Mike

Dave, the similarities are obvious to those that can compare the writing styles, use of Macintosh PC's, and moronic statements made by both concerning laws. Now, I don't have proof, but I know what I read, and I know what I think. And you know what? I think Dwight was Aaron. Sue me.

There are some low cost radios out there already of commercial quality. Some of those you can sit right next to a pager transmitter and not hear a peep out of the radio due to overload or intermod.

True but the radios where originally not exactly "cheap" units.

Hello Group.

I have been away for awhile, (1 due to a stroke on Jan 1st, and 2) because my computer refused to work for about 3 weeks. Hehe, no matter what I did, the thing just refused to work! But I am back to create a little of "noise". I posted (everybody knows about my opposition to truckers, or others, "freebanding" in 10 Meters) this simply to say that, as predicted, this kind of illegal activity WILL lead to increased enforcement--if for no other reason that complaints are increasing about en-croaching on frequencies that are not authorized to the public. It matters not whether a person happens to be a ham; most hams actually SUPPORT enforcement against other hams who tread on others' turf. It only matters only that a person is operating a radio on unauthorized frequencies. The last complaints I have read seem to (lately) be concentrated BELOW CB channel one. Who cares about that? Well, the Air Force, particularly their Auxiliary, gets nervous when people begin easing ever closer to specific frequencies. We've debated this issue before; no need to start up again. But this is pointed out in another thread. It believe was mentioned by Twisthed that there seems to be a bit more attention being paid to enforcement and someone decried the proprosal to used "tagging", license info, or some other means of preventing the sale of radios that "could" be used to transmit in illegal frequencies. Some one even bashed ARRL--which is fine--but one must remember that ARRL necessarily doesn't originate or endorse FCC petitions. Anyone can intro-duce a petition: it is then FCC that "may" assign a rulemaking number and ask for comment from the public.

The point of this issue is and my comments is that, just like said along, there will more efforts to curb the unprecedented willingness of people to just operate where they will. I am only one voice, so don't "git" on me. It just true that organizations, agencies, and even forces unforseen to us nor-mally are working to fight it. Petitions such as the one to regulate the sale of radio equipment for which I have no comment will pass, fail, be proposed, fail--and proposed again. Some of those petitions WILL pass eventually. Remember: because of peoples' refusal to obey the rules about CB amplifiers, 1978 saw the passage of a rule saying that no amplifiers capable of operation between 24 and 32 MHZ were to manufactured. Heck, it really didn't stop anything--maybe drove some builders underground. And one group suffered as a result: the Amateurs. On the surface, not a big deal. After all, we can still purchase amplifiers from dealers with the 10-11 Meter bands disabled and modify them ourselves. But who else may be complaining that ~might~ cause one group or the other to pay a price?

Jerry

MURS and FRS are CB, covered under old Part 95 just like 11m. You won't even be leaving home.

>simply because of pricks

When you get tired of the ones on CB you'll be changing your mind.
Maybe not right away but sooner or later you will. I have several Ham buddies who are ex-CB freebanders. They got fed up with the kind of people you mentioned, and were on 11m instead, and got their Ham ticket. It was just a matter of time. Some of them still use CB BTW but not so often any more.

Except for the yahoo who isn't happy watching TV and decides it is his night to be "channel control". A big city, a hand full of idiots like that with amps makes for a bad night on 11m.

Could be. They have more free time to play radio than those of use who have to work to pay our bills.

Your day DX is your S9 noise level.

Costs more money than a reasonably priced two-way radio and an antenna. Also no montly charges to pay.

If you use 11m for local chit-chat than you can use MURS. What is nice about VHF is the anteanns are much smaller for high gains. Some people use a small quad inside their apartment or up in the loft.

I've checked e-bay out for sales on test equipment many times so I know the drill. Like I said MURS is VHF CB. It just hasn't had enough time to get popular yet. I find it a bit unusual that you take an either or attitude with MURS. Face it CBers have three bands to use, 11m on HF, MURS on VHF, and FRS on UHF. Its all CB. You pick the band to use that most suits the use you have in mind. I'm not going to laugh at you for trying it, maybe some of your less informed fellow CBers will, that I can't help. Since it is available why not try it out Vinnie? You have nothing to lose.

So what's your experience been on VHF CB? Sounds like some of your

You know I keep warning new Hams against getting those tiny HT's, like the VX5R etc. They're nice but there isn't enough mass to act as a good heat sink. Using one at 5 watts for more than a few minutes turns them in to wonderful hand warmers, burners, for winter use. Surprisingly most Hams don't think about that when they buy them. Particularly the guys doing emergency work, where the duty cycle could be rather high.

Don't bet the cheap radios will have poor performance. As soon as someone hears someone else 200 miles away and can contact them with 2 watts, all bets are off ;)

You have an excellent point. The idea turns my stomach that some young

Not really. Some on this group have in fact used the 706 for 11m, and

You know if you keep talking like that about your fellow CBers, and 11m in general, you're going to end up on several CBer's "S..t List" on this group. They think things are just fine and dandy they way it

There is a fire sale at Radio Shack on a mobile rig and a HT. The HT is going for $30 which I think is pocket change if you can still find any. Its the BTX-127.

http://www.murs-usa.com/btx-127.html

> If they turn the power down to 2 watts, it would be > extremely difficult to tell the difference between a modified ham rig,

True to a point. There are two differences I found. One is the deviation limits, one at 2.5 KHz and the other at 5 KHz. The two 154 MHz channels use 5 KHz (20 KHz bandwidth) while the three 151 MHz channels use 2.5 KHz (11.25 kHz bandwidth) . The second is frequency stability. The main specification is 5 PPM at 5 KHz and 2.5 KHz, or 2

PPM at 6.25 KHz bandwidth, which is really high for FM. My Kenwood THG-71A is only good for 10 PPM. So if the FCC is monitoring and you are off frequency by more than the above and or occupying more spectrum than allowed by the deviation limits you get busted. Not a good idea.

That question lead me to post a question on the family radio group about exactly that. I can't see any real big difference between using a radio like the BTX-127 and a Ham HT running 2 watts. The BTX-127 can operate on like 100 different frequencies by simply reprogramming it using the dip switches inside. If you read the rules the radio doesn't "strictly" conform to the MURS part 95 rules because of that issue. BUT the FCC apparently has grandfathered a number of current part 90 radios as OK for use on MURS. Even with that the rules seem to be a bit murky about the future status of radios like the BTX-127. So I asked the question that given the similarity between the BTX-127 and a Ham 2m HT, both can be programmed to transmit out of band so to speak and can operate at the legal limit of 2w, why the later can or can't be used. The usual answer is the part 90 certificate the BTX-127 has.

They could spring for the real McCoy now and have fun with out the worry.

Running high power on CB is not a societal problem. Do me a favor. Ring the doorbell of neighbors in your neighborhood, and ask them if they think the high power on CB is a societal problem. When you do, take a picture of there face and the way they look at you.

Poor analogy, since Georgie boy is not law enforcement. He's just a shmuck. I am sure everyone at some point has broken the law in their life, no matter how serious or not. The difference is, I don't go around trying to be some cop and trying to enforce that.

Sure they can. But like I said, they are essentially hypocrites. They read the law in one hand, and then break it with the other.

Dave, with all due respect, I appreciate your class and manners. But lets get serious here. You have twisted me not caring about MURS, high power on CB, etc, into not caring about anything. I have priorities. MURS, and illegal CB operations are not one of them. And please don't tell me I don't care because of that. This is shit on the importance list of society. Like I said. Go ask your neighbors if they care. Most will laugh in your face.

I do not and will not care about RF power. If that bothers you, then you need help.

Maybe he likes the smell up there, Moped? When I made the comment, I clearly did not mean why they are fighting, and for whom. I just don't want to see them die. I will support them always. Actually not a bad idea. There can be a lot of good materials in TV antennas, even ones that have been blown off during storms.

>2: UHF loops from the back of your TV set.

A little small for CB, but I have seen a loop antenna for CB direction finding that wasn't much larger.

>3: Rabbit Ears

Most TV rabbit ears are made from stainless steel and are very light, and they are telescopic to boot. They would be just dandy for someone that wants a MURS or 2-meter dipole thats easily tuned. They are a little short for CB, but with a couple loading coils they should work just fine.

>4: Your neighbors 6 meter beam.

For CB it would probably be easier to buy or build an 11-meter beam, but just like the rabbit ears, with a few loading coils the 6-meter beam could probably work.

Even if it isn't insulated, the gaps inside the bundle are very prone to corrosion due to trapped moisture, which quickly spreads to the outside of the wire.

Very well said Vinnie, but has been said by myself and many others, all it does is fall on deaf ears........no logic.

Actually, no. According to what I heard (from an eBay employee), eBay was given a list of which radios were "easily modified to operate on frequencies outside the CB band" and are therefore questionable (read eBay's rules on electronic devices). This list included Uniden and Ranger radios like the ones mentioned ("HR2600s, HR2510s, RCIs"), resulting in these radio auctions being routinely removed when discovered.

Not particularly. It sounds like someone who understands the law, with

Or just use a diode between the supply and the battery. I will produce a
.6V drop, but you could adjust the voltage at the supply if it's that important.

Hmmm..... That is a possibility. Most newer inverters utilize a "modified" sine wave output. But your point is well taken. There may be a noise issue when using a UPS, espcially if it's right next to the radio.

I was looking at the alternate feedpoint method noted on the above page. Jay in the Mojave concluded during his tests of the Mastodon 5000 and Interceptor 10K antennas, that an elevated feed design reduces the capacitance between center and shield. Caps pass AC and block DC and Xc lowers at higher frequencies. If the interelectrode capacitance loss between hot and ground is measurable at HF, wouldn't there be even more loss to capacitance at VHF?

Also, are there any pages that explain or describe how a J-pole works it's matching magic?

Building an antenna for HF-CB gets real unwieldy past a simple dipole or 1/4 groundplane. For VHF-CB, smaller size and no antenna limits makes me want to play. I think there's enough hams in the area that would spin beams and let me know later if they heard me. BTW, you should have heard the guy turn up HIS 706MKII during the net last night. He sounded ham. <: He was so proud of it, he mentioned it twice!!!

That would depend on whether or not the neighbors are aware of the radio service, and more importantly, whether they are personally being affected by it. Ask a neighbor of a high powered splatter jockey, and I can guarantee you that they'll see it higher in the priority list.
Running high power, is not directly a societal problem, per se, but the attitude that fuels people's desire to ignore laws, and flaunt their "status" is most certainly a societal problem. It doesn't matter if you run a high power amplifier on CB, or a high powered audio amplifier in your car, or buzz people swimming and fishing with a jetski, or recklessly skateboarding through crowds, it's the same problem.
Flaunting your attitude, with a blatent disregard for other people, and their rights.

that we should ignore the "lesser" issues completely.

No, some people THINK they know who certain other people are. Don't be led astray. When someone wishes to be anonymous, there are ways to ensure it, short of a court order, and I'm not even sure that would help in some cases. Don't take anyone's word on this issue as gospel. In most cases they're just guessing.

> >I applaud efforts to keep honest people honest.

Then he deserves to be told that the equipment is illegal, so he knows the next time. Nobody is carting these people off to jail. But you do have to understand this from E-Bay's perspective. The FCC has published a list of what it considers "contraband" equipment, and has furnished this list to places like E-Bay. If E-bay does not vigorously, police their auctions, then they could be cited as a party to illegal equipment trafficking.
Honestly, do you think E-Bay really cares what people sell? If it were up to them, they'd let anything go, as the more things that sell, the more money they make. So you have to believe that the pressure that E-Bay is getting, to pull certain stuff, is coming from higher up than just "disgruntled" hams.

So you're suggesting that everyone "mind their own business"? So, nobody should report a robbery in progress, an assault? rape? drug deal? We should just mind our own business and let the criminal element in society get a free pass?

No, the analogy is sound. You made the claim that if someone ever smoked pot, or drank beer underaged, that they now had no right to complain about other people's illegalities, otherwise they'd be hypocritical. But what about cops who smoked pot, when they were teenagers, who are now busting kids for smoking pot? By your logic, that makes them hypocritical, and they should not be doing it.

And where do you draw the line ay which laws are "ok" to bend or break, and which ones are serious? It's all a matter of individual perspective.
Which is why no one can justify breaking a law they consider monor, by using another's indiscretions as evidence. They're all laws that we should be following to the best of our ability, if we want to comtinue to live in a civilized society.

Like I said before, the road to hell begins with that first step. Why is it so hard to believe that once someone sets in his mind, that it's ok to not care about "trivial" things and laws, that it becomes a much easier task to expand their indifference?

> I have priorities. MURS, and illegal CB operations are not one of them.

It's a shame that you can't care about even the small things. Because,
to other people, they're not so small.

> And please don't tell me I don't care because of

If I was bleeding through their home entertainment equipment, they would most certainly care, and they wouldn't be laughing. Thankfully I DO care about excessive power and my neighbors can have the luxury of laughing about it, because I have taken steps to make it a non-issue for them.

> I do not and will not care about RF power. If that bothers you, then you need

I'm truly sorry to hear that. I can only hope that someday, when you need help, that someone doesn't take a "hands off", "mind your own business", and "don't care" attitude to what they might consider a "small" issue.

I have a Yaesu FT50R. A wonderful radio. But if I use it on high power, the battery life is pitiful. I guess that's why there are all these battery saving "features", like auto power adjust, where it backs down your power relative to the recieved signal strength. If I run it at 1/2 watt, it will have a respectable battery life.

I was looking at the alternate feedpoint method noted on the above page. Jay in the Mojave concluded during his tests of the Mastodon 5000 and Interceptor 10K antennas, that an elevated feed design reduces the capacitance between center and shield. Caps pass AC and block DC and Xc lowers at higher frequencies. If the interelectrode capacitance loss between hot and ground is measurable at HF, wouldn't there be even more loss to capacitance at VHF?

Also, are there any pages that explain or describe how a J-pole works it's matching magic?

Building an antenna for HF-CB gets real unwieldy past a simple dipole or 1/4 groundplane. For VHF-CB, smaller size and no antenna limits makes me want to play. I think there's enough hams in the area that would spin beams and let me know later if they heard me. BTW, you should have heard the guy turn up HIS 706MKII during the net last night. He sounded ham. <: He was so proud of it, he mentioned it twice!!!

Which begs two questions, are there any left, and why are they selling out? Are they planning on any new models? Who else sells MURS radios locally, for a decent price, without having to convert part 90 business band units?

I can adjust the frequency of my radio to within a gnats whisker (actually a few hertz) of the desired frequency. And if it isn't exposed to significant fluctuations in temperature, or vibration, it remains stable.

The main reason that part 90, and other type accepted radios have such tight frequency tolerances, is due to the environments in which they are used in. If care is taken, a more "fragile" ham radio is easily able to fall within those tolerance, provided you have a lab precision counter to set it with.

Part 90 radios meet the technical specifications for the MURS service, so they are ok to use.

Exactly! Part 90 certification conforms to the technical rules for MURS. Ham tranceivers do not.

If illegal Cbers can run thousands of watts to grand stand on channel 6, or talk on illegal freeband frequencies, with little chance of prosecution, I don't see how running a modified 2m rig on MURS would be any more "risky". Especially if one takes the time to make sure the rig falls under the technical guidelines for the service.

Not that I'm endorsing the practice, mind you, but I do know that people are doing it. Some are stupid enough to openly admit it.

Amen to that. That's been my biggest beef for a long time. If you have to run an amp, at least get one that's clean, and learn how to run it the proper way. At least that keeps the interference potential to a minimum.

And those people, who are courteous, respectful, and non-confrontational, will be given the treatment they deserve.

Those who act out in uncontrollable urges, claim to be something they are not, twist, obfuscate, make deliberate misstatements, and are generally disruptive, will also be treated as they deserve.

If you want respect, try acting like you really mean it. If you want to be taken seriously, try being more truthful and less evasive.

If you want to be seen as "on the side that's right" stop defending illegal, unethical, and inconsiderate behavior.

Thinking one person is another is a big difference from saying that they truly are, as has been put forth here. I have noticed similar writing styles between several different people. Does that mean they're the same?

I would hate to propagate a rumor, that turned out not to be true.

Jim,

Shame on you for giving the misleading impression that conditions like this will occur with any regularity. We both know that tropo on VHF is very much sporatic, and depends more on weather fronts than sunspot activity.

I would also not want to encourage people with that "skipland" mentality, from wrecking another band.

A lot of noisy power suplies can be fixed by placing .001 caps across the rectifying diodes. Some supplies are noisy because these were not put n as part of the design and others are noisy because they were removed as part of a "fix".

I am a fan of J-poles. Here's how I built my Super-J:

http://www.geocities.com/n2uhc/jpole.html

The collinear design works quite well. It has a suprisingly wide bandwidth, covering most of the high VHF range. If I ever get a MURS radio I can use this antenna for both 2 meters and MURS.

I've often toyed with the idea of building a J-pole for an HF band out of wire, using insulating spacers between the driven element and matching stub. It would have to be mounted horizontally, and of course built for one of the higher frequency bands. The only problem is finding the right feedpoint. You have to move the feedpoint up & down the J to get the right match, and with insulated wire that would involve taking off insulation here & there.

I may build it in the future just to see how well it works.

The question is... how soon will someone be able to hear with the adjacent radio/paging services parked at nearby locations/frequencies..?

Reliable contact will be "spotty" at best. Probably be more practical to play with 2 meter ssb. There's a very large weak signal (with some actual not so weak signals) group in the Western US that do weekly multi state nets using 2 meter ssb on 144.250 usb. Pretty cool stuff...

Some of these guys have reported problems from Mountain Top radios 10 miles away. I've provided and number of filter systems to these guys to remove the problems generated nearly 10Mhz away.

I've got distant cousins in Rochester Jim... have no idea where they are... but yell hello out your window for me some time.

cheers

This question came up in another thread. A good thing to try is to get one of those gel cell power packs used to jump start vehicles. Most of them have a cigarette lighter plug that makes it easy to connect to a radio. I have one that I can use for portable power with my QRP rigs. If your radio only draws 1.5 amps on transmit it will last a long time without recharging.

Actually, that you somehow feel qualified as judge of who is deserving of the hammie creed.(.IE: friendly, helpful, courteous, to ALL...) and who should be treated justly, is just fine,,you won't find me arguing with your stance on such a matter..I always knew you were too prejudiced

Once again, I ask nothing of anyone.
Last, and certainly never least, what I want, wish, think, believe,

Thinking one person is another is a big difference from saying that they truly are, as has been put forth here. I have noticed similar writing styles between several different people. Does that mean they're the same?
I would hate to propagate a rumor, that turned out not to be true.

And BTW, if they are listening for hams on the "freeband", they are listening to CBers, too! The fines are just as steep

Jerry

Hams on 11 Meters an Enforcement Issue
NEWINGTON, CT, Oct 30, 2000--Recent FCC reports suggest that the operation in and around the 11-meter Citizens Band by licensed amateurs continues to be an enforcement issue. FCC Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth thinks he knows why a few hams--who already have extensive spectrum privileges--are drawn to 11 meters.

"I think they feel they can do what they want to, whether it's to cut up or play," he said this week. In addition, Technicians lacking HF privileges may be attempting to skirt that restriction by resorting to 11 meters instead of taking the Morse code test. According to FCC enforcement reports, some Amateur Radio operators have operated on CB channels or between them (the so-called "freeband") using ham gear that is not FCC-licensed or approved for the purpose.

"They think it's not taken seriously," Hollingsworth added. But it is taken seriously, and at least one now-former ham has received a stiff fine as a result of his 11-meter operation.

On July 12, the FCC issued a Forfeiture Order telling Leonard D. Martin, formerly KC5WHN, to pay a $4000 fine for repeated unlicensed operation on 11-meter frequencies and for failing to allow the FCC to inspect his radio equipment.

Martin, a former Technician licensee, first ran afoul of the FCC two years ago. FCC agents using mobile automatic direction finding equipment tracked voice transmissions on 27.370, 27.535 and 27.545 MHz to an antenna at Martin's residence.

Last year, Martin voluntarily turned in his Amateur Radio license for cancellation but he apparently couldn't stay away from 11. Last fall the FCC again tracked transmissions on 27.535 MHz to his residence. He initially faced a $17,000 fine.

This month alone, Hollingsworth sent enforcement letters to amateur licensees in Georgia and California regarding unlicensed operation in and around 11 meters. Curiously, at least some of the alleged offenders have identified by using Amateur Radio call signs.

While some of the offenders may believe that operating on 11 meters is the functional equivalent of flying under the FCC's radar--thus offering greater freedom in choice of language and discussion topics--Hollingsworth says other amateurs seem to think it's great sport to QRM CBers and freebanders.

"Some are doing it because they don't like what they hear on 11 meters," he said. Hollingsworth says a few amateurs believe they can maliciously interfere with CB and freebanders and not get caught.

In one recent case, Hollingsworth cited "monitoring information before the Commission" alleging that one West Coast ham may have deliberately interfered with other operators by transmitting sound effects as well as using non-FCC-certificated gear or illegal amplifiers.

But whether or not the other stations are operating outside the law is immaterial, Hollingsworth says. "It doesn't matter why they're on there," he says. Hollingsworth points out that the 11-meter Citizens Band is allocated into 40 specific channels, each requiring the use of relatively low-power FCC-certificated equipment. Ham gear may not be used on CB under normal circumstances.

Operating on the so-called "freeband" outside of the 40 CB channels raises other legal issues, since those frequencies already are allocated to government and industrial users or as so-called "guard band" channels that help fence off CB and the other services. Transmitting on those frequencies could result in harmful interference. Even worse, if a perpetrator is caught, the fines for unlicensed operation--as already noted--are steep.

The bottom line, Hollingsworth says, is that amateurs should resist any temptation to transmit anywhere on 11 meters unless they're using equipment that's FCC-approved and/or licensed for operation there. Otherwise, they risk fines and possible loss of their amateur tickets.

(chuckle) "Lil Geo speaks of "attention" and he and Davey devote their entire posting day to ME..twistedhed superstar <g> Hey Geo, merely turn your computer off. Or you can switch your radio to off. You may even elect to slice that modem your are using in half. You may disconnect. Or you may even stop visiting the group, and in this manner you won't be bothered. Taking it a step beyond, you and junior can whine about amps, freebanding, and who y'all perceive as "worthy" of your attention and disrespect. Or either of you could practice self-control.

You stupid fool you talk about self control, this NG is in the state it is because of you. You have created the mess that is rec.radio.cb from the day the Mark Fullers and aaron voobners arrived you have never been able to practice self control. People pleaded with you to stop feeding the trolls yet you posted more than they did. Your a complete asshole, you should have pratice what you preach perhaps the ng would be a better place for it. You know, I use good judgment. If I see a rape of attempt at murder, I will try

Cops who did this in their past, are now paid to enforce the law. They are not volunteers. They do not go around on newsgroup saying, "Thid is illegal, and that is illegal". I have a family member who is a cop, and he does not go around acting like Adair or George.

Where do I draw the line? I draw the line if injury is involved. I draw the line

Hey dumbass, if you are from Lucent, why does your header say "comcast.net"? You not only don't know what you are talking about, you are a fraud.

18' of coax DOES NOTHING to improve performance or SWR.

The Firestik folks don't know jack schitt. I took them to task on their website claims but they couldn't back them up. Now, I guess they lie about their identity to promote the product.

Amazing what a simple Google search turns up. There is a slew of info on 'monitoring Iraq war'. This is one:
http://www.dxing.info/articles/iraq.dx
There are a ton of others, so ... if you are interested, fire up your search engines ;)

There are a couple flaws to this logic:
1) If you have a good RF ground at the antenna, the length of the coax doesn't matter.

2) If you have a bad RF ground at the antenna (a scenario pointed out by the Firestik dope), then you won't get a good RF ground at the radio and you are still screwed.

There is no "half wave nulling factor" with 18 feet of coax.
Where do you get this stuff?

If there are currents on the shield, what makes them stop at the radio? Answer: nothing.

If the radio were completely isolated from ground and had nothing hanging off of it (like a microphone or power cord), it would stop the outside shield current. But this is not the case. It is impossible to predict what impedance these common mode currents will encounter at the radio.

Therefore, it is impossible to predict what impedance they will see 18 feet up the transmission line.

Because an antenna is open ended (i.e. impedance at the tips must be infinite), the impedance seen at any particular distance from the tips can be predicted.

Because the impedance seen by common mode currents
at the radio is unknown, it is impossible to predict the impedance seen at the antenna end with any particular length.

None of those websites give a valid reason for the specific lengths.
They don't even agree.

The ARRL Handbook does not specify any length; they know it doesn't matter.

Heh, NOT!

In the context which you are describing, 1/2 wavelength of coax would be about 12 feet.

Those who are talking about the 18-foot half wavelength are referring to common mode currents which can travel on the exterior of the shield. These are not subject to the velocity factor seen within the coax.

While this length could repeat the impedance seen on the other end, the rub is that this impedance is unknown. There is no valid way to predict was impedance a common mode current will encounter at the radio. If you grab the microphone, it changes.
If you reroute your power cable, it changes. If you position your radio differently, it changes. You just can't know. And that is the fundamental flaw in the 18-foot length myth.

This is not true. Let's look at your following example.

You can't decide if you're enjoying a good SWR or fooling the meter.
The reality is that the length does not change the SWR (excluding minor losses).

At 9 feet, the impedance seen would be 69.44 ohms -- a 1.4:1 SWR.
At 18 feet, the impedance seen would again be 36 ohms -- a 1.4:1 SWR.
At every length in between, the impedance would be complex but the SWR would still be 1.4:1.

It can be shown that while the impedance changes with length, the SWR does not.

You're getting a little mixed up here. An electrical half wavelength of coax repeats the impedance. You will see 100 ohms.

A one-quarter wavelength coax will invert the impedance. You will see 25 ohms. At no length will you see a purely resistive 75 ohms.

Every quarter wavelength, it not only changes sign; this complex component of the impedance also changes in magnitude. The Smith chart is not symmetric in terms of impedances. For example, the inverse of +j30 ohms is not -j30 ohms.

I think you understand it correctly. I just think you got some numbers/lengths mixed up.

You can hear yourself talk over the speaker as you are transmitting. If you use a power mic, or have the mic gain too high, you will get a whistle. I do not find this feature useful.

The best way to look at a J-pole match is to first realize the section above
the paralleled section of pipes is really a 1/2 wave length long antenna. And the length of paralleled section of pipes is a quarter wavelength section of "open wire" transmission line. Here the wire is replaced with pipe, but the principal is exactly the same.

A half wave length long antenna fed from the end has a theatrically infinite impedance. The reason why is the voltage on the antenna at the ends is maximum while the current must be zero, no more conductor. The ratio between the voltage and the current would be some value of voltage divided by zero, thus the infinite impedance. As a practical note the current at the ends is not zero due to a bit of capacitive current flow. The real world impedance
is some where around a few thousands ohms.

The "open wire" transmission line section of the antenna is a 1/4 wavelength long, shorted at one end, and for now just consider the other end
as an open circuit. If you feed RF power in to this section somewhere between the two ends the current will go to maximum at the short and nearly zero at the open end due to the same effect as mentioned for the 1/2 wavelength antenna. Also the voltage goes to zero at the short, and to a maximum at the open end. So you can consider that the impedance varies somewhere from zero at the short to several thousands ohms at the open end in the practical case.

Now if we connect the two together, transmission line to 1/2 wave antenna section, the conditions at the end match. In other words the impedance is high at the open end of the transmission line, and the end of the 1/2 wave antenna.

Now if we feed RF power in to the transmission line section and move that point towards the 1/2 wave antenna section, starting at the shorted end. At some point we will find a spot where the voltage increase and the current decrease, when calculated as a ratio, equals 50. The ratio between volts and current is in units of ohms, i.e.. our feed point impedance. Thus a ratio of 50, or 50 ohms, gives us our match to our feed line to the radio.

> Also, are there any pages that explain or describe how a J-pole > works it's matching magic?

If you get a chance try picking up a copy of the ARRL antenna manual, either in print or on CD. It is a wealth of antenna information, and does include a good explanation of how end fed antenna work, of which the J-Pole is only one example. You don't need to get a new copy, older issues are just as good. You can ask some of the Hams, and some of the CBers, in your area if they have a copy you can barrow too.

That's the general idea. Have fun experimenting with antenna designs.

Most Hams that have beams for 2m, right next door to the MURS frequencies, are normally for sideband work and are horizontally polarized. FM work is done vertical. However that should not stop them from hearing you. Of course

if you have a buddy with a scanner he could monitor for your signal as well.

Now this is were the VHF CB band can come in very handy. It is a very common practice by antenna manufactures to design and build scale model antennas. For HF, as you pointed out, the antennas can be very large. So the manufactures design one for VHF. Its cheaper, smaller, and easier to test. Once they get it right they then "scale" the antenna for the actual target frequency. Once the full sized antenna is built they wring out any further design problems, then its ready. You can so the same thing with the J-Pole.

Many Hams have used TV twin lead to build a simple 2m roll-up J-Pole antenna. You can do the same for MURS. Once you have one working at VHF you can scale up the dimensions for HF. The resulting antenna should work reasonably well. Also a roll of flat, non foam filled, TV twin lead is only a few bucks. The problem will be finding a spot to hang the thing since it will be nearly 3/4 of a wavelength long, which on 11m will be about 27 feet more or less.

Tom what is the antenna next to the J-pole in the photo? It looks like some variation of a Turnstile, and about the size for 2m also. I suspect that you do some 2m weak signal work on sideband, and that's what the antenna is for.

From your point of view it is, however yours is not the only one.
Being on the receiving end of somebody else who is abusing the air waves by running high power may change your mind. That seems to be a rather frequent point of view that is quickly discounted by the amp users on the group. Seems as long as they are on the giving end, screw the poor slop who has to put up with it, which it is their attitude, and a rather poor one at that.

Just beacuse somebody is pushing your bottons doesn't mean you have to react. In fact if you do all that happens is they do it even more.
Sometimes it just better to blow off the thought of responding because it is worth the effort.

However some do. Part of the reason you see the replies that you do is there are many people who just "sandbag", i.e. read, and never post anything. Out of that group are a good number of what I like to call "fence sitters" those who have not decided to go full Pirate, using amps and out of band transmissions, or just operate as intended by the FCC. Reading posts here that outline the problems that Pirate operations can cause may be all that is necessary to get them off the fence and operate legally. So the replies are not "strictly" aimed at the person quoted in the post in some cases.

That could get interesting quick. Most business users are not running high power. So if the local FCC monitoring station can hear the same QSO from 30 miles away that could get some extra special attention from them. And being VHF the DFing is rather easy too.

They, the FCC, are NOT approving MURS and high power. If you will take you will see that for yourself.

The current rules allow 20 KHz for the upper 2 now.

>Wideband FM

Packet operations are legal on MURS BTW. Also due to the fact that you are limited to using AFSK (Audio Frequency Shift Keying) the data rate is limited. The reason for the 20 KHz bandwidth is due to the fact that a deviation ratio of about two is being used. Deviation ratio is the ratio between the maximum change in the transmitter's frequency divided by the maximum audio frequency used. Typical values are 5 KHz for the deviation and 2.5 KHz for the audio. Unlike AM FM generates a whole range of sidebands above and below the carrier frequency. The deviation ratio allows one to calculate the amplitude of each sideband. In the present case sidebands past the 4'th are basically zero. Thus the frequency range is +/- (4 * 2.5 KHz) or 20 KHz. If you're interested you can look for a copy of the "VHF/UHF Handbook" by the Radio Society of Great Britain, and edited by Dick Biddulph (G8DPS). There is a nice chart on page 4.36 that shows this clearly.

On the two 154 MHz channels you could run as fast as 2400 bps (AFSK). You can look for used Ham TNC's for VHF work. Most of them are set to run at 1200 bps (AFSK). Anything faster than 2400 would be at 9600 bps, but that requires a modem in the TNC using BPSK (Binary Phase Shift Keying) and a direct tie-in to the FM generating circuit and the FM detector output of the radio to work. Since that requires radio mods I doubt that would be legal. At 1200 or 2400 bps you can use the mic jack and the earphone jack just fine. The mic jack should have a connection to key the radio so when the TNC goes in to send mode it can key the rig automatically.

You can get some ideas for TNC to radio packet connections from the site below:

http://www.packetradio.org/http://www.choisser.com/hamradio/packet.html (General Packet Info)

http://www.provide.net/~prsg/mursrule.htm

95.401 (CB Rule 1) What are the Citizens Band Radio Services?

* * * * *

(e) The Multi-Use Radio Service (MURS)--a private, two-way, short-distance voice or data communications service for personal or business activities of the general public. The rules for this service are contained in subpart J of this part.

PRSG Comment: The FCC now prohibits image (video and radiofacsimile) communications. The FCC decided that the transmission of images was not compatible with the use of these frequencies for short, "push-to-talk"-type communications. However, the rules fail to provide specific time limits on individual transmissions, and on exchanges of communications between a group of stations.

95.1307 Permissible communications.

(a) MURS stations may transmit voice or data signals as permitted in this subpart.

(b) A MURS station may transmit any emission type listed in paragraph 95.631(j) of this chapter.

(c) MURS frequencies may be used for remote control and telemetering functions. MURS transmitters may not be operated in the continuous carrier transmit mode.

(d) MURS users shall take reasonable precautions to avoid causing harmful interference. This includes monitoring the transmitting frequency for communications in progress and such other measures as may be necessary to minimize the potential for causing interference.

PRSG Comment: The rules prohibit continuous carrier transmissions on MURS frequencies. However, rule section 95.1317 permits "grandfathered" (former Part 90) licensees of the frequencies now allocated to MURS to continue to employ continuous transmissions (which were legal under Part 90, except on 154.600 MHz, where the FCC would have required a waiver) on any of the MURS frequencies on which they were previously licensed.

PRSG has requested (click here to view details) that the FCC reinstitute a callsign identification requirement for those prior Part 90 licensees of these frequencies who are "grandfathered" with privileges that exceed those permissible under the current rules. This would include any grandfathered licenses that authorized operation on any of the current MURS frequencies that continue to operate with continuous transmissions.

Subparagraph (d) establishes the active requirement of pre-transmission monitoring. There is no exemption for grandfathered (former Part 90) licensees.

PRSG has requested that the FCC require that all transmitters certificated under the current rules (namely, first certificated on or after Noivember 12, 2002) must be configured so that the station cannot transmit unless any selective-muting or decoding of the associated receiver has first been turned off for a minimum period of time. Click here to view further details about this request.

They could be cleaning out old inventory to make way for MURS specific Check Radio Shack and see if the have any left in stock. Also check out your local Hamfest. Remember seeing those piles of old Motorola business band HT's? I'll bet they're legal to use if you can find a VHF model.

Most of the Motorola radios worked well. You can find piles of them

I beg to differ...

I am NOT an Antikeyclown, but my equipment is all legal, legal frequencies, no amps on CB, FM only on CB (UK CB).
Antikeyclowns are "activists" who spend all their time looking for ways to fill this newsgroup with their whining attitude. They do not care who gets caught in the crossfire... in fact, anyone who is not one of them is considered to be a target for their anger.

> twistedhed, leadership keyclowns

Do they have any proof that the "Keyclowns" are an organisation, with a leader... or that Twistedhed is that "leader"?

Didn't think so, anyone not in the "Antikeyclown" brigade is automatically labelled as a "Keyclown" regardless of the facts (or the lack of any "membership"). Everyone is expected to take a side and join in the crap slinging, until the group is unuseable.
This attitude has chased off new people to the group.

However some do. Part of the reason you see the replies that you do is there are many people who just "sandbag", i.e. read, and never post anything. Out of that group are a good number of what I like to call "fence sitters" those who have not decided to go full Pirate, using amps and out of band transmissions, or just operate as intended by the FCC. Reading posts here that outline the problems that Pirate operations can cause may be all that is necessary to get them off the fence and operate legally. So the replies are not "strictly" aimed at the person quoted in the post in some cases.

Agreed. But many people do not see the FCC as a threat. Especially with their ever shrinking budgets, and the loss of many of their monitoring stations.

Standing out in a crowd, will certainly draw attention, at some point. But if you gauge the FCC's interest in MURS, by their seeming indifference to 11 meter CB, and the blatent disregard for the rules there, I don't see major busts coming on MURS any time soon. Unless, of course, someone tramples on a legitimate business operation.

I've never heard any of that. The few times I've seen her, she speaks

While this is, potentially, a serious interference issue, it will not be a universal one. Places where paging transmitters are more prevelant (Metro areas), will have some problems. But other, less densely populated areas, will see less problems. Paging has been a problem for Marine Band users as well. So much so, that they now sell filters to place in your feedline, to block out the annoying signals. The same thing could be offered to MURS users, if the problem becomes epidemic. Better quality radios, with high "Q" helical resonator front ends will also greatly reduce the interference potential. Of course, you won't find these on wideband ham 2m rigs.

Not all potential MURS users are hams or want to be. 2m SSB is not an option for them.

We have a nice group here in eastern Pa, that operates on 144.230. It's a lot of fun.

Filters will solve many problems where they pop up. A fairly easy solution.

Works fine for me. Nice and quiet around here (With the exception of the 154.XXX freqs. Seems there are some local businesses on those two. The others are quiet as a mouse, and with a proper mobile antenna, I can get several miles, which is just what I need. It's a very private band, as my

Scott,
Actually, there would be less loss at VHF than at HF with capacitive matching. At any frequency, capacitive matching requires a slightly longer antenna than an inductive match does. The difference in 'losses' just isn't ~that~ much.
I isn't any 'magic' to a 'J'-pole antenna. It's simply a 1/2 radiator fed at one end through a shorted 1/4 wave matching stub. Sort of the same thing as an 'A99' at 27 Mhz, just a difference matching system.

I'm more then an appliance operator. I like to know what makes it tick. Sure, I could buy an antenna, it's more fun to build one.

Yes, that's not a problem since I know what the dimensions of the J-pole should be. 3/4 wave for the driven element, 1/4 for the matching stub. The only problem is finding the right feedpoint.

Actually I would use wire as I stated in my previous post. The spacers would be made from, say, 1/2" PVC pipe. I think wire would be easier to hang, such as with a dipole, than the twinlead. It would probably hold up against the elements better, too. But twinlead would probably make an easier J-pole to work with.

Uhh, yep. But what I mean is, to find the right feedpoint for lowest SWR, you have to move the feedpoint up & down the J to find the right spot. Which isn't really much of a problem, but using insulated wire means you have to remove insulation in several different spots to attach the feedpoint. Which means I'd have to tape up the previous spots I removed the insulation from. Not a big problem, but I'd rather have insulation covering the wire than electrical tape. I suppose once I built one antenna, I could use the measurements to find the right feedpoint and build it again.

Jay in the Mojave concluded during his tests of the Mastodon 5000 and capacitance between center and shield. Caps pass AC and block DC and Xc lowers at higher frequencies. If the interelectrode capacitance loss between hot and ground is measurable at HF, wouldn't there be even more loss to capacitance at VHF?

"Twistedhed" is a way of life and became the object of affection of a few hammies that had their heads handed to them on their hypocritical platters. These are lost souls that need to "find" themselves, are cowering in fear, suffer massive communication deficits, and possess absolutely no self-esteem. Dogie Adair N8WWM, a nocode that breaks federal FCC law and outspoken advocate of perversion was first to profess his love....Lelnad C Scott Kc8LDO came next with Frank Gilliland..Dave Hall N3CVJ is the last that makes up what Dogie Adair named the "AKC". "Keyclown" is a term of endearment from these hammies that are injurous to hammie radio (also known as : Lids) and they use the term when at a loss of words for a related topic or debate, which has never been their stated reasons for being here. Each one of them have, at one time or another, created the superlative self-admonition ascertaining their presence here. For your reading enjoyment, send an email to twistedhed@webtv.net.

I agree that there are many like that. But if your teachings aren't based ONLY on scripture and not on tradition you are basing your teaching on fallacy which leads down the wrong road. There must be a balance between truth and grace, you can't have one without the other. Our society has equated grace with tolerance and that can't be farther from what the Bible teaches about grace. Tolerance, in our world's view, is to look the other way. We are NEVER told to look the other way.

I must admit that she has re-invented herself a few times. She has received lots of flack over her past teachings. I haven't listened to her lately mainly because she has re-invented herself so many times. It makes me wonder if she isn't just hunting for an "acceptable teaching" by trial-and-error and she really doesn't understand at all what she is doing.

These Guy's call Themselves "ROACHES" . Is this real ?
Is this kind of operation normal on the lower bands . I was looking at upgrading , But I'm not sure I even want be a Ham any more after listening to that crap. N0PLV and KB2AHZ were using profanity that would make a cber blush.
I just bought this receiver and I was really enjoying the net before these dudes came on board .
Someone tell Me , Would I be wasting My time taking the exam and just be better off getting into cb ? Or is this a rare occurrence.

How you behave, and who you associate with would seem to make the difference, at least to me. It's the same in anything you do, ham radio, CB, or real life. If you don't like the behavior of a particular person, or group, don't associate with them. If you would let a couple of Something to remember is that the ham bands are so huge that if one or two people piss you off you can just go to another band or part of the band. On CB they can follow you to anyone of the 40 channels or SSB in a minute so all you can do is turn the radio off and what good is a radio if it is off?

My TenTec doesn't have it either.
A ten-tec is a great radio for cbers who are licensed and also wish to play hammie, or for those who merely wish to monitor and listen, as many hammies do on their rigs. As far as echo and talkback goes, in many instances, an ever-so-slight tinge of echo enhances audio..now ,,some may wish to debate this point and call it a personal preference, arguably, correct they may be...but ask any radio station ad-man, or one who is familiar with radio ads.....that is why many annoying car ads with the fast speaking salesman may have echo, or sound as if he were in a barrel, or sound like his voice is "layered",,in many instances,,it actually is..annoying or not,,,,the echo, aptly applied,,gets heard and noticed.

n5vxf,
      How you behave, and who you associate with would seem to make the difference, at least to me. It's the same in anything you do, ham radio, CB, or real life. If you don't like the behavior of a particular person, or group, don't associate with them. If you would let a couple of people stop you from enjoying your hobby, well, that's certainly your privilege...

That is why your rig has a tuning knob, so you can go find decent hams to listen/converse with. There are a lot of these same type people walking around downtown, that doesn't stop you from going downtown does it?
As far as cb vs ham, you could get on cb and hear that on almost every channel as opposed to a few frequencies on ham radio.

It may be bullshit, but facts is facts. All I am saying is that that the enforcement climate has changed, people are raising hell about it, and and you're be hearing more and more about FCC efforts to stop it as time goes by. The CB enthusiasts have had something of a holiday for 10 years. But, believe it or not, it is going to get more and risky. Mr. Hollingsworth is in North Carolina on speaking engagements right now (Cary, NC) and will be in Charlotte for that hamfest as well this weekend. I guarantee that subject will come up on Saturday in his forum. Me, I can't wait to read every account of warnings, fines, and actions against dealers of bootleg "10 Meter" radios. All the "legal" people want is for the usurpers of others' frequencies and bands to go back where they're supposed to be. If you want to operate on the ham bands, do what we did: get the license. Period.

Hi Mark,

I thought that was you! Tnx for the kind words. Yeah, I'm over the stroke, for the most part, and the Dr. says I can do like I want. I just take my meds and avoid salt. For a long time I couldn't type, and food tasted "diferent"---like a tomato didn't taste like a tomato, etc. Gradually, things are slowly returning to normal. The best part is that I shed 20 lbs; I went from size 40 pants to a 36!
I knew I had gained weight, couldn't seem to get rid of it, and for the last 4 months prior to the stroke, I had NO stamina. I couldn't even walk up my driveway without becoming breathless, so I knew something was wrong--I just couldn't find out what. Doctor couldn't get a handle on it, either. I had several EKGs, Xrays, and WHAM! On 31 December, I went numb on my right side--mouth sagging, arm numb. Funny thing, from my first aid training, I knew what was happening.

I am looking forward to building antennas, doing much hamming, and enjoying the upcoming spring! We stayed snowed in, or threatened with snow and ice, so much it was hard to do anything but sit beside the fire. I feel better now than I have in a long time. It is odd to feel MUCH better after a stroke than before, but I can do about anything within reason. I have worked in my yard some, cut up some of the limbs that fell during the ice and snow storms, and hauled them up to the curb. I just don't don't overdo it; I get tired, I just stop and sit down for a bit.

Does anyone stateside hear my mate Mike on channel 32? he is located in the UK about 60Km west of london and runs QRP and nothing more than a basic antenna, he does use something that is unusual though - he has over 300M of earthing under him! and he is located right on top of a hill giving him an advantage too.

if anyone can hear him let me know as he can hear you guys loud all day and all night, and it would be interesting to see if anyone can either record him from there or at least let me know.

DJ

Ps. the other thing that is different is he is FM and works guys all over while they run AM, with very acceptable results.

That is why your rig has a tuning knob, so you can go find decent hams to listen/converse with. There are a lot of these same type people walking around downtown, that doesn't stop you from going downtown does it?
As far as cb vs ham, you could get on cb and hear that on almost every channel as opposed to a few frequencies on ham radio.

Get a 510XL if you don't need a PA. If you need an RF gain control, choose the 520XL over the 510XL. Both nice radios, awesome audio for loud environs. The 538W adds weather and a front-firing speaker. My 520XL dead keys at 4.0 watts at 12 volts, 5.0 watts at 13.8
right out of the box. Modulation is great, don't get a power mike. Tiny size couldn't be better... unless you have big hands to work the tiny knobs. They are very reliable too. Similar radios are the 510AXL, 510e, 501xl. Go to the Uniden website for reasonably priced refurbs if you are squeamish about an eBay deal. The 510XL for $32.00 is a pretty good bargain.

It takes all kinds of people, unfortunately. But with all the available

RE: Warning Notice--Unlicensed Radio Operation
Amateur Radio KB2RJZ

Dear Mr. Martes:

Monitoring information before the Commission indicates that you have been operating radio-transmitting equipment without a license on 26.540 MHz.

Please be advised that operation of radio transmitting equipment without a license is a violation of Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C. Section 301. Such operation will subject you to fine or imprisonment, as well as an in rem seizure of radio transmitting equipment, in cooperation with the United States Attorney for your jurisdiction. Fines normally range from $7,500 to $10,000.

You are requested to contact me at 717-338-2502 to discuss this matter.

Does anyone stateside hear my mate Mike on channel 32? he is located in the UK about 60Km west of london and runs QRP and nothing more than a basic antenna, he does use something that is unusual though - he has over 300M of earthing under him! and he is located right on top of a hill giving him an advantage too.

if anyone can hear him let me know as he can hear you guys loud all day and all night, and it would be interesting to see if anyone can either record him from there or at least let me know.

DJ

Ps. the other thing that is different is he is FM and works guys all over while they run AM, with very acceptable results.

How about a simple goof-up? I am the source of the stupid repeat posts.

How does this happen? Simple: I use Teranews to send out posts made on a BBS I run.
For some reason, I have been unable to get my news server (DNews) to get posts from Teranews, so I pull then from XO/Concentric. The XO news server will only accept a certain number of posts before rejecting them as coming in too quickly. This is why I started posting through a teranews account.

The key to making this work properly is use or the path in the header. Unfortunately, this is the key to my troubles. For some reason, this exclude is not working. For this reason, I am cutting WAY back on the number of groups I feed the BBS. This should allow my posts to go upstream using the same site I pull from. This WILL stop the duplicate posts.

Sorry for the inconvenience.

It's easy to just say something is "unequivocally wrong" and to guarantee someone doesn't have an engineering degree. But to speak knowledgeably you must have your brain engaged before opening your mouth. I went to OSU Tech but plenty of people who don't even have a HS diploma can speak knowledgeably about the 18ft. coax question. I never mentioned where I went to school earlier because I didn't think anyone cared. I'm just trying to shed some light on the coax length question instead of mindlessly attacking others and bragging about where I went to school.

gee,
take your own advice.

Hell, you don't even have to be anywhere near 11 meters to hear it with the "alligator stations" are on the air (my damned toaster picks up my neighbor when he's gabbin on chan 6!). Hell, with that much spectrum spaltter, I can't do much shortwave listening and when one neighbor, I can't do a hell of a lot with 6 or 2 meters either(tried working with him, but he's more interested in running his mouth than working his brains so I'll let the local police and the FCC handle it).

well,
I can answer this easy enough.
you got the guy on tape. you report to the local police. don't bother giving your neighbor fair warning (it'll just incite him to do more).

the tape is sufficient evidence of 2 things:
1. criminal trespass
2. criminal damage

just so you know, people have been shot over things like this (there was a rather famous case here in phoenix circa 1983 in which 1 person not only shot another over the radio (and its various problems), but he even dragged the body into his house to make it look like a break in. needless to saym that person got 10 years in Arizona State for 1st degree MURDER).

Juts take it to the police. don't bother with the neighbor as he has already clearly shown his intent.

As opposed to who, you? <Giggle> You can't have a debate, about any issue, without twisting meanings and claiming that someone meant something entirely different than what they said. When you are then corrected, you claim the other person has a "communications deficit". I

Until around 1996. From Villanova. There are no messages on Google, or anywhere else, which contain headers from Villanova at any time since then. Except for ONE message that I copied from Google and E-mailed to you, which added the original headers to my current e-mail headers, and your spam cop choked on it. You are the only one who refuses to see that. Anyone else who has questioned me about it in private, understands, once they see the date stamps which are different, as well as the message ID sequences, which are also years apart, and who looks at the original message from Google, which is dated from the time it was sent, 8 years ago. You are the only one who can't seem to grasp that. All you do is to continue to make yourself look ignorant and inept at internet networking.

And you never spoke to anyone at Villanova. That is a lie.

There are many reasons for using a specific length of coax. Whether those reasons are valid for any or all CB radio installations is the issue in debate. But there are a few 'unequivocal' facts: 1). Most antenna manufacturers recommend 18 feet, for whatever reason; 2). As long as the cable run isn't very long, using any specific length of coax isn't going to make any noticable difference in performance; and, 3). There are far more significant issues to deal with.

That being said, if it makes you sleep better at night, use 18 feet as recommended by the manufacturer. If not, use whatever length you want for your coax, just as long as it's quality stuff. Instead worrying about the length of your coax, spend your time and energy getting the best match possible at the antenna. And remember that this is CB radio we're talking about, not communication terminals for interplanetary spacecraft.

Now it really chaps my hide when someone says that something is 'clearly wrong' or 'clearly right' when it clearly is neither. Anyone that spouts technical nonsense -- like saying that something is 'unequivocally wrong' without valid reason -- I'm going to call them to the mat. So if CLP want's to say that the antenna manufacturers' recomendation of 18 feet has no foundation in fact, he needs to find out the reason why that specific length is recommended, and then disprove it. Otherwise, his opinions are nothing more than continuing contributions to the technical hogwash that's spread on this newsgroup on a regular basis.

Well, I never really thought much about TV evangelists. Especially after the Jim Baker scandal. Most of them pray on the gullibility of their followers, in the hope that they will send large chunks of disposable income their way. I can't think of any of the current crop, who don't enthusiestically encorage "love offerings", or who peddle tapes or other trinkets for a significant markup.

The only thing I likes about Joyce over the others, was (in her current incarnation) her delivery. Speaking in the language of the common man, without the theatrics, the hand healing, etc. was something I could relate to. Since she's moved from the original satellite feed, I used to see her on a couple of years back, I haven't seen her lately. I did notice that she must have made enough money to afford a face lift. I guess vanity affects even those who speak the word......

That's all you can do. Many people on here, have good information. Some of it is a little off the track though. The best you can do is take what you see, and either try it yourself, or look to better sources to verify

Yet there are some who believe that this is all somehow the fault of me "changing" browser settings <chuckle>....

> Then the gain of a J-pole isn't much better then a dipole or 1/4 GP?

Not by much. A half wave radiator usually has a gain of 3dbi.

One other factor, that you might want to consider, when thinking about high gain antennas, is beamwidth. Most omnidirectional antennas achieve their gain at the expense of E-plane beamwidth. Think of what happens when you take a doughnut, laying flat on a table, which illustrates the radiation pattern of a simple verticle dipole, and then flattening it. The edges expand beyond the original shape (This illustrates the increased gain), but it becomes flatter. What this does is it creates "dead spots" in coverage area. Sure, your ultimate range will increase, but those areas, closer in, may experience rapid signal fading, or flutter, or total dead spots, as those signals fall under your "flattened" beamwidth.

I've found that it's usually better to keep the gain of an omni directional antenna, to a more reasonable level, and resort to directional beam antennas for the maximum gain. Between the two, you should be able to pick up both local, semi-local, and more distant signals.

Another thought to consider.

This newsgroup is one of a few I echo to the BBS. The news server I use is acting as a gateway between a news server and the BBS. The problem was due to the way things were mapped. It should have worked but I have since remapped things to avoid this problem. ie: I went back to the way I was doing it for the past 3 years.

No more dupes. Again, sorry for the problems.

I will try mapping it the way I want it again but I will use a test or dead group for

Since he prides himself on his "Chest poundin'" signal, and since it takes at least two to have a QSO, my best advice to you, would be to build either a sweep generator, or a white noise generator, and unleash it on his receive. If you're that close to him, you should be able to effectively plug his ears, with signals of over +10db over S9, with less than 100 mW (Which keeps it within part 15 regs). Eventually, when he gets tired of not hearing anything over a mile or two away, he'll either take his act on the road, or sell out. Either way, you'll be free to enjoy your hobby again. If he stays strictly on one channel, you could get by with a simple part 15 walkie talkie with the right crystal.

I hear ya. But by the time the FCC gets its collective butts in gear and gets the momentum rolling, the DX cycle will be in a down phase, and most of the more "colorful" people, will no longer be "worldwide" for all to hear. The decline in DX racket, will also reduce the need for many to move into 10 meters, and that problem will subside.

I applaud the effort. They just should have done it 2 years ago.

Nice to see that you are still begging for my attention. Anywayz, for the record, nobody "whacked" me from my ISP: I got sick of the constant problems -- dropped carriers, newsgroups out one day, email out the next -- all the while making excuses for pathetic service. So the past few months I have been trying different providers. I finally found one that, so far, is really excellent.

Now maybe you can find yourself a decent ISP, one that will give you a class on how to quote in a newsgroup. All these years and you still can't get it right -- that's pathetic, twist.

You heard it, I guess that's real enough.

Unfortunately yes. Seems that even ham radio has lowered it's standards and dumbed down the requirments so that even these types of social outcasts can easily obtain a ham license.

> I was looking at

The difference is that there is a greater chance that these guys will get popped for it. Although I could never understand why someone would blatently disregard FCC rules, with respect to jamming and vulgarity, and then still I.D. Speaks volumes about their sociopathic tendancies, and how differently they view the world from normal people.

> I just bought this receiver and I was really enjoying the net before these

> Someone tell Me , Would I be wasting My time taking the exam and just be > better off getting into cb ? Or is this a rare occurrence.

Unfortunately, these "occurances" are becoming more and more common.
Part of the reason was, as I explained earlier, the ease at which a person can obtain a ham license. Part of it also has to do with people's attitudes, and declining moral character. Where years ago, people had more respect for other people, today, it's all about individuality, and emphasis on freedom of expression. People are more "in your face", in many walks of life. So it should be no surprise that these attitudes spill over onto radio services. Many people derive their pleasure, by disrupting the harmony of other people. With life changing at such a rapid pace, it can be difficult to keep up. Many people develop social "issues" as a result. The relative anonymity of radio, gives people the ability to lash out, without the repercussions of a physical confrontation. Similar to flame wars over the internet. If you understand the reasons why people act out, it becomes easier to deal with them. Most of them crave attention, even negative attention. Usually, if you are able to ignore them, they'll eventually go away, since you aren't giving them the attention they so crave.

As far as wasting your time getting into ham radio, that's for you to decide. Ham radio is alot more than just DX on the low bands. Ham radio has a lot of spectrum to offer, and the types of people vary greatly depending on the type of interest.

There's nothing wrong with getting into CB either. Or FRS or MURS. They are all radio services, and using them all, gives you even more options, and different people to hook up with. If the climate on CB gets too obnoxious, you can switch to Ham or MURS. If ham is dead, you might find a lone trucker on CB, who's grateful to have someone to talk to.

Hold on now Twist, sit down and put down any sharp objects......

I agree with you.

A slight amount of echo, along with associated speech processing provides for more audio presence, and a more "commanding" signal. Most radio stations, especially the "boss rock" stations of the 60's and 70's employed this technique.

Now if we could only get the usual bunch of Cbers, who run echo, to apply it with the same precision, and care, that radio engineers do, it might work a bit better. Unfortunately, the best, that most of them can achieve, is sounding like they're in a trash can. Most are really not as interested in "enhancing" their signal, as much as they just like the "neet-O" factor.

I don't believe that this is the work of a malicious "someone". Rather one of their servers is repeating posts, due to a problem. They just Yeah, that's the main reason they do it, because they think they won't get caught. If they had any inkling that they may get busted, I doubt they'd do it. Still don't understand what the attraction of operating on the CB freeband is when you have several different HF bands available.

Unfortunately, this kind of behavior is more common now than it was in the past. But don't let a few bad apples spoil your enjoyment of the hobby. 3.910 has long been a trouble spot on 80 meters, as well as 14.313 in the past. The good thing is that these idiots normally hang out on one or two frequencies and don't spoil the rest of the band.

You may want to try CW or digital modes. The conversations are pleasant without any of the above ridiculous behavior. Probably because it's hard to make rude noises on CW or PSK.

its the people tom, on the freeband your alot more likely to run into your average run of the mill type of guy thats easy to get along with, likes to work on cars, watches football, has a wife and kids, and on the ham bands you got a lot of nerdy pseudo-stuffed shirt types that really make it a drag. its like everybody is constantly doing there best walter cronkite impression and trying to be "superior serious" radio ops so much that it kills the enjoyment for alot of us. the radio world is like high school where ham radio is the chess club and cb is the football team.

Just avoid them altogether.
Get your ham license and enjoy.
Don't let assholes like them deter you from the frequencies.
They don't have any sense whatsoever.
They giving themselves a bad name already by calling themselves 'Roaches'.
So, just stay away from them and goto another frequency like 14.300 and you'll find the Maritime Mobile Service Net on that one.
I listen to nets on HF and heard those "roaches".
I tune to other frequencies to listen to REAL radio operators.

Don't give in to their mentality.
That's what fuels their "operations" by "suckering-in" someone and then spreading rumours around and all that jive.

If they read this and don't like it. Tough!!!
They can flame me all they want -- I'm just gonna sit back and save every response they send.

You have more radio experience than they will ever have.
They want to play CB on those HF bands -- let them go ahead.
Sooner or later the MAN will be beating down their doors and draggin their
"roach-asses" to prison to play with "the girls".
There, they will learn the real deal of having their very own "Good-Buddy" to take a shower with!

Hey Jer, make certain you ascertain my claim concerning hammies getting warned for not providing their place of domecile, IE; "The addy where they live" to the FCC. In the past, I have seen comments from lids that claim as long as the FCC has a "contact" addy, it's all good...please enlighten the contingency (after speaking to Riley, of course) that the FCC has indeed stepped up enforcement and this is one area that has already been given attention..tell him we have a large presence of such hammies right here that used their mothers address...ah, what the hell,,tell him I'll send him another list, if he needs it, of angry hammies non-conducive to hammie radio that provided addresses other than where they reside..one hammie already receieved an OFFICIAL LETTER from the FCC concerning just this dilemma.....there will be more, no doubt about it.....spread the word,,this is an issue that is rapidly gaining attention.....can't say you fellas weren't warned.

Once again, you neatly illustrate the hypocricy you reek of. In one of your posts only a few weeks ago, you mention there is nothing wrong with the ocaasional freebanding to get away fromm the "hash and trash" then allow yoor personal anger to cloud your judgement.
You also claimed that running a linear in a car is a better idea as ooposed to a base so you don't get busted or interfere with as many folks and their electronic gadgets. You selectively apply FCC law as you see fit and cry and whine and bitch and moan when others do the same thing.

>Speaks volumes about their sociopathic >tendancies, and how differently they view the >world from normal people.

Agreed. "Normal" people aren't cowering in fear form terrorists like you claimed you were, normal folks do not ignorantly refer to amp users and freebanders as federal criminals such as yourself..so on one hand we have you encouraging breaking of such rules, then we have your Mr. Hyde persona talking of something you not know.....the view of the "majority" or of "normal" folks.
Not to mention your unhealthy obsession with how others feel.

I hear ya. But by the time the FCC gets its collective butts in gear and gets the momentum rolling, the DX cycle will be in a down phase, and most of the more "colorful" people, will no longer be "worldwide" for all to hear. The decline in DX racket, will also reduce the need for many to move into 10 meters, and that problem will subside.
I applaud the effort. They just should have done it 2 years ago.

I tried explaining it to you on several occasions, and you just don't seem to get it. There is a HUGE difference between how I personally FEEL about an issue, and what the law clearly states about it. For example, the law states that operating outside of the regular 40 channels is a clear violation of federal FCC rules, which carries with it fines up to $10,000. However, I personally, don't have a problem with people freebanding as long as they are not interfering with me, or with other legitimate services. In other words, use some common sense. As a matter of principle, and the fact that I have much to lose, if I were to be caught freebanding, I don't personally do it.
So go ahead and freeband, if it's what you want to do. I, don't have a problem with it. But remember, in the eyes of the law, you are breaking federal laws, the conviction of which earns you the official title of "criminal".

I live in fear of no one. However, there are others who are, as evidenced by the continued decline in our economy, as many businesses are playing "wait and see", with this Iraq situation, and the pending capture of Osama (Assuming that mohammed was not lying about his still being alive).

> normal folks do not ignorantly refer to amp users and > freebanders as federal criminals such as yourself.

"Normal" people think CB went out with the pet rock and platform shoes in the 70's. They communicate with cell-phones and instant messenger.

But unless you have some sort of mental block, how can you deny that operating excessive power and on unauthorized frequencies, is not a criminal offense, considering that the rules allow for fines up to $10K and jail time? Illegal is illegal, no matter what name you choose to "soften" the impact and perception.

>.so on one hand we > have you encouraging breaking of such rules, then we have your Mr. Hyde

You have no idea of what or where I speak from. Because what I say personally does not sit well with you, does not make it wrong.

> Not to mention your unhealthy obsession with how others feel.

I've said before, one of my "hobbies", is the study of the human condition. I am very much in tune with societal, and cultural changes, some of the reasons behind it, and where we might be heading as a result. I'm sorry if what I say hits so close to home that your only choice is to deny, and attack me as a symbol of what it is you hide from.

> Try and stick to radio, Davie,,,your imbecilic rants concerning your

Ah, a Spock fan! While a purely fictional character, I admire his dedication to logical solutions to problems. You will find that if you boil away the emotional baggage of many situations, and apply suitable logic, that the solution is not that hard to see. The situation in Iraq is a perfect example.

That stereotype is decades old now. Today it's more like ham radio is the football team, and CB are the stoners, and discipline problems.

Impedance of a mobile installation is usually les than 50 ohms 18 ft is an odd number of 1/4 wavelengths being so it inverts the impedance seen at the antenna. This mean if the SWR was 1.5:1 and the antenna impedance was less than the impedance of the cable the radio will see an impedance that is 1.5 times greater than the impedance of the cable. This can be a good thing because radios work better working into the higher impedance. Of course ideally no mismatch is best.

Hey, Frank:
For your information, I disagree with some of the tactics used on this group, regardless of who was using them. Like the posting of a 'phone number (whether it was the correct number or not), with the suggestion that people should make use of that information was certainly beyond the mark. But then, so were the e-mails sent to people on this group.

As I make clear, I have blocked people because they spam the group with "For sale" posts, while posting nothing else... or because they do nothing but moan and argue... or because I find their posts offensive.
I have blocked people from both sides of the "fence", but still see messages from "pro legal" people such as Jerry O, Keith, and Dave Hall.

Oh, and one other thing... the picture of you on your site seems to be missing. Not a moan, just thought that you may wish to know.

In one of your posts only a few weeks ago, you mention there is nothing wrong with the ocaasional freebanding to get away fromm the "hash and trash" then allow yoor personal anger to cloud your judgement. You also claimed that running a linear in a car is a better idea as ooposed to a base so you don't get busted or interfere with as many folks and their electronic gadgets. You selectively apply FCC law as you see fit and cry and whine and bitch and moan when others do the same thing.

This has been demonstrated bullshit by your unworthy attacks upon all that speak of it in a conducive manner. Double-talk is where you are now.

What constitutes a "conviction" to you? A statement by Riley that you committed violations? A letter from the FCC warning one they were in some type of violation? A subpoena? An NAL? An actual court room complete with trial?

That is your interpretation. The market is much more volatile and to think the entire market is contingent upon citizen's of the USA's mod or feelings is arrogantly ignorant. Consumer confidence and spending is affected by more than the pending war..much of it has to do with lack of faith in Bush' economic policy.

There ya' have it..that arrogant disdain for those who are cbers..you just cant help yourself.

Never took issue with such a statement,,not once. The difference is in your game of semantics.

so on one hand we have you encouraging breaking of such rules, then we have your Mr. Hyde persona talking of something you not know.....the view of the "majority" or of "normal" folks.

>You have no idea of what or where I speak >from.

You're correct. You have self-contradicted so many times, it's difficult to try and make any sense of when you're serious, joking, lying, or misattributing..wait a sec..no it;s not..it's when...you're posting....

>Because what I say personally does not sit >well with you, does not make it wrong.

Nope..it sure doesn't dAve,,and the difference is, I respect your opinion, no matter how irrelevant these personal feelings may be. That you continue to bring such personal feelings up and reiterate your solidarity to concerning such, once again illustrates you are unable to separate your personal feelings from any issue presented.

 Not to mention your unhealthy obsession with how others feel.

>I've said before, one of my "hobbies", is the >study of the human condition. I am very much >in tune with societal, and cultural changes,

But the group isn't.
And you're not being honest about it. If you were..you would take me up on my offer to take your off-topic "hobbies" to email and we can discuss anything your black heart desires. You may pick my brain and post results that say I'm the most challenged, mentally incompetent, paranoid extrovert you ever had the pleasure of misdiagnosing..but your failure to do so illustrates your refusal to remain on related topic, as well as your motives.

>some of the reasons behind it, and where we >might be heading as a result. I'm sorry if what I >say hits so close to home that your only >choice is to deny, and attack me as a symbol >of what it is you hide from.

Oh, but I will not deny you the pleasure of role playing and your fantasy internet diagnoses, davie,,I find you much too affable for that.

Try and stick to radio, Davie,,,your imbecilic rants concerning your self-styled vulcan mind-meld readings are washed up.

Nahh..I think Star Trek sucked. I'm not into TV that much...I used the phrase only because you mentioned in the past you haven't seen enough episodes. I figured I'd approach you with a language you understand.

Right.

Teranews decided to change how their servers worked some time back by replacing the Message-Id supplied in a POST with their own - one which is based on a hash of the message so it will prevent dups. However, this is a well known "bad" idea because people from time to time like to re-feed old articles back to Usenet using the POST command (which they really should do but is done and does normally work).

If someone posts old articles, with the same message-id, it should be harmless because they get rejected as dups because they have the same Message-ID. But, with teranews changing the Message-Id, they no longer look like dups to the news servers and instead look like new articles, so they get get sent out to all of usenet as dups.

News admins have been bitching at Teranews about this in the alt.binaries.news-server-comparison group. If you want to see more, check out the "nntpserver-family- Different Message IDs?" thread in that group.

And, anyone trying to gateway newsgroups, please don't use Teranews.

For starters, I have never been tossed from an ISP, but if you want to believe that you got me tossed then go right ahead -- who am I to stand in the way of your delusions of self-importance? Second, if you want to discuss lack of self-control, perhaps you should hold up a mirror -- remember your profane forgeries of N7VCF? Or the threats you made as 1mangang? Probably not. Despite the proof that has been posted time and time again you will just categorically deny it, which is fine because that's your personality and I wouldn't have it any other way.

> Webtv is a toy and certainly has no tracking abilities, blackhole

>Frank?

Not really, I haven't got a clue when it comes to anything beyond IP adresses. But a long time ago I noticed that the headers from your posts would have two different encodings, indicating that your posts came from two different machines. Actually, my guess was that you used the webtv terminal with some posts, and webtv's web-based groups on a PC for others. But what I can't understand is why you go to such lengths to hide your identity while wasting so much energy to expose others. Obviously you have something to hide, and that's fine with me because your anonymity destroys all credibility to your posts. So do you use all those tracking tools often?

Oh yeah... I am rebuilding my website soon, and just to give your overinflated ego a boost I'm including the Twisty-Buster radio direction finder. I'll even include a short comment from you in the description if you want... I can even include that silly fishing picture...;-)

Poor lost soul. I never concerned myself with the identity of anyone unless you camein drag and introduced the "guess who I am" game. Merely indulging you in your whimsical persuits keeps you from harassing the righteous.

>Obviously you have something to hide,

I'm not the one masking my ISP,,never did...and I may add, I still have the same email account.

Just now arriving at the conclusion that usenet is not the place to receive your degree does not surprise me.

Never have. Those satelite pics you posted of my neighborhood have you talking out of both sides of your hypocritical port hole again.

Contradcitory. If it's OVER-inflated, it needs no boost.

Why bother? Anyone that wishes to find me needs merely say so. Several have already done just that.

Izzat a fact. Funny. I've heard lots of discussions about football, cars,

As to the nerds you so loudly proclaim, I'm sure that some there that would object to that--like Joe Walsh (of the band "The Eagles"), Barry Goldwater (deceased), Lance Bass,
a number of country singers (Ronnie Milsap and several others) as well as other "regular joes" that are far from nerdy. My favorite is Joe Walsh with whom I have had several discussions about Collins equipment.

Hey Jer, make certain you ascertain my claim concerning hammies getting warned for not providing their place of domecile, IE; "The addy where they live" to the FCC. In the past, I have seen comments from lids that claim as long as the FCC has a "contact" addy, it's all good...please enlighten the contingency (after speaking to Riley, of course) that the FCC has indeed stepped up enforcement and this is one area that has already been given attention..tell him we have a large presence of such hammies right here that used their mothers address...ah, what the hell,,tell him I'll send him another list, if he needs it, of angry hammies non-conducive to hammie radio that provided addresses other than where they reside..one hammie already receieved an OFFICIAL LETTER from the FCC concerning just this dilemma......there will be more, no doubt about it.......spread the word,,this is an issue that is rapidly gaining attention.......can't say you fellas weren't warned.

Whatever the status of the operator, it's all the same. If he gets busted, well and and good.

Funny you should mention my health. I returned from the Docs office this PM. BP: 122 over 72, Pulse 70, heart very normal and sounding strong, weight 216 (it was 244), and waist size down to a 36. I doubt there is anything that I am "mad" at anyone about. I don't sweat that stuff, either: when the violators get popped, I snicker out loud. After all, isn't it said that laughter is the best medicine? LOL!

That's called a "Georgie". He says all the websites are wrong, and he is right actually doesn't ever quote any part of the book.

Jimmy,
Depending on the type coax used (none of the commercially available coax), 18 feet isn't an electrical 1/4 wave at 27 Mhz, or a 1/2 wave either. So, none of the characteristics of those particular lengths of feed line apply.

Read his post again: he said that "18 ft is an odd number of 1/4 wavelengths".

Ah yes, but it's -your- truth, twist, which has no basis in reality.
Such as your "truth" that I am N7VCF, Leland Scott, Glenn Sparks, etc, etc. So you go ahead and disseminate -your- truth, and the rest of us will sit back in the recliner of reality and have a good laugh.

Here's an IQ test for ya, twist: If my email is username@myISP.net then what do you think is the name of my ISP? That's right, it would be "myISP.net"! Very good. Now just put three 'w's in front of it and what do you get? www.aimcomm.net ! Are you going to tell me that you couldn't figure that out for yourself and needed it spoon-fed to you?

Possible, but not likely. Try it anyway if you want. You can even try

Probably, since it's inconceivable how you could be anything -less-than my present opinion of you, Twisty.

Your personal life and feelings are a matter of public record, Twist.
You have proclaimed, without prompting or encouragement, that you are a freebander, that you use amps on the freeband, that you beat your puppies, steal real estate, and feel it is morally right to use excessive and deadly force against college kids picking mushrooms in a cow pasture (is there something I missed from that list?). Also, you have declared that you are proud of all of this deviant behavior. And, as if that wasn't enough, you seem to think that I have a need to discredit your posts. I couldn't discredit you any more than you have done for yourself! You are still failing to grasp the concept of someone prodding you in order to laugh at your "truth". That's called 'denial', Twisty.

But now you claim that any discussion by me of your "personal life and feelings" is "unhealthy". How so, Twist? Would it be like what could happen if someone were to repeatedly post my phone number (or should I say the phone number of N7VCF) with instructions on how to avoid the call being traced? Or how about forging someone else (thinking he was me) while accusing them of being a child molester? I would think that could result in some pretty "unhealthy" results, don't you, Twist? (BTW, it was Rob that nailed you on the phone number forgeries -- I caught you on the N7VCF forgeries from your spectacular faux pas). So just what do you mean by "unhealthy", Twist? Like walking on thin ice? If you are too stupid to understand the analogy, email me and I'll explain it to you in graphic detail.

You don't understand, Twist -- I ENJOY prodding you. You come up with some of the most outlandish concepts... If I ever teach Logic again I could use your posts for examples of just about every logical fallacy ever conceived! Politicians should take lessons from you because they are mere amateurs compared to your expertise with double-talk and misdirection. And when you go into one of your paranoid tirades it is just so much fun to read... well, you should really compile yourself an anthology of all your anti-government rants, statements from your invisible psychiatrist, and your proud declarations of exemption from self-selected social and legal responsibilities -- it would be a best-seller on the comedy list!

Of course YOU didn't, Twist. You said just a couple posts ago that "MSN has done outstanding things" for you. They even got me TOSsed from my ISP for you, right? Well, it would be if I actually got TOSsed...hehe!

Yeah, that's pretty cool stuff, huh? Being able to get satellite photos right off the net. Kinda makes ya paranoid, don't it? Especially when you realize that the government has satellites with much greater resolution than what's available to the public. Heck, I bet they can even see the mushrooms growing out in your field...

Gee, what a coincidence, so have I. In fact, I put my name right out there for anyone to see. It's really pathetic that there are some that can't handle the concept of honesty and must delude themselves into thinking that I am someone other than who I claim to be. You wouldn't know any of those people, would you Twist?

Are you now claiming that the picture is not of you? I don't recall seeing any copyright notice on the picture or the site. Are you suggesting that if I post the pic under the title of "Photo provided by Twistedhed, alleged to be of himself by his own admission" that you would take legal action? Sounds like a challenge to me! But I also don't seem to recall you saying which person in the photo is you -- are you the one hanging from the line? Guess I'll have to hit the archives.

BTW, don't get used to me paying you attention. I took the day off because I twisted my ankle, so it seemed appropriate that I pick on you today. Hehe!

That's an interesting radio... a little pricey for AM only. Anyone know who makes it?:

http://tinyurl.com/72we

Note the channel buttons on the mike and 7 weather channels, also "ACE" noise reduction... front mike connection... China? Philippines? Korea?

So why did you lay all the blame on the legal activists? I have stated many times that I didn't agree with Doug's tactics, but his posts were so far removed from rational conversation that nobody should have taken them seriously, just like Dave/Debby's posts. People didn't like Voobner because he was -too- rational and they couldn't counter his logic (ever notice that Voobner never used profanity?). If you are referring to the harassing emails and the one with the alleged virus, I stated clearly that I didn't send any of them. In fact I suggested that the recipients of those emails should post them with the headers to find out who did send them, but nobody posted them. So I really don't believe for one minute that the perp was a legal activist. More likely it was a keyclown trying to stir up hate and discontent against us. Twisty was one of them, and I have an email threat from him as 1mangang that I have posted w/headers. I think if you compare the headers to any emails you have received they might show some similarities. Phil Covington is another prime suspect because of his forging emails between Voobner and myself. (And no, Voobner is not Stewart. Phil could have told you that from looking at the headers, but he didn't because that wouldn't have made him the newsgroup bigshot for disclosing Voobner's identity.) So if you want to put the blame on the legals for all the mess then you are barking up the wrong tree.

>As I make clear, I have blocked people because they spam the group with "For

Not missing, just rebuilding. I uploaded the main page to test the new the old ISP, but that will be gone soon).

18ft. is about a half wavelength at cb frequencies since 11 meters(a full wave length) is roughly equal to 36 feet.
That's why it's called the 11 meter cb band.

Is there a website that lists U.S. CB channel use? For example, say I'm travelling in a certain part of the country, and would like to monitor a channel that is frequented by certain groups: what channel would I monitor?

might be roger beep
but it's bit strange it's only got three wires?
any missing or come off.?

beep boards normally need atleast power (2)
audio out
+ lines in & out to tx switching can't see it being noise squelch either 4 the same reason.

neither talkback, cause no speaker wires weird??

if i was being super sus
i'd say it's a transmitter & the grey wire was flying as an aerial.

now about a good quality 'top' close-up.
so can see chip no.s & tracks

Thought I should explain why working into the lower impedance isnt so good. For those who have used tube amps you know what happens when you apply to much loading when you are tuning up. Power goes down and modulation suffers. Working into the lower impedance is the same as loading the amp to heavily. If we must err it is best to do on the high side. However if the antenna is a reasonably good match then I am all in favor of just enough cable to reach the radio too.

Thats all well and good if you are talking antennas or free space, not so for coax though. You did not figure in the velocity factor of the coax. The signal travels quite a bit slower through the cable than it does free space making a 1/2 wl about 12ft and 3/4wl 18 ft and full wavelength more like 24ft..

The only forging of emails came from you Frank. I forgot that you wanted to be Voobner. After all, you sent me an email message a few months ago stating that you were Voobner. I think Randy got one too. If anyone is sending viruses I would suspect you first from the other tactics you have used here. And Voobner is Stewart as you well know.

I must say Tim is the only NG participant that i have ever heard on a Cb

What other "tactics"? The only "tactic" I have used is honesty and logic. Works pretty well, you might try it sometime.

> And Voobner is Stewart as you well know.

Didn't I explain how we were able to tell that someone was hacking our emails? It's real simple, Phil: Neither of us ever answers an email with just one or two words, and rarely do we use incomplete sentences.
Very out-of-character for both of us (the exception is when I reply with "huh?"). You also didn't know that Voobner never used any "Voobner" accounts when emailing me. So when I got an email from a mispelled Voobner using an incomplete sentence with only a couple words it kinda sent up a really big flag.

Phil, a lot of time has passed since then and I'm not mad at you any more. But you really need to chomp at the bit and realize that you got burned at your own game.

Hi all.

I have a need to run 6 Marine CB radios. However, I really do not want to put up 6 antenna's. I have been looking around the net for a splitter/coupler or whatever it is called to run the whole lot on one antenna. So My questions are?

What is the proper name of these types of unit?

I gather you would loose a bit of sensitivity in the receiving area so is it helpful to run a preamp?

Can you transmit from one radio without disconnecting the rest and if by some chance another radio transmitted at the same time, what happens?

Where can I buy a second habd one? I am part of a volunteer group and want to help them out a bit.

Regards, Peter

basic answer is 'no' u can't do this cheaply u would need expensive radios & filtering
u cannot use multiple same band radios on the a single antenna

While I agree with you you need to be careful not to lump all of them into the same pile. There are some excellent teachers out there. The ones that REALLY are interested in spreading the Word and not making a buck give the stuff away or sell it at their cost.

I do admit that she does have a way with her words that makes in into kind of a folksy type of person. However she takes advantage of Satan's greatest weapon and that is ignorance of what the Bible actually says.

Peter,
If the radios are not on the same frequency/channel, it's certainly possible to do what you want. It isn't going to be inexpensive, depending on how you do it.
Separate antennas are one option, using one antenna for all of the radios is another. How easy, or how expensive it is to do depends on the frequencies in use, and how much 'convenience' you are willing to pay for. Some of the problems you have to deal with are muting the other radios when transmitting (if required), and maintaining the required impedances for transmitting with the various radios. It really isn't an easy thing to do, and I would suggest asking a professional about the 'how'. Not a very satisfying answer, huh?

So that is why you decided to make it look like Dwight Stewart was Voobner? Yeah right, Honest Frank. Wow, you are a good friend then. Lucky Dwight.

Why does it matter to you? If Stewart isn't Voobner then what is the difference to you whether I believe he is? Next you will be telling us that Aaron Voobner is a real person and Aaron Voobner is his real name. Stewart posted from his AOL account. That is how he was caught playing Voobner. Not because of your Honest Frank tactics.

It can be done. You would need a good antenna coupler to accomplish it, and as the others said, it is not cheap.

Do you mean this?

Maybe you have a problem with simple reading comprehension. That email came from Voobner, not me. I didn't know he did it till after the fact, but I still had a good laugh! And while searching for that post
I found one of my most favorite posts:

Remembering that keyclowns were much more obsessed with Voobner's identity than mine, maybe now you can understand why it was so much fun to confound their (and your) confusion. It still is!

You forged emails to initiate and intercept private communications in order to obtain personal information for the purpose of harassment.
That spells jail time and heavy fines, Phil -- the only reason you didn't end up with criminal and/or civil charges is because we saw your scam from the start and played you like an idiot. You should really consider yourself very lucky that you are so bad at forgery.

Actually, that was my idea. I thought Stewart would get as much of a kick out of it as we did. I was wrong. He didn't appreciate it one bit, especially after you started your harassment campaign against him.

I really don't care what you think, Phil. My concern is that there might be some people more gullible than yourself that might actually believe your delusions, so I make it my business to tell the truth of the matter.

> Next you will be telling us that >Aaron Voobner is a real person and Aaron Voobner is his real name.

Of course the name Voobner is ficticious. I suppose that you will now believe the name is real because I said it wasn't, which would be about par for your mentality.

> Stewart
>posted from his AOL account. That is how he was caught playing Voobner. Not >because of your Honest Frank tactics.

Gee, Phil, I thought you got your info because of your special "ties with a certain ISP". But if your secret information is that they both had an AOL account then anyone that posts from an AOL account could be Voobner, even Tim Nebout! That's not a very good job of hacking for a person that claims to be able to forge personal information on a federal web server (or did you forget about that, too?).

BTW, I still have all the emails, as well as the complaints I filed with your ISP regarding your stalking and forgeries. If you want to try stupid and illegal stunts like that again, it won't be the newsgroup deciding who's right and who's wrong. Comprendes amigo?

Assuming you want to transmit from these radios, as soon as you key up one radio you will blow the receivers in all the others. You can do it only one way, and that is by using very sharp and very expensive filters. If you are only planning on transmitting from one radio at a time you could design a coax relay network, but that would also be rather expensive, maybe even more so than the filters. Even if you use seperate antennas, if the antennas are too close to each other you still run the risk of overloading or burning out the receive of another radio.

Have you looked around for a scanning tranceiver?

I think I probably do have a CB still down in the basement somewhere.
Haven't used one since the 70's however.

I was just visiting. The thread was pointed out to me by one of my users because it was about a news server issue.

Sorry I forgot to say that all the radios are going to be on a different channel but same band. All marine CB's. Stupid me.

What I thought of doing was using 2 antenna's. One as a general recieve and perhaps a preamp to boost the incoming before it gets split. Then at each radio is a coax relay. The common point to the radio, the normally closed to the receive/splitter and the normally open to the transmit. I am using a desk mic and some aditional electronics so the idea was as you hit the ptt for a particular radio, it changes the coax relay to the transmit arial then fires the ptt in that radio....

Just an idea....

Sounds like a real pain. BTW, when you hit your key the relay(s) need to ground the lines to all the other radios. You can't leave them open, not at such close proximity to transmit power, even if you are using two antennas. Matter of fact, it doesn't seem worthwhile to use a second antenna at all with your setup.

If you are adept at electronics, maybe you should think about building some narrow-band filters instead. What is the frequency range and channel spacing?

What you need is called a Duplexer or Diplexer and they can be picked up for under $100.00 us. Try Comet or go to almost any Ham Radio dealer like HRO and they should be able to set you up.

In the commercial world it's called a combiner. We have a site up on a building that uses 4 radios with one antenna and there is no problems with interference. All users could be talking on all of the radios at the same time and the combiner just splits the freqs to what ever radio the signal goes to. Motorola sells them as well as I'm sure other dealers. We only deal with motorola products at our two way shop. If you need further info let me know and I'll see what I can dig up.

PS: Just a note, these combiners are not cheap by no means.

Like I said in my other post, it can certainly be done and we set customers, mostly casinos since im in Las Vegas, all the time.
They don't like having alot of antennas on the roof of their hotels so we set them up with the combiners and their set.
Again it's expensive but the hotels can afford it.

You can do that with a "Dow Key" relay, but for 6 ports, it will be expensive. I have one with only 2, and it was over $100. I have never seen one with 6 outputs!

I tell you what Frank, if you have some kind of proof that I forged any emails (which I did not) then you go ahead with your "criminal and/or civil charges". Otherwise it is just more sour grapes from you.

You show me where I claimed that I could forge personal information on a federal web server. I don't know what you are smoking but it is affecting what is left of your small brain. To refresh your recollection you sent me an email with a link to a court case that you were involved in to act as proof to your identity. Then you claimed that Frank Gilliland wasn't you.

Ok, now you resort to threats. If you are claiming that I have forged emails, stalked people and/or have done other illegal "stunts" then go ahead and show your proof. Otherwise it is just saber rattling by you. Why do you always threaten legal action against anyone who does not agree with you?
This is you modus operandi if you cannot twist the truth around as you have already tried to do through your false accusations. Anyone can see this they do a search on Google. You are a joke Frank.

For about $30.00 more than the Rad Shack unit you're looking at, you can get a new in the box Uniden Grant LT. Based on the comments I've read in this newsgroup, the Grant LT is one of the best radios for the price. And for the extra $30.00, you get the added benefit of SSB. Check out this link:

In my opinion, Radio Shack sold some good radios in the '70's and early '80's, but their newer rigs are of mediocre quality.

Actually curt can you take a look in the basement for thta radio perhaps I would buy it from you. Never know it may be an oldie but a goodie. I used to stop by peoples houses who had old antennas up to ask if they still have any old cb equipment.

It's ok Curt, you came to answer a question, something that "Asheed done for anyone on this group.

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

So now you are convinced I am Richard Cranium? You are an idiot George.

After a couple years of active participation, it's clear that this forum is nothing more than a medium for the promotion of illegal operation and the proliferation of technical voodoo. There is almost no discussion of the intended and practical uses of CB radio, the fundamental purpose of which is easy-to-use, low-power, license-free radio communication. Instead, discussions are about using the band for RF drag racing, and by wannabe-hams that are too lazy to get their license. From participating in this newsgroup, it seems that CB radio has attracted its recent popularity from this new 'gimme' generation ("I want mine, I want it now, and I don't want to pay for it!"), of which I am not a member. If that's what CB radio has become then I'll leave you all to roll happily in your squalor, and instead of trying to use facts and reason in my efforts I'll be using DF equipment from now on.

Toodles.

INTERNATIONAL: COLOMBIAS NATIONAL AMATEUR RADIO SOCIETY SAVED BY A MIRACLE

Colombia’s national Amateur Radio Society has received a reprieve from extinction. At least a temporary one. We have this in-depth look at what happened and whats being done to save the L-C-R-A.

--

Colombia’s national ham radio society remains on the brink of being dissolved and you may soon hear very few of that nations hams on the air. This, according to Fred Laun, K3ZO in a report that originally appeared in a number of D-X newsletters. The reason? The economy.

According to Laun, his old friend Beto Rojas, HK3DDD, in Bogota informed him that postal rates in Colombia were doubled as of January 1st. That it now costs the equivalent of $2.00 U-S to send a letter to the United States. And as a result Colombian hams would have to pay the equivalent of 13 cents per QSL to send outgoing cards through the bureau.

That 13 cent fee would not be to bad except for the fact that the bureau probably won't be available much longer. This, because the Colombian I-A-R-U member society -- the Liga Colombiana de Radioaficionados -- L-C-R-A -- was to meet on Saturday, March 1st to dissolve itself. The problem is that L-C-R-A membership is down. It now only has 200 paid members. It also had the equivalent of 8000 United States dollars in debt. It’s leaders felt that it could no longer stay in business.

But says Laun, a miracle actually happened. At the meeting one of the members donated $7000 to pay off most of the current debt. So, L-C-R-A will continue to operate as Colombia’s national society for at least the next three months. During that time the leadership will try to figure out what went wrong and see if they can get the organization back on an even keel.

In a note to Amateur Radio Newsline, Laun says that several Colombian hams were apparently moved by the messages they received from around the world and have vowed to try to rescue their almost 70 year old society from the brink of oblivion. Even so, HK3DDD tells Laun that many Colombian hams have stopped calling C-Q and some have even terminated all high frequency operations. This is because they can no longer afford to handle the economic consequences of the demand for QSL cards.

Also says HK3DDD, some Colombian DXers who are still on the air are simply listening, searching and pouncing on rare ones these days. Instead of being the DX, they are selectively looking for new countries for themselves.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Norm Seeley, KI7UP .

The bottom line to all of this? H-K prefix hams may soon become very rare on the H-F ands and those whom you work may never be able to QSL. (K3ZO)

RADIO RULES: WRC-03 GETS US POSITION

The U. S. Department of State has forwarded several agenda items to Geneva as being this nations opening position at the 2003 World Radiocommunictions Conference. The most important of these relate to International Radio Regulation s-25 and its sub-parts. Included in the initial United States position is rewording S 25 subpart 1 to give member nations more authority to determine the points of communication of the amateur stations it has licensed. The suggested modifuication reads that administrators shall verify the technical and operational qualifications of any person wishing to operate an Amateur station.

The United States is also proposing to eliminate regulation 25.5. This is the rule that mandates Morse Code peoficiency examinations for all candidates for an Amateur license with high frequency operating priveleges. The United States says that its time to remove the Morse testing requirement and leave the decision as whether or not to test for code up to individual I-T-U mermber nations. (W5YI)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: CREW OF 2 TO THE ISS

It will be a two man crew rather than a three man crew on the International Space Station until the U-S Space Shuttle flies again. But ham radio will remain on the air from the I-S-S as the investigation in the Columbia tragedy continues. Amateur Radio Newsline's Roy Neal, K6DUE, has more:

NASA'S WORST NIGHTMARE BECAME REALITY WHEN AN ORBITTING SPACE SHUTTLE BLEW UP, KILLING ALL SEVEN ABOARD AND PUTTING UNITED STATES SPACE ACTIVITY OH HOLD FOR AN INDEFINITE FUTURE. NOW, OUT OF THE DEBRIS, INVESTIGATION AND SORROW, NASA HAS BEGUN TO REORGANIZE.

ADMINISTRATOR SEAN O'KEEFE HAS TOLD A CONGRESSIONAL PANEL THAT AN AGREEMENT HAS BEEN REACHED WITH THE INTERNATIONAL PARTNERS. THE INTERNATIONAL SPACE STATION WILL CONTINUE IN ORBIT FOR AT LEAST THE NEXT 18 MONTHS.

THE TWO ASTRONAUTS AND ONE COSMONAUT ON BOARD WILL BE BROUGHT BACK TO EARTH IN LATE APRIL OR EARLY MAY ABOARD THE SOYUZ SPACE SHIP THAT'S DOCKED AT THE STATION. THEY WILL BE REPLACED BY A NEW CREW OF ONLY 2 PEOPLE, ONE ASTRONAUT AND ONE COSMONAUT, PROBABLY ED LU AND YURI MALENCHENKO, WHO ARE NOW IN TRAINING AT RUSSIA'S STAR CITY. THEY WILL KEEP THE STATION OPERATIONAL, EVE N PLAN TO TALK TO ONE OR TWO SCHOOLS ON EARTH EVERY WEEK. FUTURE CREWS WILL COPNSIST OF TWO PEOPLE FOR THE TIME BEING.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS SPACECRAFT WILL BE USED TO FERRY SUPPLIES, SOYUZ WILL CARRY PASSENGERS. ONCE NASA HAS FIGURED OUT WHAT CAUSED THE SHUTTLE COLUMBIA TO DISINTIGRATE, THEY HOPE TO FIX AND FLY THE THREE REMAINING SPACE SHUTTLES. THE BOEING COMPANY HAS BEEN ASKED TO GO TO WORK ON A NEW CARRIER TO AUGMENT THE SHUTTLE FLEET.

RUSSIA HAS AGREED TO ACCELERATE THE DELIVERY OF 2 PROGRESS RE-SUPPLY VEHICLES FOR A TOTAL FLEET OF FOUR THIS YEAR AND FIVE IN 2004 AND THERE IS TALK OF AUGMENTING THE SOYUZ FLEET.

EXISTING HAM RADIO EQUIPMENT ON BOARD SHOULD KEEP THE STATION ON THE AIR. OTHER EQUIPMENT MAY BE SENT UP IF NEEDED. THE SPACE AGENCIES HAVE COMMITED TO STAYING IN SPACE WHILE THEY MAP A FUTURE AND HAM RADIO IS AN INTEGRAL PART OF THAT ORBITING STATION.

FOR THE AMATEUR RADIO NEWSLINE, ROY NEAL, K6DUE.

NASA says that having only two people aboard the I-S-S will help extend supplies while the shuttle fleet remains grounded. (NASA, ARNewsline™)

RESCUE RADIO: METRO-COMM AND THE NORTH-EAST BLIZZARD

A follow-up to our recent coverage of the severe weather that has blanketed the North-East in recent weeks. Steve Bromhead, KB2TRZ, reports that the Metro-Comm linked repeater system did yomens duty during last months blizzard.

According to Steve, their Snow Watch Net was activated for 42 consecutive hours handling storm related traffic for 12 counties in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware. This included 10 formal messages to the National Weather Service office in My. Holly New Jersey.

Steve says that Metro-Comm is a linked repeater system covering Binginghamton, New York to Ocean City, New Jersey. The system has machines on 144, 220, 432, and 1296 MHz as well as a packet BBS. (KB2TRZ)

ENFORCEMENT: NO RULES BROKEN

A ham accused of running a telephone call-in program on 75 meters has been cleared of any wrong doing. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Bruce Tennant, K6PZW has good news for one California ham:

--
Back on October 15, 2002, the FCC wrote to James S. Watkins, KI6GU, of Burbank California. This, regarding complaints that his station was involved in a telephone call-in like program on 3.830 MHz on August 16th and 24th.

The complaints alleged that Watkins had operated the call-in show using reverse phone patch. Copies were provided to him and the FCC requested additional information from Watkins in regard to that operation.

Watkins provided the requested information in a response dated last November 12th. Following a thorough review the FCC now says that that there were no violations of Commission rules since licensed operators were in control of the station during all transmissions. As a result the inquiry is closed and no enforcement action is deemed to be necessary.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Bruce Tennant, K7PZW, in Los Angeles.

The FCC also thanked Watkins for what it termed as his quick reply and his cooperation. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: WARNING LERTTER FOR ALLEGED KEY-DOWN

A Michigan ham has recieved a Warning Notice from the FCC. This time the letter went to to George Albrecht, N8PGB, of Lansing , and says that the FCC is in posession of information alleging that Albrecht's station was the source of deliberate interference to the W8LCC repeater system on 442.025 Mhz.

The notice says that the interference took the form of unidentified transmissions and keying down to cause sound effects from a link to 52.525 Mhz. In its note the FCC warned all Albrecht of the possibility of fines and revocation proceedings against him if the alleged problems continue. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: NY CAR SERVICE FINED FOR UNLICENSED OPERATION

International Car Service, Inc. of Brooklyn, New York has been fined $10,000. This, for operating of unlicensed radio transmitters on 33.20 Mhz.

The original forfeiture order was issued on October 22, 2002 by the District Director of the Commission's New York Field Office. International Car Service never filed a response to the N-A-L. Based on the information before the Commission, the fine has been affirmed and International has been ordered to pay. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: HACKER SENTENCED

A federal judge has ruled that a California man who quit his job to work for a competitor and used his old computer password to snoop on his former employer must pay $21,600 and serve five years probation. The sentence comes after the San Dimas man pleaded guilty in September of 2002 to one count of illegally obtaining information from a protected computer

Until February of last year, the man reportedly worked for a contractor specializing in large retail buildings. After leaving that job to work for a competitor, the man admitted that he used a password to access its computer system more than 20 times. (Published reports)

FM AND REPEATERS: REPEATERLINK.ORG WANTS YOU

Hams and repeater owner operators interested in connecting their system to another cirty or another nation now have a new resource. Its in cyberspace at www.repeaterlink.org and once there you will find a growing list of who'se repeater is linked to where and how its being done.

repeaterlink.org is the work of Jim Willmore, KC9BIX. He says over several Internet remailers that his site is unique in that it lets you to search for repeater systems that connect two different cities together or linked systems that have repeater in a specific city. It also allows hams who own a repeater system to log in and maintain your own system information in real time.

According to Willmore, repeaterLink.org is totally independant and supported by the ham radio community. It does not buy data from the FCC or the ARRL, but rather relies on the architects and engineers who own the repeater networks to register their own systems.

Again, that site is www.repeaterlink.org. If you have any questions about the site, email Jim at kc9bix@repeaterlink.org (KC9BIX)

TRAVEL WARNING: DX'ERS ADVISED TO USE CARRY-ON LUGGAGE ONLY

If you are planning a D-Xpedition, you might want to think in terms of smaller being better. This following reports of vandalism to the luggage of a recent DXpedition by none other than those highly trained security folks at Seattle Washington's Sea-Tac Airport. Amateur Radio Newsline's Jim Meachen, ZL2BHF, in Auckland New Zealand reports on what happened to a bunch of DXpedition operators who were headed home:

When the D-Xpedition group returning from the recent AH3D operation reached Seattle for their connection to Copenhagen Denmark, all their Samsonite case's locks were been broken by the Sea-Tac Airport security people who just had to take a peek inside. The checking was done in a secure area of the Seattle airport. As most seasoned travelers know, security is supposed to find the passengers to get the keys to luggage that they want to inspect. In this case security simply broke into them, resulting in damage to the luggage and some rather messy repacking.

As a result of this experience, D-X'er Martti Laine, OH2BH, says he will be going hand carried from now on. When he operates the ARRL SSB Contest from the Canary Islands as EA8BH it will be using the new Yaesu FT-897. This is a radio that weighs in at only 8 and 1/2 pounds and can be toted along in the passanger cabin with him.

Laine says that EA8BH will be on the air on all bands using the new Yaesu radio. He adds that the QSL for this operation will feature information on this new, compact DXpedition, approach.

From down-under I'm Jim Meachen, ZL2BHF, for the Amateur Radio Newsline.

Several D-X publications quote Laine as saying that during these turbulent times it is advantageous to have all your equipment hand carried. He says that such rigs as the FT-897 and the FinnFet FF-1001 solid-state kilowatt will all fit into a small airline hand-carry bag. Laine adds that if you work him, QSL direct to OH2BH. DX

In D-X word that G3TBK, is returning to work in St. Vincent and will be active again as J88DR until the 10th of April. He will be on all bands from 80 through 10 meters. mostly CW. There may also be a possibility of some operation on 160 metres if he can find sufficient space for an antenna. All QSLs go to G3TBK, either via the bureau or direct. (RSGB)

And FO5RK reports that he is planning to be active again from Rapa Island through March 20th. Rapa Island is located in the Australs group, which counts as a separate DXCC entity from French Polynesia. QSL this one as directed on the air. (OPDX)

THAT FINAL ITEM: W2NSD ADVISES ON THE WAR ON TERRORISM

And finally this week a word on how to win the War on Terrorism without firing very many shots. It comes in some advice from 73 Magazine's Wayne Green, W2NSD. And as we hear from Blair Alper, KA9SEQ, Green has some rather interesting albeit offbeat ideas -- all using radio:

Writing in his March editorial, the prolific W-2-Never-Die quotes a rather strange idea he says comes from Newsmax.com. Its a story recommending that Israel set up narrow passages at every checkpoint with sandbags to absord any explosions. Then use UHF transmitters to detonate any explosives that a terrorist may be trying to sneak in. That says Green would get rid of a lot of suicide bombers in short order.

But Green takes it a lot futher. He suggests that the United States adopt a psychological approach to fighting terrorists. He says that we should set up a series of radio and television broadcasts in the Arabic language. He says that the programs would be made up of psychics supposedly interviewing dead suicide bombers who are screaming that they are roasting in hell and not enjoying the after-life that they were promised. The psychics would also claim that God is furious with them and has put a curse on their families.

Would it work? On this one we won't even venture a guess. But 73's Green does add this comment. He says that it is far better to outsmart enemies than to try to outfight them. It's cheaper, says W2NSD, and that it saves lives.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Blair Alper, KA9SEQ.

Just a guess here, but maybe it's a reference to the UK version of a US trucker with a CB (with or without foot warmer). The M3 is a major highway in the UK.

As I said, just a guess.. if someone else knows for sure, I will stand corrected. :)

There is no such thing, other than in the minds of a few bigots in the NG.

The entry level amateur radio licence in the UK is now the Foundation Licence, for which the prefix is M3.

The Foundation Licence was introduced in Jan 01 and has been a tremendous success- bringing many newcomers of all ages into the hobby. A few of the old guard don't like it- seeing the newcomers as a threat to their self awarded superior status.

The Foundation Licence is part of the progressive licensing scheme being introduced in the UK, the next licence 'up' is the Intermediate and, come Jan 04 (or so) the scheme will be complete when the current RAE is replaced by a new RAE. At that time to get a full, or as it will be known advanced, licence, candidates will need to pass the FL and IL exams first.

You may want and try one of the toy makers and see if it's one of theirs. There are a couple of sound toy makers that hang on this group. I think one is ees toys and the other is radio replay toys.

peter you need to describe in non technical terms what it is you are trying to accomplish. in other words you have decided on a technical solution (6 radios, one antenna) before you have really thought out the problem. the first question is do you really need 6 radios with 6 radio operators? what is the communication need? is it that you are trying to have a way to monitor 6 channels simultaneously? would there ever be a situation where you need to conduct comms on 2 channels at the same time? a commercial hf transceiver with scanning capabilities might be what you are looking for. or even 2 of them with separate antennas on each end of the building. much cheaper than six radios with combiners and duplexers and six radio operators.

Let's see now, the forgeries Voobner and I both received of each other were traced back to your ISP; your ISP verified that fact that they came from your account and whacked you; you disappear from the newsgroup for an entire year.... just coincidence, I'm sure.

Get the story straight, Phil. You asked for a photocopy of my driver's license before you would send me your info about Voobner's identity.
Instead I sent you a link to a federal web server and told you to call the phone number to verify that I was the Frank Gilliland listed. I even said you could call collect if you couldn't afford the charges.
The fact is that you didn't have any such info about Voobner so you didn't call, and instead, disregarding that my reference was a FEDERAL web server, made excuses about how easy it is to forge info on the

net. Then, just as soon as that conversation died, you posted the address from that server with the intent to harass. And at the very same time you were working on getting info on Voobner with the forgeries. Now you are saying it wasn't you? Nice try, Phil, but you are drowning here.

>Ok, now you resort to threats.

I don't have any need to threaten, Phil. I'm telling you what's going to happen if you play your stupid little games again. It's called a 'conditional statement'. In other words, if you cause the conditions, I'm going to make the statement, and you are definately going to hear it.

> If you are claiming that I have forged >emails, stalked people and/or have done other illegal "stunts" then go ahead

This is just between you and me, Phil, not the newsgroup. You know I have the proof. If you want to discuss this via email that's fine with me. But it seems you would rather state your case to the newsgroup, and that's fine with me, too.

> Why do
>you always threaten legal action against anyone who does not agree with you?

There have been MANY, MANY people here that didn't agree with me. But none of them resorted to your level of harassment, stalking, and email forgery.

>This is you modus operandi if you cannot twist the truth around as you have >already tried to do through your false accusations. Anyone can see this >they do a search on Google. You are a joke Frank.

Then you go ahead and laugh all you want, Phil. In the meantime I'll be printing out your emails.

I thought you said you had six radios? And 10 kHz doesn't seem right, is 27.910 supposed to be 27.920? Anyway, even 20 kHz is a little tight for homebrew filters. If you used two antennas with 5 radios on each antenna you could put more space between channels -- i.e, antenna 1 would have 27.680, 27.820, 27.880, etc. while antenna 2 has 27.720, 27.860, 27.900, etc. Each filter would have two passes and two traps (one for each adjacent channel) so figure four caps for each radio.

It would take a lot of time with both construction and tuning, but it can be done.

Hello Scott:

I have a I-10K made for the 2 meter and Murs Bands. I have found that the input parallel tuning inductor is not needed. This antenna is a Prototype and just haven't had the time to work out all the issues. But the 6 meter Interceptor 10K does use the input parallel inductor, and works great, especially mounted about a 5 or 6 element beam, of course mounted horizontally.
So why the 2M/Murs antenna doesn't need the input parallel inductor is a mystery to me. I also noted that other VHF Antennas do not use this impedance matching parallel inductor either.

I have made a simply dipole antenna made from 6 inch diameter coffee cans, because the coffee have a large diameter as compared to say wire, seems to have a lot more bandwidth. The coffee cans are soldered together, for a length of 17 inches, for each half, so some cutting will have to be done. The cans are feed in the center of course, and mounted on a wood dowel, and the coax is routed off at a right angle from the cans. This seems to work quit well, I have made a few of these antennas, for the guys on the LA Zoo repeater, so that they can use the MURs frequencies, and the 2 meter frequencies off the same antenna. I guess theres quit a MURs group in Los Angles, but I can't hear em.

Thanks, Brian. Folks may not be aware but I have heard stories of some hams that do not want to communicate with M3s. Just some more unfortunate snobbery. Heck, things changed so much in the USA that I had a mess of figuring out what is a valid call (what with A and N prefixes added plus the changes of many prefixes of various islands - Guam comes to mind).

the M3 licence was designed to bring NEW-BLOOD into the hobby.
It was intended to bring new people in because the hobby is said to be dying !!!

since when is 20-year-old blood NEW ?

Some!

Equally, some are new license holders. Why tar all with the same brush?

You cannot blame the M3's for what you see as an undermining of your hard earned privileges. They are taking the options open to them. You have to look at how the FL scheme was implemented in the first place. Whilst the idea was sound, elements of the execution have left a lot to be desired - hopefully these problems will be addressed as the scheme matures.

I'm not quite as paranoid as Walt, but some of his ideas regarding hidden agenda have the eerie ring of truth about them.

This post shows how much of a liar you are. I was never contacted by my ISP for any reason let alone because of a supposed complaint by a retard like you. If you have the proof then post it. The reason why you don't post it is because you are a liar. I have never forged emails and you have never contacted my ISP. You have nothing to contact them about.

The only reason that I have responded to you on the newsgroup is because you have made false accusations (read lies) against me publicly to this newsgroup. Comprendes amigo?

Doug is a poor example of a human being, and an even poorer example of a ham. He's the real traitor to ham radio. Sad, but true.

LOL... I bet Frank's good buddy ends up in France or Germany. Is that why Frank was so upset? His boyfriend has left him?

TWISTEDHED MUST BE TOPPLED

(Washington) - Twistedhed can never be trusted to disarm himself of keyclown equipment because his past lies make it impossible to believe him no matter what he now destroys or surrenders to FCC inspectors, the White House said yesterday.

And if the United States goes to war to rid Twistedhed of his illegal gear, that conflict must end in Twistedhed's removal from the newsgroup, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

"Here's the Catch-22 that Twistedhed has put himself in," Fleischer said. "He denied he had illegal keyclown gear, and then he destroys things he says he never had. If he lies about never having them, how can you trust him when he says he's destroyed them? How do you know he's not lying, he doesn't have tons more buried under the sandpile somewhere else?"

He said the US vision for "regime change" in rec.radio.cb could be met by a "full, complete and immediate" removal of Twistedhed from the newsgroup. "Rec.radio.cb without Twistedhed will be a better place, free from he strife and flames brought on by Twistedhed".

Ok. I want to monitor 4 or 6 channels out of the possible 10. I may be actually transmitting on one but whilst this is happening, I might be listening on another (3 or 5). Yeah not everyones cup of cafine but I like to be different. You should see some of my software.

The other 3 or 5 as well as a few other bits and pieces also get feed into a recording system....

As for the commercial hf with scanning. Wont do what I want. If all else fails I will simplt erect 6 arials....

Thanks for the input......

Yeah 10 listed but not interested in all of them. I checked the book again and the 910 is listed but I tend to agree. It is a bit weird. It is a bit of a challenged for me. I like doing the odd things. I have 4 of the radios here waiting.
